WAS TEAM BOUGHT

One of the Fire Horses Died and There is Trouble Over Payment

COMMITTEE WILL ACT TONIGHT

If the Team Was Obtained on Approval, There Will be no Settlement With Fiss, Doer & Carroll.

The question of securing a suitable team of horses for the Netherwood fire house has been further complicated by the death of one of the team purchased of Fiss, Doer & Carroll, New York, by Councilman Herbert Buxton. The horse which had been very ill since coming to Plainfield more than a week ago, died yesterday afternoon. Dr. E. R. Voorhees, the veterinary, had been taking care of the horse and did all that was possible, but he said yesterday that he formed the opinion when he first saw the animal that it would not live. The mate to the dead horse seems to be all right.

Soon after the condition of the sick horse became known, Councilman Duncan W. Taylor, chairman of the fire committee, gave instructions to have the team returned to Fiss, Doer & Carroll, but it was then found impossible to carry out the order owing to the illness of one of the team. The New York concern was notified, and by many this relieves the city of any further obligations, as it was understood that the team was here on trial.

Other people believe, however, that the city is liable and will be expected to pay for the team. It was reported last night that Fiss, Doer & Carroll sent a bill for the team to Plainfield, the price being $650.

Mayor G. W. V. Moy, when questioned about the matter last night, said that he had no knowledge that Councilman Buxton had been authorized to purchase a team and he would refuse to sign a warant for payment unless it was shown that Mr. Buxton had such authority. Mr. Buxton is expected home tonight from a business trip and a meeting of the councilmanic fire committee will be held to learn the exact facts in the case.

Councilman W. W. Wilson purchased a team of horses for the Netherwood fire house, this week, being instructed to do so by Chairman Taylor, of the fire committee. Delivery was expected on Wednesday, but the illness and death of one of the other teams, has interferred with the plans.

BOROUGH TO FILL IN DUER STREET PROPERTY.

The borough street department has plans underway for a permanent improvement to the east walk on Duer street from Green brook to Craig place. It has been in a dangerous condition for some time owing to the rotting away of logs forming an under support and wall on the east side. There is a drop of nearly ten feet in parts to the property adjoining and the walk has been falling into it.

Street Commissioner Barrett has secured the consent of the owner of the premises and will fill in the entire lot flush with the street. A sufficient quantity of gravel has been assured from several local excavations and the work will commence at once. It will be a great improvement and will remove the possibility of accidents.

TO GIVE A BANQUET IN JEFFERY'S HONOR.

Last night at the meeting of the People's Circle, of Berkeley Heights, William Jeffery, president of the society, was complimented on his effective work for the association and will be tendered a banquet to be held in this city on Saturday night, April 22.

The next meeting of the association will be held on April 27, at which time a prominent speaker will address the association on the needs of the Anti-Tuberculosis Society.

Several important sales of real estate have been consummated in Berkeley Heights within the past two weeks.

Bad Boys Fined.

Three youths, Morris Leslie, white, and Frank Brown and Albert Rogers, colored, were fined by City Judge William G. DeMeza this morning for fighting in the street at the west end. It was alleged that all three had beaten and kicked Mrs. Lena Klein and her sick husband, Samuel, and their two sons. Leslie was fined $5 and the other two $8 each.

Another Grass Fire.

The borough fire department was called out on a still alarm at 11:15 this morning for a grass fire on Sycamore avenue near the brook. It was extinguished before any damage had resulted.

BUZZARDS' NOVEL BIRTHDAY PARTY

One of the most enjoyable and successful banquets ever tendered to the Buzzards' Club was given at Deegan's Inn, Scotch Plains, last night. The affair was given in honor of the birthdays of six members of the club. Supper was served at 9 o'clock.

The tables and banquet hall were tastefully decorated with red and green, colors of the club. Carnations were also strewn about the table.

During the festivities each member present, numbering twenty-five, responded to a toast. William Deegan also had something to say relative to his past career as a baseball player. His remarks were interspersed with bits of humor causing numerous outbursts of laughter. The banquet came to a close at 12 o'clock.

FIGHTING ON TRAIN; COMBATANTS FINED $30

For being drunk and disorderly on a train last midnight, Edward Britton and William Mercier, both young men, were fined by Judge De Meza in the city court this morning. Britton because of a bad record was fined $20 and Mercier had to pay $10.

The complaint was made by Conductor Harry Dowdell, of the Central Railroad, who declared that the two young men caused a disturbance on his train while running between Garwood and Westfield. He tried to have the men arrested at Fanwood, but could not find an officer. Patrolman George K. Dobson was summoned when the train reached the Netherwood station and after making a regular football rush through the coach Dobson got the two men who were fined.

WIFE IS SCORED IN DIVORCE PROCEEDINGS

The result of the proceedings brought by Mrs. Ruth Leveridge, to have set aside and reopen a decree nisi in divorce proceedings brought against her by her former husband, Rowland H. Leveridge, of this city, shows that the former Mrs. Leveridge's grounds for action were not sound and the motion has been dismissed. Judge W. A. Coddington and W. H. Apgar appeared for the defendant.

Vice-Chancellor Howell's conclusions are said to be the most sweeping denunciation ever pronounced by him. He says without hesitation that the allegations of the former wife of Mr. Leveridge are untrue and that instead of fraud being practiced upon the wife it was a matter of fraud by the wife against the husband.

The original action was brought for absolute divorce on the charge of desertion, the suit being brought in December, 1908. Mrs. Leveridge was served notice by publication and the time for her answer having expired on April 5, 1909, the decree was entered as noted above.

The motion to reopen the case on the allegation that she had not known of the intended action of her husband was denied by the vice-chancellor as noted above and there is now no question that Mr. Leveridge received his decree in an absolutely legal manner. There is no question in the mind of the vice-chancellor that Mr. Leveridge acted in good faith and that the two most important witnesses in the case, Charles B. Donley and Mrs. Florence Sears, were absolutely reliable.

"Ibsen and His Message."

Madam Bell-Ranske, a Scandinavian lecturer, will lecture on "Ibsen and His Message," before the Monday Afternoon Club, on Monday at the Hartridge Auditorium. This will be the last lecture of the season. As a fellow-country-woman and personal friend of the late Hendrik Ibsen, the lecturer can uphold with peculiar authority her belief that in Ibsen the country had not only an iconoclast, but also a constructive philosopher.

Released on Bail.

Alpheus Miller, the alleged check operator, was released this morning by Judge DeMeza on bonds for $300 signed by William H. Grobes, of the West End. Miller is accused of having passed two worthless checks upon merchants of this city. He is employed as butler in a prominent family.

Under the auspices of Franklin, Somerset, Benevolent and Plainfield Councils, Jr. O. U. A. M., a successful euchre and dance was held in Sebring's Hall, last night. It was the first affair of this kind held by the councils and it is probable that others of a similar character will be arranged. There were about three hundred members and friends of the Juniors present and of that number about seventy engaged in the euchre.

The play was spirited throughout and many close scores were the result. The prize-winners for the women and the prizes were as follows: First, Miss May VanFleet, cut-glass pickle dish; second, Miss Florence Swan, olive dish; third, Mrs. E. M. Siegrist, box of handkerchiefs. The prize-winners for the men were: First, E. P. Sherer, umbrella; second, A. B. Logan, bill folder; third, John Ennis, silver-mounted hat brush.

I. N. Wyckoff was chairman of the general committee; A. H. Peck, treasurer and G. E. Thomas, secretary. The committeemen from the different councils were as follows:

After the play, dancing was continued until a late hour, music being furnished by Charles Suhr's orchestra. During an intermission refreshments were served under the direction of the general committee.

NONPAREIL CLUB PLANS ENTERTAINMENT AND DANCE.

The Nonpareil Club, the well-known social organization, has arranged to give an entertainment and dance in Saengerbund Hall on Thursday, April 27. Rehearsals are now underway for the former, in charge of a competent coach and a pleasing affair it anticipated.

The entertainment will consist of a three-act comedy by Eleanor Maude Crane. The cast of characters is as follows; "Guy Richards," John Murray; "Charles Brewster," William Willis; "Roy Vincent," John Stewart; "Dr. Imhoff" Robert Stevens; "Lillian Stewart," Irene Robinson; "Katherine Howard, Beatrice Chadman; "Elizabeth Everett," and "Alice Marshall," Miss Alice Eve; "Aunt Selina Winthrop," Mrs. J. C. Anderson.

Auto Runs Amuck.

An automobile ran into an embankment thrown up by the Water Company at the corner of Leland and South avenues, last night. The accident was caused by the hiding of the warning lamps by the immense collar of the overcoat worn by the driver of the machine. No blame is attached to the Water Company's employees as the excavation was amply guarded with warning lights. The number on the car was 5303 N. J. It was towed to the Laing garage with the steering gear and running board broken and other minor damages.

Mrs. Rowland Smith Entertains.

Mrs Rowland Smith, of Park avenue, entertained the members of Washington Camp, P. O. S. of A., at her home last night. Games, piano and vocal selections were enjoyed, after which refreshments were served.

Surprised Miss Bonwell.

Miss Emma Bonwell, of Madison avenue, was given a surprise party by a company of twenty friends, on Thursday evening. Games and dancing were enjoyed until a late hour, when refreshments were served.

COAL DEALERS AFTER DELINQUENT DEBTORS

That the Coal Dealers' Credit Association is not dead is evidenced by the action they have taken recently to protect themselves against delinquent debtors. It was rumored yesterday that an increase of twenty-five cents per ton for coal for household use would go into effect today and in an interview the president of the association confirmed the rumor this morning.

It was also learned that customers who are six months in arrears in their coal bills will not be given further credit by the members of the association. The membership is made up of the retail coal dealers of the city.

BISHOP TO CONFIRM CLASS AT HOLY CROSS

The Right Rev. John Scarborough, Bishop of the Diocese of New Jersey, will confirm a class of twenty-two at the 11 o'clock morning service at the Holy Cross church tomorrow. The prelate will preach and be the celebrant at the holy communion service which will follow the confirmation. The class presented by the rector, Rev. G. A. Warner, has been instructed for several weeks. It is the largest class to be presented during the incumbency of the present rector and for that matter, for fifteen years past. Twelve of the candidates are young men and boys, eight are young women and two adult women.

A program of music appropriate to the occasion will be rendered by the choir and a solo by Chester Chamberlin, the boy soloist, will be sung. At the evening service at 7:45, Rev. Dr. Otis Glazebrook, of St. John's church, Elizabeth, will preach

Charles W. McCutchen will preside at this meeting and besides Miss Booth, Mayor Moy will deliver an address of welcome on behalf of the city.

In the evening at 7:45 o'clock, Miss Booth will address the congregation at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, while the staff band and Colonel Peart, the Army's chief secretary, will address and play before the congregation at the Park Avenue Baptist church. At the First Methodist church Field Secretary Colonel Damon will be the speaker in the evening.

Box Alarm for Grass Fire.

An alarm was turned in at 10:30 this morning for a grass fire at Woodland and Evergreen avenues. The fierce wind was driving the flames toward buildings and the residents feared serious consequence. The firemen made short work of the flames. The men from No. 4 house put out a chimney fire at 1239 South avenue at 9:30 last night.

Heard Dr. Reid.

Rev. Gilbert Reid, who lectured locally several times, addressed the members of the Park Club and their friends last night, on the siege of Pekin. His previous experience formed a most interesting talk that was thoroughly enjoyed by his auditors.

MAY HAVE CROOK

One of Suspicious Pair Caught at North Avenue Station Held for Grand Jury.

PATROLMAN NOLAN'S FIND.

Accused of acting suspiciously in the North Avenue Station of the Central Railroad at 11:30 o'clock, last night and carrying concealed weapons, a youth who gave his name as Joseph Henigman and another claiming to be Andrew Sincher, both of New York, were arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning. Henigman was held to await the action of the grand jury and Sincher was told to leave town at once.

Tobias Nolan made the arrest after having had the two young men under suveillance for two hours before making the arrest. He knew that the receipts at the station were heavy during the day and that a large sum of money would be on hand which had been received by the agent, Mr. Stein, after banking hours and this made him especially cautions about strangers.

Just after 11:30 Nolan approached the two strangers who were eyeing the agent as he was preparing to close up for the night and asked them why they were loitering about the station. Henigman replied that they had come to Plainfield to visit Sincher's aunt. "What's your aunt's name?" asked Nolan.

"I don't know her name, but she lives at 88 Manning avenue," responded Sincher.

"How is it you don't know her name?" asked the officer.

"I did know it, but I've forgotten it," said the boy.

"Well, I guess, you fellows better come over to headquarters with me," said Nolan and they went.

At headquarters the men were searched and from Henigman there was taken a fully loaded 38 caliber revolver and some keys. Attached to the bunch of keys was a metal tag bearing the number 20,506 and the imprint of the Imperial Registry Company, 11 Broadway, New York. When questioned as to this Henigman said it was his. He also claimed to be a fireman employed on the New York Central Railroad. He had a pass made out in the name of Joseph Henigman, by the Master Mechanic of the railroad, but it is believed that the pass as well as the coat the prisoner wore were stolen.

Chief Kiely believes he has in Henigman the thief who broke into the D. L. & W. station at Sterling yesterday and has notified the Sterling authorities to come to this city and look the prisoner over before he is taken to Elizabeth.

In order to test the man's knowledge of railroad matters he was put through a cross questioning by a Central Railroad detective. The answers showed plainly that he was ignorant of the first essentials of railroad work. His description answers perfectly that sent out from Sterling yesterday. He gave his address as 836 First avenue, New York and today his parents will be looked up and the truth of the man's statement tested.

YOUNG WOMEN'S C. A. GUESTS OF MRS. STEWART.

On the invitation of Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, representing a committee of women from the Young Women's Christian Association, more than fifty girls from the North Plainfield High School, were entertained at Mrs. Stewart's home on West Eighth street, yesterday afternoon, the purpose being to form a school girls' club of the Y. W. C. A. This work will extend to the girls of the Plainfield High School as well as the Grammar schools and meetings will be held frequently for social and other purposes.

The girls chose as their colors, rose and white; also a motto, the three principal words of which will be unity, loyalty and hospitality. The exact wording of the motto will be announced later. Some of the girls brought their thimbles and during the afternoon did fancy work. Another feature was readings by Mrs. Robert Lowry, which delighted the gathering. There were also social features and refreshments were served.

The women, comprising the committee from the Y. W. C. A., who has charge of this work, and who were present were Mrs. C. B. Tyler, Miss Margaret McCutchen, Miss Margaret Goddard, Miss Eva Terry, Mrs. Harry McGee, Mrs. Percy H. Stewart and Miss Amy Tapping, secretary of the Y. W. C. A. Of course, the chief object is to get the girls into the Y. W. C. A., and it was found yesterday that many were already identified with the association.

MOY NAMES BERGEN CORPORATION COUNSEL

When the Common Council meets on Monday night it will receive a communication from Mayor Moy stating that he has appointed Frank Bergen as corporation counsel and asking that his name be confirmed for that office. The selection is considered singular inasmuch as the city is now engaged in a controversy over the water problem and Mr. Bergen is not only president of the water company but is its counsel. For this reason it is expected that Mr. Moy will be severely criticized and justly so.

Mr. Bergen is a corporation lawyer and is known as a business associate and a close personal friend of United States Senator John Kean. The political ideals personified by Senator Kean have always met with the bitter opposition of the Mayor and because of that, few people will be able to understand just why his honor has made such an objectionable appointment. By the way, this is April 1, commonly called April Fool's day.

ETHEL BARRYMORE IN 2 PLAYS TONIGHT

Ethel Barrymore will be seen at the Plainfield theatre tonight when Charles Frohman will present her in two of James Matthew Barrie's plays "Alice Sit by the Fire" and "The Twelve Pound Look." The advance demand for seats furnishes cogent and solid proof of the great popularity of the actress and she is certain to be greeted by a large and brilliant audience. Contrary to the usual formula when a double bill is given the shortest play, "The Twelve Pound Look," will be presented last. Those who look forward to a dramatic treat in this work will not be disappointed. It is the latest play from the Barrie pen and acknowledged to be his greatest. As the curtain will rise promptly at 8 o'clock, patrons are especially requested to be seated before that time.

DEPARTED'S BROTHER CELEBRATES A MASS

In the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends, the funeral of Patrick Casey was held in St. Mary's church, this morning. A solemn high mass was said by Rev. Father James Casey, of Baltimore, a brother of the departed, with Rev. Father Hogan as deacon and Rev. Father Sciolla as sub-deacon. Rev. Father Bogan was master of ceremonies.

An enlarged choir sang several numbers during the mass and individual solos were given by Miss Mary Lannon and Albert J. Matthiews. The sermon as given by Father Bogan was in keeping with Mr. Casey's personality and unassuming life.

The attendants numbered sixty members of Division No. 4, A. O. H., who were present in a body, and a delegation from Miantonomo tribe of Red Men to both of which Mr. Casey belonged. Both organizations sent large floral pieces as did also Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, all the undertakers in the city and borough and many from nearby towns. The casket was almost hidden by banks of flowers giving mute evidence of the esteem in which Mr. Casey was held.

The body was taken to New York on the 11 o'clock train for burial in Calvary cemetery. It was accompanied to the grave-side by a large number of friends. The pall bearers were selected from the A. O. H. and Red Men organizations and were as follows: Thomas Farrell, Francis Connolly and Michael Reagan, A. O. H., and John Hurley, Patrick McAfee and Peter Sheridan, Red Men.

Noted Preacher at Grace.

Rev. Karl Reiland, who succeeded Rev. James E. Freeman, as rector of St. Andrews' P. E. church, Yonkers, N. Y., and former assistant to Rev. Dr. Huntington, at Grace church, New York city, and conceded to be one of the most eloquent preachers in the Episcopal church of New York State, will preach at both services tomorrow at Grace Episcopal church. In the morning at 11 o'clock and in the afternoon at 4:30.

Foresters are Growing.

Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order Foresters, enjoyed a smoker, last night during which High Chief Ranger Arthur C. Wenzel, of Newark, addressed the members. His remarks that the order is increasing steadily in membership and surplus funds was received with applause.

LAWYERS PROTEST

SO INFORM ASSEMBLYMAN

Mayor Arthur A. Stein, Robert H. McAdams and William A. Coddington Tell Why the Office is Necessary.

Without regard to party affiliations, lawyers of the county are bombarding Union's three assemblymen, Brodhead, Thompson and McLaughlin, with protests against the passage of House bill No. 521, which provides for the abolition of the office of register in Union and Camden counties. The position is taken by the barristers that serious harm would be done their clients should a return be made to the antiquated system of having the county clerk attend to the matters now entrusted to the register of deeds.

Speaking in his private capacity as a lawyer, Robert H. McAdams, chairman of the Democratic city committee of Elizabeth in the recent campaign, voiced the general sentiment today when he gave his disapproval of the measure. His view was shared by A. A. Stein, Elizabeth's Democratic mayor, and former Judge William A. Coddington, a prominent lawyer and a prominent Democrat here.

"I find no sentiment among the lawyers in Elizabeth which would warrant the passage of this bill to do away with the register's office. As a matter of fact, I must admit that there is a general feeling here in Elizabeth that it should be retained. The office and its administration has proven very satisfactory. One can not overestimate its value to the public for it is a splendid vehicle for expediting business. As I am informed a large majority of the lawyers have signified to our assemblymen that the best interests of the people demand that the office be retained."

When Judge W. A. Coddington was asked for his opinion he said: "I cannot understand why anyone having any knowledge of Union county's administration of affairs should want to abolish the office. I have no criticism of Mr. Brodhead for I believe he is trying to do his duty as he sees it but I do believe that he has not made a thorough investigation of the matter. We never had so fine a system as we have right at this time when the duties of the county clerk and the register of deeds are kept separate and distinct. It would be an injustice to have the old system restored. The work is satisfactorily done by the present register, Mr. Smith, and I think you will find that this is the consensus of opinion among all the lawyers and others who have business in his office. He is doing his work excellently and I do hope that the Legislature will do nothing that will work a hardship on the lawyers."

Mayor A. A. Stein said today:

"I have already written to the members of the Legislature my views on this subject but as you want them I will tell you what I said. The office of county clerk and of register of deeds ought to be kept distinct. It is most important that a proper method be pursued in recording such papers as deeds, mortgages and the like. The volume of business has grown enormously in Union county since the days when the county clerk attended to these matters. Then we got nowhere near the service that we receive today and I do not see how the county clerk could handle the business today. Certainly he would have to hire a high salaried assistant to take charge of the work and there would, consequently be no great saving if any at all. Then you must remember that an assistant does not take on his shoulders the same responsibility that a man primarily entrusted to a certain duty, so we wouldn't find either the service or the saving by merging the office.

"I don't care what any other county may do. The fact remains that where a county has abolished the office the cause has been not for better service or for a saving to the taxpayers. It has been due solely to an internal warfare in the Republican party in that county. Politics should not cut any figure in the administration of such affairs. They are too important to be mixed up with political warfare. So I say that I, for one sincerely hope that House bill, No. 521, will not be approved.

When Well Known Plainfield People Tell It So Plainly.

When public endorsement is made by a representative citizen of Plainfield the proof is positive. You must believe it. Read this testimony. Every backache sufferer, every man, woman or child with any kidney trouble will find profit in the reading.

A. C. Lazzi, 44 Elm place, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I still endorse Doan's Kidney Pills at every opportunitly and I confirm all I have said in their praise when I publicly recommended the msome years ago. You are at liberty to continue using my statement, for this excellent medicine cannot be given too much praise. For several years I was annoyed by a distressing backache, together with pains through my kidneys. My head also ached severely and the kidney secretions were in bad shape. I went to several physicians and also took so-called kidney cures, but it did not seem as though I could get relief. As time passed and I did not improve, I became discouraged. When suffering intensely I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and I got a supply at Randolph's Drug Store. As if by magic my pains and aches disappeared and my condition improved in every way. Doan's Kidney Pills deserve the entire credit for restoring me to good health."

STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Charles Ledden, son of Elijah Ledden, a prosperous farmer near Glassboro, died after a few hours' illness Thursday.

The name of Mayor McCowan, of Pitman, is being prominently mentioned as a possible candidate for sheriff of Gloucester county.

A large pen of Hungarian pheasants, which were sent to Millville by the State Fish and Game Commission, were liberated Wednesday.

Game Warden Avis, of Gloucester county, liberated 108 fine ring-necked pheasants yesterday morning.

Judge Starr, of Woodbury, has selected sixty names as the "struck" jury for the retrial of the Davis-Price case next month. The grand jury was recalled yesterday to act on some evidence classed as perjury.

Union Fire Company of Mt. Holly celebrated its 106th anniversary Thursday night, with a banquet and dance at its headquarters. Addresses were made by Joshua Matlack and Benjamin P. Willis. About 100 members and their frineds were present.

The political fight at Clayton is already warming up. H. R. Nichols, who served nine consecutive years as Mayor, and who was beaten two years ago by only eleven votes, will be the Democratic candidate for Mayor again, while J. Preston Potter will probably be the Republican candidate.

Found by Detective Carroll hiding in the cellar of his home at Gloucester, after being a fugitive from justice for nearly a year, Joseph Christine was committed to the Camden County Jail in default of bail on a charge of assault and battery on H. W. Irwin, chief of police, at the New York Shipbuilding Company's plant.

Announcement was made Thursday by District Circuit Judge Frank Smathers that he had selected Daniel H. V. Bell as clerk of the court, to succeed Joseph Barlett, and Harry Lovett as sergeant-at-arms to succeed Walter Hardcastle. There was practically no opposition on the part of local Democrats to the appointment of Mr. Bell, but strong pressure was brought to bear upon Judge Smathers to appoint another than Mr. Lovett.

Mrs. Joseph Mower, of Quinton, has just received word that her son, Frederick Thompson, fell from a building in Pittsburg, and was instantly killed. By a strange coincidence, her sister, Mrs. Mary Thompson, experienced a similar affliction a few months ago, when her son fell from a buliding and was killed instantly. In both instances the victims of the accidents left a widow and four children.

Since the hearing before the Woodbury Legislative Committee last Monday, relative to the $75,000 bond issue for the enlargement of the water mains of the city, a strong sentiment has sprung up to have a referendum clause inserted in the bill, by many residents. There are others who do not want to see the bill go through at all. It is claimed that it is only a question of a short time when the source of Woodbury's water supply will be condemned by the State authorities; then it would be necessary to erect a new plant. In any case, it is urged that with the desired clause in the bill the people would have the right to say whether the move for bonding shall take place.

WASTED $1,000,000 IN COURT HQUSE.

Jersey City, April 1. — District Court Judge Carrick, chairman of the citizen's committee that is investigating the cost of the new Hudson County Court House, was in conference for three hours yesterday with John J. Mulvaney, counsel for the Building Commission. Neither would say what took place, but it is understood Mr. Mulvaney gave Judge Carrick much information concerning the methods of the Building Commission. Sessions of the investigation committee will be resumed before Supreme Court Justice Swayze Monday and will continue daily until the evidence is exhausted.

Among the witnesses under subpoena are the presidents of the several banking institutions. They will be asked to produce all records of any financial transactions with the Building Commission and also any private accounts of the members of the commission that may exist. Members of the investigation committee express the opinion that at least $1,000,000 has been wasted in the construction of the Court House.

Don't Like "To Let" Signs.

A committee comprising C. H. Darsh, C. H. Appley and F. S. Taggart, has been appointed by the Westfield Board of Trade to confer with the real estate brokers of the town and endeavor, if possible, to get the brokers to discontinue the use of "For Sale" and "To Let" signs upon houses. The Board of Trade claims that so many signs upon property tend to cheapen the town. One house in the vicinity of the railroad station, at present contains the signs of five real estate dealers. Most of the real estate brokers favor the plan.

FIGHT TAX REDUCTIONS.

City of Rahway Appeals to the State Board.

The city of Rahway, dissatisfied with several of the reductions made on Rahway properties by the county board for the equalization of taxes at the behest of the parties assessed, has filed several appeals with the State Board of Taxation.

Among these is one against the reduction of the assessment on fifty acres of land owned by the Litz, Butscher, Ross Realty Company. The assessment was $72,825, and this was reduced by the county board to $40,054. A reduction was made on the holdings of the Twin State Realty Company, where the figures were reduced from $25,700 to $12,600. The assessment of the Richard Hamilton was reduced from $14,150 to $7,250. The Middlesex Water Company's assessment was reduced also several thousand dollars. The assessment on property held by Evelina Bracher and John Hudson, executors, was reduced from $61,175 to $30,000.

The Westfield Board of Trade has decided to investigate the plans of the Board of Education to face the new Second Ward School on Stanley Oval. Residents of East Broad street, where the school is to be built, claim that Broad street is the main approach to the new school, and as such the school should face that thoroughfare. The trustees have planned to place the rear wall of the school, which does not contain any windows or doors, on Broad street. The citizens and property owners in the neighborhood object seriously to a blank wall facing the principal street.

BASEBALL.

Johnny Evers, second baseman for the Chicago Nationals, has sold his Chicago shoe store and has decided to devote all his time in the future to aiding his team to win championships.

"No player can put up the article of ball that he is capable of when he has business on his mind," said Evers yesterday in explaining the reason for his unexpected move.

George Stone, one time champion swatsmith of the American League, who since 1905 has been a star on the St. Louis Americans, will soon pass down into the minors, having been supplanted by Gus Williams. Waivers have been secured on Stone from every club in Ban Johnson's organization.

Manager Frank Chance has called to account every member of the Cubs who is staying out late at night. Chance spent a great part of Tuesday night in the hotel lobby at Nashville waiting for two athletes to return. The affair cost one of the athletes $600 and it may cost the other a job.

Charles Weegham, a well known Chicago man, is willing to pay $350,000 for the St. Louis National League stock. It is expected that the deal will be completed some time today.

Duke Farrell's team of New York Highlander Colts defeated the Augusta South Atlantic League team Thursday afternoon at Augusta, Ga., by a score of 12 to 7. Both teams walloped the leather hard, but Farrell's proteges bunched their hits with the miscues of the Augustana.

Jimmy Walsh, a former "Athletic" and now being tried out for left field position by Manager Dunn, of the Orioles, is playing good ball. In the game against the Phillies at Baltimore, Thursday, he drove the ball over the left field fence for a home run. It was the first home run drive of the season at the new Oriole park.

The first game of the intercity series between the Phillies and the Athletics will be played today at Philadelphia. Four times the Athletics have won the series and three times the Phillies were successful. A tie resulted in one of the years.

The Chattanooga team, managed by Billy Smith, who was manager of the Buffalo Eastern League team last season, defeated the New York Yankees Thursday at Chattanooga, Tenn., by a score of 2 to 1. The weather was cold and the Yankees did not care to take any chances and refused to exert themselves.

Josh Devore, of the Giants, continues to pound the ball for keeps. He was at the bat five times Thursday in the game at Atlanta and was credited with three hits. Larry Doyle poled out a home run and a three-bagger during the game.

President Charles Webb Murphy, of the Cubs, started down into the rathskeller of a New Orleans hotel the other night, and one of the players watching the "Chubby One" disappear, remarked, "Six weeks more of winter."

The Cleveland first team bunched four hits in the fourth and three in the sixth inning of Thursday's game at New Orleans, scoring enough to down the New Orleans team, by a score of 5 to 1. Lajoie, as usual, was the leading hitsmith of the game.

Jimmy Jones, will report to the Montreal Royals at Newport News, Va., but he has no chance of getting a place with the team. Manager Eddie McCafferty has booked him for a berth with a New York State League team.

GOLF.

With the election of officers for the ensuing year the Brooklyn-Forest Park Golf Club is ready for the most active season in its history. After serving at the head since the amalgamation of the old Brooklyn and Forest Park club, J. H. Nichol refused to remain any longer as president, therefore William Cameron was elected in his stead. Dr. G. P. Manville was named vice-president; G. A. Perry, secretary; James W. Kent, treasurer, and F. W. Farnham, financial secretary.

The chairman of the various committees also have been appointed, as follows: House, J. F. Kooser; tournament, Hugh J. Donnelly; handicap, H. P. Church; green, P. J. Buechner; membership, George A. Perry; auditing, E. M. Lindgren; women's tournament, Mrs. Edward Kempel.

Increasing signs of life are manifesting themselves at the Nassau Country Club, and while the spring schedule has not been announced the intention is to start immediately on the competitive side of the game. From April 1 to Arpil 14 there will be a cup competition in which members will qualify in eighteen-hole medal play rounds. The sixteen with the best scores will then fight it out at match play for the remainder of the month for the April trophy.

Twenty-one new traps have been added to the hazards at the Country Club at Lakewood by Will Norton, under the orders of the greens committee, with the idea of stiffening the course for sliced shots on the fifth, eighth and fifteenth holes, and to make the approach shots more difficult on ten holes. This is the order of the new hazards:

Third hole—Trap ten yards before lower edge of green to right and another ten yards back of green to left.

Fifth—Trap 210 yards for a sliced tee shot and another to right of green four yards between present pit and the green.

Sixth—Trap to left and right respectively, twelve and fifteen yards before green and another five yards beyond green to right.

Eighth—Trap for sliced second shot thirty yards beyond present pit.

Fourteenth—Trap at six and five yards back of the green.

Fifteenth—Trap at 195 yards for sliced tee shot; one six yards before the left edge of green and another ten yards back of green to right.

Sixteenth—Trap eighty yards before green to right.

Ex-Speaker Cannon announced that he would not be a candidate for House minority leader at the approaching session of Congress.

England's option on Rembrandt's painting "The Mill" expired and the picture, it was announced in London, would go to an American for $500,000.

The police of Cambridge, Mass., rescued a negro who was being chased by a crowd of Harvard students after he had shot a fellow waiter at Memorial Hall.

Postmaster General Hitchcock made a drastic reorganization of the railway mail service, appointing a new superintendent and transferring many of the highest officials.

Enrico Alfano, alleged head of the Camorra, severely arraigned the Italian authorities while under examination in the murder trial of thirty-six of the band, at Viterbo, Italy.

FEDERATION IS FORMED BY ITALIAN-AMERICANS.

Declaring that "Back to the soil" must be the slogan of the Italian immigrant in order to relieve the congested conditions in the cities, Secretary of Commerce and Labor Charles Nagel, at the banquet of the Italian congress in Horticultural Hall, Philadelphia, Thursday night urged the newly organized national society to impress upon the minds of the immigrants the advantages of agricultural life. Incidentally, the banquet, which was typically Italian, marked the close of the first Italian congress held in the United States.

At the closing sessions of the congress Thursday in Horticultural Hall it was decided to form a federation of all Italian societies in the United States, to be known as the Italian-American Alliance, which will have for its purpose the betterment of the immigrants' conditions. A committee of fifty-one delegates was appointed to frame a constitution and by-laws and report at the next congress, to be held in Buffalo in 1912.

It is proposed to make the dues of the alliance nominal, assessing each member five or ten cents a year and extend the membership to all Italians in America. Among the reforms which the alliance will strive to accomplish will be the abolition of the padrone or contract labor system, which has led to extortion and abuse. An effort will be made to correct the prevalent opinion that Italians are dangerous criminals and that societies are responsible for much of the crime.

Miss Renie Carr, of this city, who has been visiting her mother at Raritan, has returned home.

AN ANNIVERSARY OF —MISSIONARY SOCIETY

The anniversary of the Women's Missionary Society of the First Baptist church was held yesterday afternoon in the lecture room, the Home Missionary Society entertaining the the other and the president, Mrs. Reuben Knox, in charge. Rev. Dr. Chambliss led the devotional exercises with which the meeting was opened. Reports of the Foreign Society were read by the secretary, Mrs. B. J. Shreve and the treasurer, Miss Ida Yerkes. Reports of the Home Society were read by the secretary, Mrs. George H. Robins and the treasurer, Mrs. Frank W. Jones. The Young Women's Society reported through the secretary, Miss Amy Conant and the treasurer, Miss Bessie Flanders. The amounts received for the year were: Foreign Society, $575; Home Society, $644.64; Young Women's Society, $209; Junior Society, $94; total $1,522.64.

A solo sung effectively by Mrs. Robert Giddes, was followed by an impressive address by Miss Lyde Jenkins, field worker for Pennsylvania, in the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society. Miss Jenkins told of some of the problems in dealing with the influx of millions to our shores whose views of the Bible were so at variance with the spirit of our country's founders. She told also of some of the perils growing out of their habits of intemperance, desecration of the Sabbath and low ideals of womanhood. She pleaded for an open Bible and co-operation with God, with whom are no problems.

The anniversary closed with a social hour when tea was served.

MINISTER'S TALK ON BOY PROBLEM

A large audience of mothers heard Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews in Y. M. C. A. Hall yesterday afternoon in the last of a series of five lectures on "Obedience." His topic was "Money and Morals or the Place of Prizes and Rewards in Securing Obedience." Mr. Mathiews said, in part:

"One approach to the problem is that of the sentimental Puritan, the rigid, cold, hard, disciplinary approach, emphasizing punishment for wrong-doing but never rewarding the child for his goodness. This approach is not logical nor is it ethical. It is contrary to logic, for, if we punish the child when he is bad, we should reward the child when he is good. A new approach, the educational one, is needed. It is based upon a law, the law of accommodation, which is that teachers must accommodate themselves to the physical, mental and moral stages of growth to which the child has attained.

"When is it best to use prizes and rewards? They are not to be regarded as an abiding thing in the training of the child, but rather as a stimulus. The sooner we can get children out of self-interest the better. Prizes and rewards are particularly effective in dealing with the sensory-minded child, the child who needs so much to express himself. He should be stimulated to play and to engage in manual training through appropriate rewards. This method is also valuable in dealing with children during the habit-forming, conscience-building period from the eighth to the twelfth year."

Visited His Former Charge.

Rev. J. Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, returned yesterday from Asbury Park, where on Thursday night he attended a supper at his former church, the Grand Avenue Reformed church, marking the opening of the new dining room, which improvement was started when Mr. Broek was pastor. The affair was a great success.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

Probably no colored singer of the present day has sung before so many of the nobility as has Madame Sissieretta Jones, aptly styled the Patti of the colored race. Under the management of R. Voeckel, her present manager, in the early nineties Madame Jones made a tour of continental Europe and in most every country she was commanded to and did appear before the reigning families who expressed unqualified pleasure and admiration of the agreeable quality, sweetness and range of her voice. This season Madame Sissieretta Jones (Black Patti), is appearing in the leading theatres of the country in a musical comedy entitled "A Trip to Africa," supported by a company of colored aritsts, who leav nothing to be desired. The Black Patti Musical Comedy Company is the attraction at the Plainfield theatre next Tuesday night.

BUGLES AND JETS.

Bugles and jets which have always been associated in our minds with elegantly gowned old ladies, are now seen ornamenting flippant evening frocks and youthful soiffures. It must be really nice for the bugles and jets to have this cheerful change of environment, and they are very effective.

Seen in decorative fringe on filmy evening frocks the bugle is lovely. Its graceful pearl-like body lends itself admirably as a decorative adjunct to the gown and the mournful charm of jet, but enhances the fairness of youthful faces when worn as pendant earrings and upon blond coiffures.

Plenty of Company.

"Yes, she went crazy over bridge."

"A sad case."

"Oh, no great harm done. They put her in a fashionable sanatorium and she's playing a better game than ever, now."

Church Distribution.

In Colorado, within seventy miles of Denver, there is a promising village of twelve hundred inhabitants, says Charles Samuel Tator in an article in Sucess Magazine, entitled "The Mad Race for Souls." In that village there are eight churches. Round about in the mountains are communities that have from thirty to ninety pupils in the public school and can muster 150 adults at an all-night dance. This population is scattered, the pupils go to school on burros and on horseback. For some reason these people have no church nor Sunday school. Bishop Anderson, of the Episcopal diocese of Chicago, says that there are forty towns in Illinois ranging from 200 to 800 in population, without any church. Yet the three examples given from Massachusetts could easily have been found in the State of Illinois. It rather looks as if some of the lean churches should be cut out of the herd and led to pastures new.

DRY CLEANING TALK
THE IMITATORS

Many little pressing tailor shops claim to do Dry Cleaning. These are the magicians. These the people who simply take in your clothes, brush out the dust, remove such spots as they can, pressing fairly well. Your clothing is then sent home and after a few days the spots reappear. You naturally condemn Dry Cleaning, when in truth your garments have only been sponged and pressed.

You should send your clothes here. We dust them properly, having the right equipment. Then we put your garments in just the right bath for their special needs, depending upon condition, texture, etc. Drying and airing after cleaning is accomplished here under the most sanitary and perfect conditions.

Send your next work to us—if you appreciate quality.

IF you have never had a bank account you cannot understand the feeling of independence and happiness that comes with the possession if one.

Sleep and Headache.

A well-dressed medical authority once said: "Sleep, if taken at the right monent, will prevent an attack of nervous headache. If the subjects of such heahaches will watch the symptoms of its coming, they can notice that it begins with a feeling of weariness or heaviness. This is the time a sleep of an hour or even two, as nature guides, will eventually prevent the headache. It not taken just then it will be too late, for, after the attack is fairly under way, it is impossible to get sleep until far into the night."

HERE AND THERE.

The government tobacco monopoly in France was established by Emperor Napoleon Bonaparte in a decree issued December 29, 1810. This decree reserved to the government a monopoly of the importation, manufacture and sale of tobacco in all its forms.

Since annexation by Japan, about 200,000 Coreans have cut off and sold their top knots, materially reducing the price of human hair in the Far Eastern markets. To evade the duty, the Coreans can cross the frontier of China before cutting their topknots.

A new species of elephant has been discovered in Africa. It is known to the natives as the water elephant, and a herd of five of them was seen on the shores of Lake Leopold II. by one of the explorers sent out by the Paris Museum of Natural History. Compared with the known elephants, they seemed much smaller, with shorter trunks, longer necks and no tusks. Before more minute examination was possible, the animals plunged into the lake. An account of this new discovery is given in La Nature.

The Turkish Government has recently asked for tenders for the installation and operation of an electric lighting concession for Jerusalem.

British exhibitors at the Argentine Exposition held in Buenos Ayres received an excellent return for their trouble, placing orders aggregating no less than $14,599,000.

It is unofficially announced that not fewer than eleven German universities and technical schools will institute lectures on aeronautics during the summer half year.

At least one pathetic history was connected with the recent sale of unredeemed articles at a municipal pawnshop in Paris. A child's drinking cup, plate, spoon, knife and fork, worth perhaps fifteen francs, were left in the pawnshop fifty-one years ago. The interest on the loan was paid regularly up to two years ago. The department then waited more than a year before selling the articles. The family which had deposited the articles had kept up the payment of interest for forty-nine years, but had apparently never got enough money together to redeem the pledge. What became of the poor people is not known.

BERNESE ALPS PIERCED AT COST OF $20,000,000.

The final obstruction to the Loetschberg tunnel through the Bernese Alps was pierced by the laborers at 3:50 o'clock yesterday morning, after five and a half years' work and the expenditure of $20,000,000.

The tunnel, which is the third longest in Europe, measures 14,500 meters, or approximately nine miles.

With the completion of the Loetschberg tunnel, which was planned to give the Simplon tunnel railway line a direct connection with the railways which traverse Switzerland from north to south, there will be a direct through route from Milan to Berne and thence to Calais and Bontagne. The distance from Milan to Calais by this route will be about 675 miles or nearly eighty miles less than the existing routes. The tunnel will be double-tracked throughout.

Boy is Missing.

John Nolle, aged 12 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nolle, of 115 Hazel avenue, Westfield, has disappeared from his parents' home. Mr. Nolle asked Chief of Police O'Neill to find the boy today and said that he had been missing since March 22. The boy is a pupil in the Washington School.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

The Winter Garden has exceeded all expectations. It has become recognized as one of the greatest amusement intsitutions of the metropolis, if not indeed the greatest of all, and the general question is why no management ever attempted such a project before. Never before has such a mass of money, artistic effort and stage managerial inventiveness been devoted to a single entertainment, and the results are gratifying in the extreme. Every seat has been taken for every performance, at the matinees as well as at the evening presentations, and even the large capacity of the auditorium has turned out to be absolutely inadequate to meet the demands of the public. It is impossible to describe in a few words an entertainment of such varied and bewildering marvels, including grand opera, light opera, ensembles, specialties, ballets. It is impossible even to give an idea of the magnitude, splendor and diversity of this collossal amusement enterprise, which must be seen to be appreciated.

A CLOCK OF ODDS AND ENDS.

A curious clock, designed and made entirely by himself, says Jas. Gibbs in the April Strand, has taken me the spare moments of about seven years to complete. In addition to showing the time of day and the seconds, as in an ordinary clock, it also shows the days of the week, days of the month, months of the year, and the phases of the moon, besides striking the hours and half-hours. The wheels were all originally of wood, but last summer I changed some of them for others made with sheet brass. The axles are all skewers, and the bearings are the eyes cut from brass hinges and let into the wooden frame. Bootmakers' brads are used in making divisions in the days of the week, etc.; the hammer it strikes with is part of a beer tap; and the pendulum cut from an old chest of drawers, swings on a steel spring obtained from a woman's corset. The dates themselves are taken from an almanac. The large hands and Roman figures are carved oak, and the minutes round the dial pieces of matches. The case is made of oak with the exception of the panels, which are walnut. I bought it in the rough plank, and worked it with the few tools I got for the purpose. I am a butler, and have been in service all my life, and know nothing of clock or cabinet making, so you can realize what an enormous amount of patience and perseverance has been required. The clock is a most perfect timekeeper, and everything is in thoroughly working order.

WILL BOOST ELIZABETH.

Francis L. Devine is Secretary of Publicity Committee.

The Elizabeth Board of Trade is to assume a more aggressive spirit in the affairs of that city. The publicity committee of the board recently elected Francis L. Devine as secretary, and he will shortly take up his duties.

Mr. Devine is well qualified for the position. He is a college man, and after graduating took up newspaper work on the Baltimore Sun and the Philadelphia North American. He also studied law at Temple University, but gave up his legal studies for publicity work with the Kensington, Philadelphia, Board of Trade. He is a Kentuckian by birth and 27 years old.

Canal Hearing Friday.

Trenton, April 1.—In pursuance of the concurrent resolution introduced by Senator Fielder, designating the Governor, the attorney-general and former Supreme Court Justice Bennet Van Syckel to confer with the Lehigh Valley Railroad relative to the abandonment of the Morris Canal, and an agreement as to the disposition to be made of the big basin in Jersey City, Governor Wilson has fixed next Friday afternoon as the time for holding the first conference. The conference will be held in the executive chamber and it is likely that the whole canal situation, including the rights of the State in the Lehigh Valley terminal, will be gone over. Probably the railroad will submit a proposition to the State's representatives, which will form the basis for future negotiations upon the subject.

For the New Arrival.

A dainty present to give the new baby is a "nursery box," containing a hand-painted set, consisting of soap and talcum powder boxes, a sachet, safety-pin holder, brush, bath thermometer, etc., all decorated in the proper color for the boy or girl. The box itself is of padded silk, with a big ribbon bow and a tiny feather stork on the lid, and may, with its silk lining, be used as the baby's traveling case when the other things go into the baby basket. It is a pretty gift, and will be much appreciated by mother and baby both.

Miss French to Marry.

Miss Annabel French, daughter of Mrs. J. M. French, of Clark street, Westfield, will become the bride of Oliver W. Hall on the evening of April 18. The wedding will take place at the home of the bride's mother at 8 o'clock. The event promises to be an elaborate one in local society. Both young people are graduates of the Westfield High School.

The Man's Mistake.

Out of loyalty to his own sex the manager of the woman's suit department discharged his young woman stenographer and hired a man. The first batch of letters dictated to the man were written to about a hundred old customers, whom he invited to examine privately a lot of exclusive garments before they were placed on sale. The day after the letters were mailed the women flocked into the store, but the fire that burned in their eyes was the fire of the avenger rather than of the bargain hunter. One word which each woman had underlined in her letter explained their wrath. The garments, so the manager had meant to say, had been designed for women of stock figure, such as they possessed, but the male stenographer had drawn on the alphabet and had written it "stocky."

"No woman on earth would have been guilty of such a mistake," growled the manager.

The next week the girl stenographer had her job back.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Great Men Tall and Short.

A recent investigator has attempted to show that Lombroso and his followers were wrong in asserting that men of genius were of small stature. Of 230 individuals of eminence he found that figures were obtainable for 103; of these sixteen were of middle height, fifty-eight above and twenty-nine below.

Americans particularly combined greatness with inches. Jefferson and Jackson were more than six feet tall. Sumner was six feet four inches, and Washington, Lincoln and Beecher were more than six feet. Among famous foreigners Tolstoy was a large man, and so were Thackeray, Bismarck and Darwin.

On the contrary, many of the world's greatest geniuses were undersized and even deformed. Napoleon, Poe, Pope, Alexander the Great, Nelson, Blake and Caesar were small men.

After all is said, genius is no respecter of rules.—New York American.

Doing Chores.

There is no time in the year when there is cessation from toil on a farm. It is different in winter; that is all. The days are shorter, the work rougher. Of course much depends upon the character of the farm. Considerable leisure is possible where few cattle are kept and general trucking done. But always there are the "chores." A remarkably elastic expression that—"doing chores." It may mean much or little. Some dairy farmers, for instance, whose serious business in life is milking cows, may potter around the farm after the morning's milking and, taking the morning's milk to the creamery or railroad station, eat their noon dinners, mend some fence, look over the harness or haul out manure, potter around some more and then say, "Guess it's about time to do the chores," meaning to milk two dozen cows or so—the real hard work of the day.—Philadelphia Press.

Believed Them True Stories.

When Dante published his "Inferno" the simplicity of the age accepted it as a true narrative of his descent into hell.

When the "Utopia" of Sir Thomas Moore was first published it occasioned a pleasant mistake. This political romance represents a perfect but visionary republic in an island supposed to have been newly discovered in America. "As this was the age of discovery," says Granger, "the learned Budaeus and others took it for a genuine history and considered it as highly expedient that missionaries should be sent thither in order to convert so wise a nation to Christianity."

It was a long while after publication that many readers were convinced that Gulliver's travels were fictitious.

Blackbird Days.

Jan. 30 and 31 and Feb. 1 are famous at Constantinople, Brescia and along the Danube and the Rhine as the "blackbird days." A curious legend says that originally all species of grackles (blackbirds) were white and that they became black because during one year in the middle ages the three days mentioned above were so cold that all the birds in Europe took refuge in the chimneys. At Brescia the three days are celebrated with a feast called "I giorni della meria," or "the feast of the transformation of the bird."

The Diva's Ruby

As the valet went out Mr. Van Torp turned his chair half round without getting up, so that he sat facing the door. A moment later Stemp had ushered in the visitor, and was gone.

A slim youth came forward without boldness, but without the least timidity, as if he were approaching an equal. He had an oval face, no mustache, a complexion like cream, short and thick black hair and very clear dark eyes that met the American's fearlessly. He was under the average height, and he wore rather thin, loose gray clothes that had been made by a good tailor. His hands and feet were smaller than a European's.

"So you're Mr. Barrack," Mr. Van Torp, said, nodding pleasantly.

The young face smiled, and the parted lips showed quite perfect teeth.

"Barak," answered the young man, giving the name the right sound.

"Yes, I understand, but I can't pronounce it like you. Take a chair, Mr. Barrack, and draw up to the table."

The young man understood the gesture that explained the speech and sat down.

"So you're a friend of Mr. Logotheti's, and he advised you to come to me? Understand? Logotheti of Paris."

Barak smiled again, and nodded quickly as he recognized the name. The American watched his face attentively.

"All right," he continued. "You can trot out your things now, right on the tablecloth here."

He had seen enough of Indians and Mexicans in his youth to learn the simple art of using signs, and he easily made his meaning clear to his visitor. Barak produced a little leathern bag, not much bigger than an ordinary purse, fastened with thin thongs, which he slowly untied. Mr. Van Torp watched the movements of the delicate fingers with great interest, for he was an observant man.

"With those hands," he silently reflected, "it's either a lady or a thief, or both."

Barak took several little twists of tissue paper from the bag, laid them in a row on the tablecloth and then began to open them one by one. Each tiny parcel contained a ruby, and when the young man counted them there were five in all, and they were fine stones if they were genuine; but Mr. Van Torp was neither credulous nor easily surprised. When Barak looked to see what impression he had produced on such a desirable buyer, he was disappointed.

"Nice," said the American carelessly; "nice rubies, but I've seen better. I wonder if they're real, anyway. They've found out how to make them by chemistry now, you know."

But Barak understood nothing, of course, beyond the fact that Mr. Van Torp seemed indifferent, which was a common trick of wily customers; but there was something about this one's manner that was not assumed. Barak took the finest of the stones with the tips of his slender young fingers, laid it in the palm of his other hand, and held it under Mr. Van Torp's eyes, looking at him with an inquiring expression. But the American shook his head.

"No rubies to-day, thank you," he said.

Barak nodded quietly, and at once began to wrap up the stones, each in its own bit of paper, putting the twists back into the bag one by one. Then he drew the thongs together and tied them in a neat sort of knot which Mr. Van Torp had never seen. The young man then rose to go, but the millionaire stopped him.

"Say, don't go just yet. I'll show you a ruby that'll make you sit up."

He rose as he spoke, and Barak understood his smile and question, and waited. Mr. Van Torp went into the next room, and came back almost immediately, bringing a small black morocco case, which he set on the table and unlocked with a little key that hung on his watchchain. He was not fond of wearing jewelry, and the box held all his possessions of that sort, and was not full. There were three or four sets of plain studs and links; there were half a dozen very big gold collar studs; there was a bit of an old gold chain, apparently cut off at each end, and having one cheap little diamond set in each link; and there was a thin old wedding ring that must have been a woman's; besides a few other valueless trinkets, all lying loose and in confusion. Mr. Van Torp shook the box a little, poked the contents about with one large finger, and soon found an uncut red stone about the size of a hazelnut, which he took out and placed on the white cloth before the visitor.

"Now that's what I call a ruby," he said, with a smile of satisfaction. "Got any like that, young man? Because if you have I'll talk to you, maybe. Yes," he continued, watching the oriental's face, "I told you I'd make you sit up. But I didn't mean to scare you baldheaded. What's the matter with you, anyway? Your eyes are popping out of your head. Do you feel as if you were going to have a fit? I say! Stemp!"

Barak was indeed violently affected by the sight of the uncut ruby, and his face had changed in a startling way; a great vein like a whipcord suddenly showed itself on his smooth forehead straight up and down; his lids had opened so wide that they uncovered the white of the eye almost all around the iris; he was biting his lower lip so that it was swollen and blood-red against the little white teeth; and a moment before Mr. Van Torp had called out to his servant, the young man had reeled visibly, and would have collapsed if the American had not caught the slender waist and supported the small head against his shoulder with his other hand.

Stemp was not within hearing, therefore Mr. Van Torp called to him in vain, and meanwhile stood where he was with his arm round Barak, and Barak's head on his shoulder; but as no one came at his call, he lifted the slim figure gently and carried it towards the sofa, and while he was crossing the large room with his burden the palpable truth was forced upon him that his visitor's slimness was more apparent than real, and an affair of shape rather than of pounds. Before he had quite reached the lounge, however, Barak stirred, wriggled in his arms, and sprang to the floor and stood upright, blinking a little, like a person waking from a dream, but quite steady, and trying to smile in an apologetic sort of way, though evidently still deeply disturbed. Mr. Van Torp smiled, too, as if to offer his congratulations on the quick recovery.

"Feel better now?" he inquired in a kindly tone, and nodded. "I wonder what on earth you're up to, young lady?" he soliloquised, watching Barak's movements.

He was much too cautious and wise to like being left alone for many minutes with a girl, and a good-looking one, who went about London dressed in men's clothes and passed herself for a ruby merchant. Mr Van Torp was well aware that he was not a safe judge of precious stones, that the rubies he had seen might very well be imitation, and that the girl's emotion at the sight of the rough stone might be only a piece of clever acting, the whole scene having been planned by a gang of thieves for the purpose of robbing him of that very ruby, which was worth a large sum, even in his estimation; for it was nearly the counterpart of the one he had given Lady Maud, though still uncut.

Therefore he returned to the table and slipped the gem into his pocket before going to the door to see whether Stemp was within hail.

But Barak now understood what he was going to do, and ran before him, and stood before the door in an attitude which expressed entreaty so clearly that Mr. Van Torp was puzzled.

"Well," he said, standing still and looking into the beautiful imploring eyes, "what on earth do you want now, Miss Barrack? Try and explain yourself."

A very singular conversation by signs now began.

Barak pointed to the waistcoat pocket into which he had put the stone. The matter concerned that, of course, and Van Torp nodded. Next, though after considerable difficulty, she made him understand that she was asking how he had got it, and when this was clear, he answered by pretending to count out coins with his right hand on the palm of his left to explain that he had bought it. There was no mistaking this, and Barak nodded quickly and went on to her next question. She wanted to know what kind of a man had sold him the ruby. She improvised a pretty little dumb show in which she represented the seller and Mr. Van Torp the buyer of the ruby, and then by gestures she asked if the man who sold it was tall.

Van Torp raised his hand several inches higher than his own head. He had bought the ruby from a very tall man. Putting both hands to her chin and then drawing them down as if stroking a long beard, she inquired if the man had one, and again the answer was affirmative. She nodded excitedly and pointed first to Van Torp's sandy hair and then to her own short black locks. The American pointed to his own, and then touched his watchchain and smiled. The man's hair was fair, and even golden. By a similar process she ascertained that his eyes were blue and not black, and her excitement grew. Last of all she tried to ask where the man was, but it was some time before she could make Mr. Van Torp understand what she meant. As if to help her out of her difficulty, the sun shone through the clouds at that moment and streamed into the room; she pointed to it at once, turned her back to it, and then held out her right hand to indicate the east, and her left to the west.

"Oh, yes," said Van Torp, who had seen Indians do the same thing, "it was west of here that I bought it of him, a good way west."

He pointed in that direction, and thrust out his arm as if he would make it reach much further if he could. At this Barak looked deeply disappointed. Several times, to show that she meant London, or at least England, she pointed to the floor at her feet and looked inquiringly at Van Torp, but he shook his head and pointed to the west again, and made a gesture that meant crossing something. He spoke to her as if she could understand.

"I've got your meaning," he said. "You're after the big man with the yellow beard, who is selling rubies from the same place, and has very likely gone off with yours. He looked like a bad egg in spite of his handsome face."

He turned his eyes thoughtfully to the window. Barak plucked gently at his sleeve and pretended to write in the palm of her left hand, and then went through all the descriptive gestures again, and then once more pretended to write, and coaxingly pushed him towards a little table on which she saw writing materials.

"You'd like to have his address, would you, Miss Barrak? I wonder why you don't call in your interpreter and tell me so. It would be much simpler than all this dumb crambo."

Once more he made a step towards the door, but she caught at his sleeve and entreated him in her own language not to call any one; and her voice was so deliciously soft and beseeching that he yielded, and sat down at the small table and wrote out an address from memory. He handed her the half-sheet of paper when he had dried the writing and had looked over it carefully.

"Poor little thing!" he said in a tone of pity. "If you ever find him he'll eat you."

Barak again showed signs of great emotion when she put the address into an inside pocket of her man's coat, but it was not of the same kind as before. She took Van Torp's big hand in both her own, and, bending down, she laid it on her head, meaning that he might dispose of her life ever afterwards. But he did not understand.

"You want my blessing, do you, Miss Barrack? Some people don't think Brassy Van Torp's blessing worth much, young lady, but you're welcome to it, such as it is."

He patted her thick hair and smiled as she looked up, and her eyes were dewy with tears.

"That's all right, my dear," he said. "Don't cry!"

She smiled, too, because his tone was kind, and, standing up, she took out her little leathern bag again quickly, emptied the twists of paper into her hand, selected one by touch, and slipped the rest back. She unwrapped a large stone and held it up to the light, turning it a little as she did so. Van Torp watched her with curiosity, and with an amused suspicion that she had perhaps played the whole scene in order to mollify him and induce him to buy something. So many people had played much more elaborate tricks in the hope of getting money from him, and the stones might be imitations after all, in spite of Logotheti's penciled line of recommendation.

But Barak's next action took Van Torp by surprise. To his amazement, she pressed the ruby lightly to her heart, then to her lips, and last of all to her forehead, and before he knew what she was doing she had placed it in his right hand and closed his fingers upon it. It was a thank-offering.

"Nonsense!" objected the millionaire, smiling, but holding out the stone to her. "It's very sweet of you, but you don't mean it, and I don't take presents like that. Why, it's worth a thousand pounds in Bond street any day!"

But she put her hands behind her back and shook her head, to show that she would not take it back. Then with her empty hand she again touched her heart, her lips and forhead, and turned towards the door.

"Here, stop!" said Mr. Van Torp, going after her. "I can't take this thing! See here, I say! Put it back into your pocket!"

She turned and met him, and made a gesture of protest and entreaty, as if earnestly begging him to keep the gem. He looked at her keenly, and he was a judge of humanity, and saw that she was hurt by his refusal. As a last resource, he took out his pocket-book and showed her a quantity of folded bank notes.

"Well," he said, "since you insist, Miss Barrack, I'll buy the stone of you, but I'll be everlastingly jiggered if I'll take it for nothing."

Barak's eyes suddenly flashed in a most surprising way, her lower lip pouted, and her cheek faintly changed color, as a drop of scarlet pomegranate juice will tinge a bowl of cream.

She made one step forwards, plucked the stone from his fingers, rather than took it, and with a quick, but girlishly awkward movement, threw it towards the window as hard as she could, stamping angrily with her little foot at the same moment. Mr. Van Torp was extremely disconcerted, as he sometimes was by the sudden actions of the sex he did not understand. Fortunately the stone hit the wall instead of going out of the window.

"I'm really sorry, Miss Barrack," he said in a tone of humble apology, and he went quickly and picked up the gem. "I hadn't quite understood, you see."

$3.50 Recipe Free, For Weak Kidneys.

Wouldn't it be nice within a week or so to begin to say good bye forever to the scalding, dribbling, straining, or too frequent passage of the urine; the forehead and the back-of-the-head aches; the stitches and pains in the back; the growing muscle weakness; spots before the eyes; yellow skin; sluggish bowels; swollen eyelids or ankles; leg cramps; unnatural short breath; sleeplessness and the despondency?

I have a recipe for these troubles that you can depend on, and if you want to make a quick recovery, you ought to write and get a copy of it. Many a doctor would charge you $3.50 just for writing this prescription, but I have it and will be glad to send it to you entirely free. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, K1239 Luck Building, Detroit, Mich., and I will send it by return mail in a plain envelope. As you will see when you get it, this recipe contains only pure, harmless remedies, but it has great healing and pain-conquering power.

It will quickly show its power once you use it so I think you had better see what it is without delay. I will send you a copy free—you can use it and cure yourself at home.

JUNIOR ENDEAVORERS GIVE ENTERTAINMENT

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church repeated the entertainment, "Ye are the Light of the World," and also conducted a sale of ice cream, cake and candy, at the church last night. There was a large attendance of members and friends of the society and church and the whole program was greatly enjoyed. The society netted about $25 to aid it in its work. The affair was in charge of Mrs. R. V. Kinney, assisted by Mrs. Lafayette Rosenstiehl.

An additional feature of the program was a Chinese motion song given in Chinese costume, by the Misses Dorothy Seader, Marjorie Storr, Helen Thompson, Jennie Sears, Nellie McAfee, Elizabeth Chickering, Mildred Oliver, Helen Leitheusser, Dorothy VanWinkle, Marguerite Barkalew, Marion Woolley, Ella VanArsdale, Marion Blair and Laura Smith. There was also an additional song, entitled "The Siege of Pekin," given by the boys who presented the drill in the other part of the program. Much credit is due Lawrence French for his work in drilling the boys.

After the entertainment the sale was held. Miss Beiter had charge of the sale of church postal cards, and Miss Jennie Sears, Miss Nellie McAfee and Mrs. Alfred Baker were in charge of the candy table, while Mrs. Charles Allegar and Mrs. Martin Hansen assisted at the cake table. R. V. Kinney and Charles Beiter took charge of the ice cream.

MAYOR ENDS HIS LIFE BY HANGING

Mayor Shafer Sigler, of Hackensack, elected last November, committed suicide yesterday. After cutting his throat with a penknife he placed a rope around his neck and hanged himself. His wife found his body on the second floor of his blacksmith shop on Walnut street. He had been dead several hours.

Mayor Sigler was in a cheerful mood when he attended a meeting Thursday night of the Board of Health, of which he was also president. He made several suggestions regarding the sanitary improvements of the town and seemed to be in better spirits than he had been for a long time.

Friday morning after eating breakfast he went direct to his blacksmith shop, and it is believed that within a short time afterward he made the plans to end his life.

When he did not return home to luncheon at 1:30 o'clock, Mrs. Sigler became worried and went to his shop. Looking around on the first floor she could not find him, and then went upstairs, where his body was discovered hanging from a beam.

It is said by his friends that so far as they know, he had no financial troubles, and the only explanation for the suicide is that Mr. Sigler failed in carrying out certain reforms which he promised when he took the oath of office last January.

The penknife which he used to haggle at his throat was found in his pocket.

Mr. Sigler leaves a wife and also two daughters, who are about 18 and 12 years old.

Mr. Sigler was born in Vienna, N. Y., on May 8, 1853. From 1874 to 1877 he was apprentice to the blacksmith trade, in which he had been engaged for thirty-years. He was elected justice of the peace of Washington township, Morris county, in 1895, and elected constable of the township in 1898. He moved to Hackensack in 1900, was elected to the Council in 1904 and re-elected in 1905 and 1906. In 1907 he filled out the term of Jacob Beatty. He was again elected councilman in 1909 and was president of the Common Council in 1910. Mr. Sigler was defeated for the mayoralty nomination in the primary election last September. He ran as an independent candidate and was elected.

NEWARK CONFERENCE RECEPTION TO BISHOP

Members of the Newark Conference tendered a reception to Bishop Warren in the Sunday-school rooms of the Halsey Street M. E. church, last night, preceding the anniversary of the Epworth League. Members of the league from all districts of the conference were present to greet the presiding bishop.

The anniversary of the league proved to be one of the most interesting services of the session. Rev. Berryman H. McCoy, of East Orange, presided at the anniversary.

Union of the Methodist churches of the entire country was advocated at the thirtieth anniversary of the laymen of the conference held in the First Presbyterian church, Newark, yesterday. If carried out as proposed it would make the Methodist Episcopal church, the Methodist Episcopal church South and the Methodist Episcopal Protestant church one body. Officers of the Laymen's Association were elected and among those chosen was Samuel Bingaman, of this city, who was elected as one of the district presidents, and Dr. James R. Joy, of this city, as a member of the executive committee.

There will be no session of the conference today, but tomorrow religious services will be held and on Monday the conference will close with the announcement of the appointments for the coming year, something that is looked forward to with the greatest interest.

Rev. G. W. Osmun, of Winsted, Conn., brother of A. E. Osmun, of this city, will preach at the First M. E. church, tomorrow, morning and evening, and Rev. G. H. Dougherty, son-in-law of Rev. Dr. J. L. Hurlbut, will preach at Grace M. E. church, morning and evening. There will also be a supply at Monroe Avenue M. E. church.

Chalmers MOTOR CARS HAVE GOOD MOTORS

Back of every smooth-running Chalmers motor there are many thorough tests of efficiency. As each motor comes from the Assembling Department it is tested for accuracy under electric power. Each part must be perfectly assembled, the whole running smoothly.

After this comes the most important test of all. At varying speeds, from 800 to 1200 revolutions, each motor is run 24 hours under its own power to determine to the last degree of certainty that every part works smoothly and silently. After this the motor is hitched to a dynamometer which makes the engine carry a load equivalent to a touring car with its full number of passengers. Under this strain the motor is run an equivalent of 300 miles.

And finally each motor which passes the test is assembled in a car and sent out for a 200 mile road test in actual service.

There is a Chalmers motor which will work right for you and give you the "best run for your money" you have ever had from any purchase. Let us fix your delivery date now.

ORCHESTRAL CONCERT AN ENJOYABLE AFFAIR

An audience of large proportions listened to the first orchestral concert of the Park Avenue Baptist Bible School orchestra in the church last evening. The program contained numbers difficult of concerted playing, but they proved easy for this excellent organization. Assisting the orchestra were Mrs. Clinton E. Mosher, soprano, and Whitney Frazee, cornet soloist.

Mrs. Mosher received encores for both of her numbers and Whitney Frazee had to respond after rendering "Sing Me to Sleep." His encore selection, "Killarney" was finely played at the request of Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire. Mrs. Mosher was accompanied skillfully by her husband.

The orchestra playing was admirable, especially in Hayden's "The Heavens are Telling." The volume of tone and harmony maintained being delightful. Another charming number was Kretschmer's "Coronation March" in which the organ accompanied the orchestra with fine effect. Arthur S. Mosher, the orchestra's leader, has reason to be proud of the splendid accomplishments of his musicians.

The program: March, "Unity Hall" Thrall; Overture, 'Goddess of Night," Allen; solo, "The Rosy Morn," Mrs. Clinton E. Mosher; "Coronation March," Kretchmer; Cornet solo, "Sing Me to Sleep," Whitney Frazee, with violin obligato by Dyckman Winckler; "The Heavens are Telling," Hayden; "Melody of Love," Engleman; solo, "My Dreams" Mrs. Mosher; Waltz, "Wedding of the Winds," Hall; march, "Fire Drill," Lincoln. The orchestra has thirty-six members including Clinton E. Mosher, organ and Miss Mary E. Clark, piano and everyone contributed to the success of the concert.

It is Just a Habit.

"I suppose, Eileen," she remarked to the new girl, with feigned difference, "that you overheard my husband and me conversing rather earnestly this morning. I hope, however, that you did not think anything unusual was going on?"

"Niver a bit, mum. Oi wanst had a husband meself, an' niver a day passed that th' neighbors didn't belave one or th' other uv us would be kilt entoirely."—Success.

BURMAH MISSIONS

MISS NELLIE YABA'S ADDRESS.

Since Coming to America She Has Seen Wickedness Equalling That of the Burmese—Thought All Baptists Here.

Miss Nellie MeDwe Yaba, a native of Burmah, whose father was educated at Colgate University by the First Baptist church, and who herself has been assisted by the church in securing an education, addressed a large congregation at the church, last night, telling many interesting things about her country and the work that is being done there by missionaries. Miss Yaba is now assistant secretary of the Y. W. C. A. at Binghamton, N. Y., preparing to go back to her home to engage in Christian work.

Speaking of the knowledge of Americans concerning her country, she said that many were not able to distinguish Burmah from Bermuda and they have an idea that it is a little country. She thought that any Baptist who did not know of Burmah and the work among the Karens was a mighty poor Baptist.

After her conversion and before coming to this country, she said she had the idea that everybody in this country was a Christian and a Baptist, but she soon learned differently. She also said that she did not learn of many of the horrible practices in her own country until she came here, her parents having kept the information from her, but since coming to America she had seen things which were almost the equal of those in Burmah for wickedness.

Referring to the mad rush of Americans in their daily life, she said that they seemed to have pretty much everything but time, but missionaries who go to Burmah soon find that they have plenty of time and it's not long before they slow down under the warm climate. Miss Yaba paid a high tribute to the work of the Baptist missionaries in her country; also the work of Rev. Dr. Judson, the first missionary there, as well as the interest of the First Baptist church and Mrs. William White, through whose efforts she was educated. After the service many remained to meet Miss Yaba.

State G. A. R. Roster.

The officers of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., are anxious that all the veterans, members of the post shall be included in the State raster being compiled by the New Jersey department of the order. There will be 5,000 copies of the roster printed and it is planned to publish the name of every soldier, his company and regiment. It is necessary that each member be in good standing in his post, financially, and the local officers want to get all names in early this month.

Realty Purchases.

D. C. Ivins has sold one of his residences at Watchung and Kensington avenues, now in course of construction to F. R. Mackenzie, of New York. The latter's son has also purchased the C. D. Manning property on Watchung avenue near Woodland. Each will occupy his new purchase. The Central Park Realty Company has purchased the William Runyon residence on East Front street and the one adjoining it on the west.

Hurt by a Fall.

John McGuire, a starter at the Dunellen car barns of the P. S. Railway, fell from the rear platform of a main line trolley car last evening shortly after 8 o'clock. McGuire was somewhat bruised about the head and was taken to Muhlenberg hospital in the ambulance. He was able to return to his home in South Bound Brook after treatment.

FROM THE BLOTTER AT HEADQUARTERS

Peter Ritter was charged with being drunk and disorderly by Patrolman Saunders. He told the judge that it was his first offense in ten years and that he was sorry. "Discharged," said the court.

Half a dozen men were arraigned before Judge DeMeza this morning for neglecting to tie their horses when left in the street. The court did not impose any sentence, but cautioned the men that another charge would necessitate a fine.

George Boland, a thirteen-year-old lad, charged by a Central Railroad detective with stealing coal, yesterday from cars of the company near Rock avenue, was released in charge of his mother this morning, but not before JudgeDeMeza had administered a severe rebuke to Mrs. Boland. The court said he did not believe the woman was ignorant of the boy's act and further said that he would fine her if the boy ever is caught doing the same thing again. The prisoner confessed to the theft.

CELEBRATE FORTIETH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Hicks, of Liberty street, quietly observed the fortieth anniversary of their wedding yesterday, when a few intimate friends and neighbors called to extend their congratulations to the couple. Mr. and Mrs. Hicks have been residents of this city since 1888, when the Pond Machine Tool Company located in this city. Mr. Hicks is a pattern-maker and has been employed by the Pond concern for many years.

The couple first lived on West Third street, but about a year and a half ago removed to Liberty street, near Fourth. Yesterday they received a number of gifts, accompanying congratulations and altogether the day was a pleasant one for them. In the evening the guests were entertained at supper.

FIRST ANNIVERSARY OF REV. MR. MAGUIRE

Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, delivered his first anniversary sermon at the church, yesterday morning and in the course of his remarks made a strong plea for the members of his church and congregation to boycott the postoffice on Sunday morning, thereby assisting the employes of the office to have a day of rest.

Mr. Maguire declared it to be an outrage that the postmen are obliged to remain on duty at the office on Sunday, to accommodate the people of Plainfield, including a large number of church members. He urged everyone to lend assistance to this country-wide movement.

Mr. Maguire took for his text of the morning: "He thanked God and Took Courage." He spoke of his gratitude for the past and his hopefulness for the future, calling attention to the successful year just closed. He said that a year ago there were many empty seats at the services, but now every seat is taken and the Sunday school room often has to be used to accommodate worshippers.

Attention was called to the fact that all obligations had been met and the budget for next year raised; also that the women had raised $400 over their regular apportionment. He praised all departments of the church, the women's societies and Sunday school for the hearty co-operation, declaring that all are working and pulling together with the pastor for the best interests of the church and the upbuilding of the Kingdom.

BENFORDS PROMISE TO LEAVE THE CITY.

Andrew Benford, his mother Margaret, aged 70, and Mrs. Benford's married daughter Maggie, were all arraigned before Judge DeMeza this morning. The mother and son were charged with being intoxicated and the daughter was held as a witness. Sentence was suspended in all three cases when the daughter promised to take her mother to her home in Jersey City and Andrew gave his word to the judge that he would assisting in supporting his mother. The home on Cottage place will be abandoned.

MAY CALL PASTOR

Rev. Mr. Conover, of Pemberton, Likely to Succeed Rev. Mr. Musson.

AT TEMPLE BAPTIST CHURCH.

Candidate Made a Good Impression on Congregation Yesterday When He Preached Both Morning and Evening.

That Rev. C. E. Conover, pastor of the Baptist church at Pemberton is pleasing to the members of the Temple Baptist church, of this city, was manifest yesterday morning after the sermon. Rev. Mr. Conover, with all the attributes of a successful minister of the Gospel and a pleasing personality, attracted the congregation which gathered to hear him and made a good impression. It is, therefore, altogether likely that he will receive an unanimous call to the position made vaciant by the resignation of Rev. John W. Musson, who has accepted the pastorate of a church in Meriden, Conn.

The preacher has a pleasant voice and his oratory is of a high order. He is married and has one son about five years old. Mrs. Conover was in the congregation in the morning and made many friends by her cordial and sympathetic manner. Many expressions of approval were heard of both Mr. and Mrs. Conover after the services for the day were over.

In the morning Mr. Conover preached a sound sermon from Isaiah 50:7, in which he said when the cares and duties of life begin there is shown in the text how we may meet them without flinching. "In doing God's will," he said, "we sometimes arouse the enmity of some people, but doing the right thing is to own reward and no fear should attach to doing the right.

"Overweening confidence in self is the cause of most failures in life. Those who feel themselves strong are actually the weakest; but to profit by failure is a sign of right purpose and to acknowledge shortcomings insures a free acceptance from God. The true Christian is always assured of ultimate success and temporary disappointments only make him the stronger. Peace, joy and happiness all come when you can truthfully say 'I know that God is mine.' The foundation of all good things should be God. You may meet with humiliation in this life, but you will never be confounded nor ashamed in serving Him."

YOUTHFUL THEIVES

Three Boys Admit Breaking Into Vacant Houses in North Plainfield.

LEAD PIPE WAS THEIR LOOT.

For Refreshment They Confiscated Jelly, Grape Juice and Other Sweets—Another Boy Implicated.

A series of vacant or untenanted house burglaries which has puzzled the borough police for the past three weeks was cleared up yesterday by the arrest of three boys who confessed to being the guilty parties. They admitted forcing entrance to four residences and it is quite certain that others may be added to the list. In each instance they caused damange from twenty to fifty dollars in tearing away lead pipe or fixtures.

The youthful culprits are Andrew Judge, aged 15, and John and Edward Colder, aged 14 and 12 respectively. They implicated a fourth boy who has not yet been apprehended. The three were arraigned before Justice Snape in the borough court last night, and released under bonds for a hearing at 5 o'clock this afternoon, when it is probable that the missing companion will be under arrest and further evidence in hand.

The boys acknowledged entering the following houses: Barlow place, 69 Rockview avenue; former Harrington residence, 10 Rockview terrace; the Wheeler property, 90 Mercer avenue, and the William Griscom residence at 34 Sycamore avenue. The last named is furnished but the family has been spending the winter in Baltimore. There are two other places, one of them on Grove street, adjoining St. Peter's church on Grove street, which the police believe were entered by the same crowd. The total damage done to the four places admitted is placed at $150. For the pipe taken away, the boys received about $2 from Egbert Scribner, a junkman, of Duer street. His part in the transaction is undergoing investigation.

The Griscom house was entered yesterday morning and it was this job that led to the arrests, Chief Weiss being responsible for the ferreting out. A man living across the street from the place telephoned to headquarters that he had noticed a face peering from a cellar window. His suspicions were aroused from the fact that he was aware the family is still in Baltimore. Chief Weiss hurried to the house and on gaining entrance found unmistakable signs of a visit from burglars. They had been unable to get further than the cellar, however, as the doors had resisted their efforts to force them. Iron bars had been put underneath and above but the locks held.

The chief found them wedged in. Various articles in the cellar had been appropriated, among them numerous glasses of jelly and a jug of grape juice. A window beneath the front porch had been broken to get in.

A search in the neighborhood elicited the information from a woman that she had seen a brindle bull dog running around the yard at about the same time the man had noticed the face at the window. This was enough for Chief Weiss. Bull dogs with long tails are scarce and the description tallied with one he knew belonged to Andrew Judge. The boy was located in his Sunday-school class and when taken to police headquarters eased up his conscience by clearing up the mystery of the lead pipe robberies. He furnished the names of his assistants also the disposal place of their plunder.

Both Judge and the Calder boys have been on parole as the result of their arrest on another charge several weeks ago. They were apprehended for stealing groceries from Grove street back porches. Recorder Dolliver placed Judge in charge of Rev. Father Miller and the Calders in the custody of Rev. J. O. McKelvey. Judge appropriated a horse and runabout from the street and went off on a fishing trip with the rig when he was only nine years old.

Soon to Be Married.

Miss Maude C. Farr, of Madison avenue, has resigned her position and will leave for her home in Pennsylvania in a few days where she will be married the latter part of April to James J. Fleming. After the ceremony they will take a short trip and locate in Roseville, N. J., where they have purchased a home.

Walked to Princeton.

Bertram Smith, of East Fifth street, walked to Princeton and back Saturday. Leaving Plainfield at 5 o'clock in the morning he covered a distance of fifty-six miles in sixteen hours, arriving home at 9 o'clock Saturday night.

VISITED BY BISHOP

HE ADDS 38 COMMUNICANTS.

Consecrates An Altar and Preaches to Holy Cross and Heavenly Rest Congregations.

Right Reverend Bishop John Scarborough paid his annual visit to the Church of the Holy Cross and the Church of the Heavenly Rest, yesterday morning and evening. Both churches were crowded to their capacity at these services and the addresses to both classes were in line with the solemnity of the occasion. At Holy Cross the altar was banked with flowers and the scene was a most impressive one. Here twenty-two new communicants were added to the congregation and at Heavenly Rest sixteen were confirmed.

At Heavenly Rest Bishop Scarborough consecrated the altar recently built by the rector in memory of his father and in a speech preceding his sermon, Bishop Scarborough complimented Rev. Mr. Mallery upon the work accomplished in the parish and intimated that the present outlook was for a larger church edifice. He said that after reviewing the work of the parish for the past year he was convinced that a larger building would be necessary in the near futue. He complimented the congregation on having secured the site for a new rectory, which is a lot of large dimensions immediately adjoining the church.

An augmented choir sang special selections, among them "God So Loved The World," from Stainer's "Crucifixion." The bishop preached a short sermon on "Prayer" and after confirming the class addressed the newly confirmed for about ten minutes. Those confirmed were Samuel Wilson, George Mead, Albert Marsh, Charles Reusch, Frank Thorne, Emma Chamberlain, Eliza Corless, Elizabeth Marsh, Hannah Bridge, Augusta Van Pelt, Genevieve Drake, Alice Brentnall, Hazel Hutchcroft, Edith Marsh, Florence Lee and Elsie Howell.

YOUTHFUL RIDER IN HUNT CLUB CHASE

The Watchung Hunt Club opened its hunting season, Saturday afternoon, in an auspicious manner. The day was ideal for the first hunt and a number of the active members were out to follow the hounds. The riders met at the Plainfield Country Club, and the hounds were thrown in on the Mumford farm. Then circling around a distance of about three miles, negotiating several stiff fences and ditches, the first check was made at the Lehigh Valley Railroad station at Oak Tree.

The scent was again picked up on the Stover farm, and the hounds swung in around the Mt. Pleasant Schoolhouse, and another check was made on the Ginna estate, covering in all about ten miles. There were no mishaps, although Huntsman Watkins' new mount, "White Heather," gave a good exhibition of bucking. J. J. O'Donahue, upon a new horse purchased of Julian Keith, of Virginia ,performed well. Stanley Bellows, aged fourteen years, made his debut as a hunt club rider.

A number of interested people followed the hunters in automobiles, while several grooms were out exercising green hunters. The hounds were fast and set a lively pace. From now on the club will hold hunts twice a week until the annual steeplechase. The riders and mounts:

Rufus C. Finch, M. F. H., "All Alone;" J. J. O'Donahue, "Lion Heart;" Harry Finch, "Manifesto;" C. F. Wildey, "Rosemary;" Edward R. Finch, "Chaperone;" Harry A. Bourne, "Sultan;" Fred Alpers, "Robin;" Stanley Bellows, "Mechanic;" C. E. S. Bellows, "McGregor," and Huntsman Henry Watkins, "White Heather."

Will Remodel Residence.

Mrs. Lewis Williams, of Crescent avenue, who owns the former Job Male residence on that thoroughfare, has had plans prepared to practically reconstruct the interior of the building. It will be made into three apartments of eight or nine rooms each. A feature will be the installation of two bath rooms in each apartment. The work is to be commenced as soon as possible.

DRIVER HURT WHEN HORSE LEAPS FENCE

Charles C. Groves, of South Second street, the well known slate roofer, narrowly escaped serious injury in a runaway accident on Fairview avenue Saturday afternoon. As it is he has been under the care of Dr. J. H. Buchanan and is detained from business.

Mr. Groves was driving along the avenue with his working rig when the horse took fright at something and bolted. He was unable to turn the corner when Somerset street was reached and the animal made straight for the houses on the west side of the thoroughfare. There are two double residences at this point with a fence separating them. The horse tried to crowd through the narrow space between, and finding it too small, leaped the fence, bringing itself to a sudden stop.

Mr. Groves was thrown from his seat and over the pickets to the next yard. He landed on his face, receiving a bad shaking up in addition to cuts and bruises. The horse was held by the wagon and fence until released. Peculiarly enough, the animal apparently escaped all harm. The shafts of the rig were broken and the harness was broken.

AUTO STRUCK TREE, THREE PITCHED OUT

An automobile owned by Leon Frank, of Newark, and driven by the owner, ran into a tree on South avenue, yesterday afternoon, shortly after 5 o'clock and pitched three occupants out. Mr. Frank was the only one of the trio injured, he was attended by a local doctor and later went home.

The accident caused by the breaking of the steering gear of the machine which was running at about twelve miles an hour. One of the occupants of the machine was a woman who refused to give her name.

Joseph Harrigan, in front of whose house the accident happened, harnessed up a team and hauled the wrecked machine into his yard and later the machine was removed. It is believed that the car is beyond repairs.

HOUSE SET ON FIRE IN FAMILY QUARREL

John Carey, colored, of Westervelt avenue, was fined $3 in the borough court, this morning, on a charge of disorderly conduct. His father, Moses Carey, who was made a co-defendant, had sentence suspended.

The two men were arrested Saturday night, after a fracas at the father's homse on Manning avenue. It developed in the testimony that John was the cause of it all. He stopped in the house to get a paper bag for some Saster eggs he had been carrying and picked a quarrel with his parent. He was ordered from the place but refused to go and in a scuffle a lamp was knocked over. It started a blaze on the floor that scared all hands. The elder Carey's housekeeper rushed to the street and yelled "police," "murder" and other things to add to the excitement. Marshals Pope and Heller made the arrests.

Restaurant Changes Hands.

William Schorb, of this city, who a few days ago purchased Max Arnold's restaurant on Broad street, Westfield, has sold the business to Thomas Timbo, of this city, who, after making extensive alterations, will conduct a first-class restaurant there. Mr. Arnold has purchased a hotel at Liberty, N. Y.

Fined for Assault.

Bert Rogers, colored, who was arrested on complaint of Jacob Klein, of West Third street, for assault, on Friday and sentenced to pay a fine of $8 or go to the county jail at Elizabeth for twenty days, was released from jail this morning, his fine having been paid by his mother.

Senator's Temporary Home.

Senator and Mrs. Martine are registered at the Hotel Hamilton, 14th and K streets, Washington, D. C. Senator Martine attended a dinner and conference of the new Democratic Senators at the Hotel Willard Saturday night.

RAIDS ON HOTELS; PRISONERS BAILED

Proprietors of Walpole's and The Maples Held for the Grand Jury on Serious Charges.

Accompanied by a detail of local patrolmen, County Detective John Galatian together with a trio of detectives from the prosecutor's office, raided two road houses at Scotch Plains, last night, and corraled eight prisoners, among them the two proprietors of the houses, Lynus Walpole and Berthold Heim, of The Maples. Among the prisoners taken were "J. T. Woods," automobile tire dealer, of Orange, and who does business in Newark, and a female companion who gave her name to the police as Catharine Lockwood. Others were Elsie Walpole, daughter of one proprietor; Mrs. Emma Cox, Walpole's housekeeper; George Lyons, a bartender, and Frank Traynor, with a companion named Elizabeth Frazer, all the last named of Scotch Plains. Walpole was released on $2,000 bail furnished by Lewis Morrell, of Scotch Plains. Heim was released when J. B. Guttridge, of this city, signed his bond for $1,000.

The raid was conducted under the auspices of the County Prosecutor's office and was considered to be successful although some disappointment was felt that others who were alleged frequenters of the places were not caught in the trap. Elsie Walpole and Mrs. Cox were released under $300 bonds each, furnished by Mr. Morrell.

The raid was a spectacular one and was witnessed by several prominent citizens of this city, including Mayor George W. V. Moy. The police were not aware of their destination until they had arrived near the places to be raided at about 8 o'clock in the evening. Preparations had been made by the detectives so that there should be no miscarriage of the plans. The three sleuths had been at work on the case for about two weeks, having posed as surveyors and chainmen.

Prosecutor C. Addison Swift was on hand early at police headquarters in this city and as soon as the two wagon loads of prisoners arrived, he, with the assistance of Assistant Prosecutor Walter Hetfield, Jr., got busy on the complaints. The arrests were made on John Doe warrants on complants made by Marshal George Rabig, of Scotch Plains.

The plans for the raid were conducted by Assistant Prosecutor Hetfield.

When arraigned last night shortly before midnight Heim, the first one brought before Judge William G. DeMeza, pleaded not guilty and asked for an examination. He later changed his plea and waived examination and was held to await the action of the grand jury in the sum of $1,000. Walpole, the next man who had to answer to two complaints, one of conducting a disorderly house and the other of selling liquor without a license and selling it on Sunday, the same charge which was brought against Heim.

Both men declared after the hearing was over that the police and detectives had "nothing on them" and that the prosecutor would have a hard time convicting them of the crimes charged. However, the prosecutor had some incriminating evidence which, it is believed, will serve to convict both men.

According to Rabig's complaints the two houses have been run in open violation of the law for months, but evidence was hard to get, as Scotch Plains has but the one guardian of the peace. Prosecutor Swift said last night that from all he could gather there were good cases against all those caught in the raid.

At the last moment, G. T. Woods and his companion were released by Judge DeMeza, Wood having left a $1,200 automobile in a local garage to insure the appearance of a bondsman today. They will have to furnish $500 each for their appearance before the grand jury.

BASEBALL.

Thieves Friday entered the home of Jimmy Casey, at Detroit, former third baseman for the Chicago baseball team, and former manager of the Montreal Eastern League Club, now manager of the Ft. Wayne, Ind., club, and secured $500 in jewelry and a small amount of cash.

Rube Marquard was on the mound Friday for the Giants in the game against the Atlanta team. The $11,000 "beauty" allowed eight hits in six innings and had three strike-outs to his credit. Only three of the Atlanta players worked the "Rube" for free tickets.

John Ganzel and his band of Rochester Hustlers defeated the Chattanooga team Friday afternoon at Chattanooga, Tenn., by a score of 6 to 1. The Eastern League hammered out ten safe drives and ran the bases in a daring style. Holmes and Bernie Maurer did the flinging for the Hustlers.

Lew Richie, a former Philly curveologist, is said to be the player who will go to the minors for "staying out late nights" while training with the Chicago Cubs. Henie Zimmerman is the fellow who will lose $1,200 in salary, it is asserted.

Shelden Lejeune, of the Brooklyn ball club, was seriously injured in an automobile crash late Friday afternoon. He was one of a party of four taking a ride around the city of Knoxville, Tenn. The car skidded, smashed into a fence and was demolished. Others in the party received slight bruises.

The Athletics won from the Philadelphia Nationals Saturday by a score of 8 to 4. Bender had the Indian sign on the leaguers.

The New York Yankees hit the ball hard and often Saturday and had little trouble in winning from the Cincinnati team by a score of 8 to 3. Fisher and Caldwell did the flinging for the New Yorkers and were invincible with men on the bases.

George Stone, former leading batsman of the American League, will play with the Milwaukee club of the American Association during the coming season. He was purchased Saturday from the St. Louis Browns by Charles S. Havener, owner of the Milwaukee team. The price was not stated.

Red Corridon, shortstop, and Pat O'Connor, catcher, were sold Saturday by the Pittsburg National League Club to Danny Shay, manager of the Kansas City American Association team. Shay is said to have paid $6,000 for both men.

The schedule meeting of the Three I League, held at Chicago Saturday, to finally settle the difference between the Northern and Southern factions of the league, broke up in a disagreement. The ten club league proposal of the Southern clubs was the rock on which the split was started. The whole case probably will go to the National Commission for final adjustment.

Catcher Fred Mitchell and Fred Miller, of the Rochester Hustlers, are still on the injured list. Miller has a twisted ankle and Mitchell a sore thumb.

Ben Hauser, who played with the Toronto Eastern League team two years ago, is playing first base for the Yanigans of the Philadelphia Athletics. He rapped out two extra base drives Friday in the game against Augusta.

GOLF.

With characteristic promptness the handicap committee of the Metropolitan Golf Association has compiled its annual spring list, which is now in the mails. As before, Walter J. Travis is placed alone on scratch, while Fred Herreshoff, the metropolitan champion, is allowed a stroke. Herreshoff is the only one with a single stroke allowance, for Jerome D. Travers, who shared that honor with the Garden City man a year ago, is now at 2, with Findlay S. Douglas and Gilman P. Tiffany.

A year ago Tiffany had 3 strokes, but the Powelton man proved his ability as a steady performer at the stroke game when he won the medal in the qualification test of the metropolitan championship tournament at Morris County. The new list containing ratings from scratch to 11, inclusive, is about the usual size. The committee this year consists of A. T. Pogson, chairman; J. E. Erickson, F. J. Phillips, George H. Barnes and W. W. Taylor.

THE REGISTRY OFFICE.

Regardless of public sentiment, House bill, No. 529, which provides for the abolition of the office of register of deeds in Union county, is practically certain of passage in the Assembly. Fortunately for the county, however, it seems postitve of defeat in the Senate. The sole excuse for its introduction, for which its sponser, Mr. Brodhead assumes responsibility, is that similar measures applying to Passaic, Bergen and other counties are being considered by the lawmakers.

There is a well defined report that so far as the other bills of that import are concerned, party politics, pure and simple, is the moving cause. Not for one moment, however, has Mr. Brodhead been accused of such sinister purposes in championing his bill. The view he has taken, he says himself, is that Union should be in line with other counties when it comes to a question of economy.

Mr. Brodhead's opinion leads one to ask whether it is really a means of economy, to say nothing of efficiency, to restore the old order of things when the county clerk with his multiciplicity of duties had the responsibility of a recorder of deeds, mortgages and other documents thrust upon him? As the recent census shows, the county population has increased enormously and consequently the labors of the county clerk have kept pace with it. At the same time, he is burdened with a large proportion of the elections' work and naturalization, not to mention his manifold duties as the custodian of court records, etc.

Since the office of register was created, the incumbent of that position has found his work increase in like proportion. In 1910, for instance, 12,587 documents were recorded in his office. The income to the county derived from such source reached $21,098.99. In 1904 when the office was organized, the income was $14,461.76. The population then was 99,000; today it is 142,000. So far as the work actually done is concerned it is by far the largest office. There are but eleven employees and there are 1,023 books of records, 941 property maps and scores upon scores of index books, etc.

Mr. Brodhead uses the argument that the work entrusted to the register of deeds might be equally well accomplished by an assistant to the county clerk. But is this true? Does an assistant feel the same responsibility and give the same service as his superior who is primarily responsible? Does the superior have the time and qualities to give proper attention and resultant efficiency. As a general proposition this is not the case and when it comes to such a highly important office should the taxpayers and the citizens who have business in that office be subjected to such a risk? That there would be no real economy we verily believe and this opinion is shared wherever and whenever the bill is discussed. There is not the slightest murmur against the present incumbent. His administration, as lawyers throughout the county have testified, has been an excellent one. Should there be a change in the political complexion of the county, there need be no fear that the record he has established will not be continued. Why, then, when there has been no sentiment from any quarter in favor of a return to the antiquated order of things, should the Legislature be called upon to abolish the office. To us it is not understandable. Nor is it to the county's lawyers, many of whom, irrespective of party affiliations, have voiced their sentiments through this paper.

THE IMITATORS

Many little pressing tailor shops claim to do Dry Cleaning. These are the magicians. These the people who simply take in your clothes, brush out the dust, remove such spots as they can, pressing fairly well. Your clothing is then sent home and after a few days the spots reappear. You naturally condemn Dry Cleaning, when in truth your garments have only been sponged and pressed.

You should send your clothes here. We dust them properly, having the right equipment. Then we put your garments in just the right bath for their special needs, depending upon condition, texture, etc. Drying and airing after cleaning is accomplished here under the most sanitary and perfect conditions.

Send your next work to us—if you appreciate quality.

CHURCH CONDUCTS ITS ANNUAL MEETING

The congregation of the Seventh-Day Baptist church held the seventy-third annual meeting in the church parlors, yesterday afternoon and evening. Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson presided as chairman and Asa F. Randolph acted as clerk.

The afternoon session began at 3:30 and was devoted primarily to the reading of reports by F. J. Hubbard. They included all the church and department organizations, among them the Sabbath school, the Women's Society for Christian Work, the Senior and Junior Christian Endeavor Societies and the Men's Club. All showed gains and a prosperous year.

The church membership showed a loss of one during the year. In finances, through the regular fund, the church contributed to local charities and other causes $1,963.35. The members individually have given $700 and the different departments $1,295, making a total of $3,958.35. Mrs. H. M. Maxson read a report of the benevolent work accomplished by the members through local organizations.

In the election of officers, Joseph A. Hubbard was elected trustee for five years to succeed himself; William Stillman was elected treasurer; George E. Stillman, assistant treasurer; Asa F. Randolph, clerk; A. L. Titsworth and C. H. Dunham, auditors; D. E. Titsworth, auditor, and Miss Jessie Utter, organist. A vocal duet was contributed by Mrs. John B. Cottrell and Mrs. William C. Hubbard.

In the evening, devotional exercises were led by Rev. T. L. Gardiner. After a violin solo by Mrs. Violet Truell-Johnson, the year's work was summarized by the following: Church work proper by Rev. Edwin Shaw; letters from absent members and former pastors, Dr. Shaw. David E. Titsworth conducted a question and suggestion box.

Between the afternoon and evening meetings, a social session was held, during which refreshments were served by the entertainment committee of the Women's Society for Christian Work.

Fire Committee Meets.

The Councilmanic fire committee on Saturday night discussed horses for No. 4 fire house. Fiss, Dorr & Carroll, of New York, had been notified to take the team back, which had been sent on approval, and it is expected that the firm will remove the dead horse and will take back its mate.

Annual Church Meeting.

The annual meeting of the First Presbyterian church for the election of officers and reception of reports will be held Wednesday evening, April 12. The music arrangements for the year will also be made at that time.

BIG FOUR OF GOLF COMING TO AMERICA

James Braid, the veteran British golf champion, may reconsider his determination not to cross the Atlantic. If he does, he will be a starter in the National open championships at the Chicago Club links at Wheaton. This information was brought over by Stewart Gardner, golf expert at the Exmoor Country Club, and Jamie A. McDonald, professional at the Glen View Club, who have just returned to Chicago from winter trips to their homes in Scotland. The ysay that the championship tournament at Wheaton on June 23 and 24 will number the world's greatest exponents of the game in its list of starters.

"It is not certain that Braid will come," said Gardner, "but it is certain that Harry Vardon, George Duncan and J. H. Taylor, the remainder of the Big Four of the world's golf stars, will be here. Braid has repeatedly refused offers to visit the United States, chiefly because he fears seasickness. The Scots think, however, that when the other three board the ship Jamie will be along."

It has been learned that since the Mexican war scare caused the Mexican Country Club to abandon its plans for the greatest golf tournament the world ever knew, Champion Willie Smith of the big organization at Cherubusco, Mexico, practically closed with the Big Four of golf to play in Mexico for a $5,000 cash price list.

EXPECT TAX RATE TO BE ABOUT $1.68.

Following several conferences of the Councilmanic Finance committee it is believed that the tax rate for the coming year will be about $1.68, which will be three points higher than that of last year,, when it was $1.65. It is impossible to tell the exact figures at present owing to the fact that it cannot be ascertained what the county and local schools will want.

Some of the city departments will also want an increase in their appropriations and this will result in raising the rate a few points. The finance committee is striving hard to keep the appropriations within reason, cutting wherever it can be done coasistently.

Grass Fire Threatens Dwelling.

No. 2 hose wagon was summoned to Randolph road at 2 o'clock this afternoon to extinguish a grass fire which had set fire to a vacant house in the vicinity. The fire was gaining such headway through the swamp section that the people in the neighborhood became alarmed and telephoned to fire headquarters. The blaze was extinguished in about twenty minutes.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

Music and humor will hold high carnival at the Plainfield theatre, tomorrow night, when the Black Patti Musical Comedy Company presents the latest musical success, "A Trip to Africa." The play is said to be intensely funny and to possess rare charm of originality, while the scenes and situations follow one upon the other with naturalness and unique humor, they fairly captivate the audience. Few colored comedies have embodied in them so many delightful melodies, and the attention of the listeners is absorbed from beginning to end.

The Geran Bill Up.

With a hearing on the Geran bill scheduled for tonight, it is expected there will be some interesting arguments presented both for and against the measure. John J. Tracy is scheduled to speak for the measure; Geo. L. Record, who is credited with much of the preliminary work on the bill, will speak, and John W. Griggs, former attorney general, will oppose the bill in its present form.

Tuttle on Committees.

In the assignment of committee places in the House at Washington, Congressman William E. Tuttle, of this district, received positions on postoffice and postroads and coinage, weights and measures.

LAW STUDENT TRAMPS TO JACKSONVILLE, FLA

Frederick H. Hagstotz, aged 19 years, a law student, residing in New York city, stopped in Plainfield today for about ten minutes, en route to Jacksonville, Florida. The young man is walking the entire distance, chiefly for pleasure, and he has resolved not to accept any money to assist him in performing his feat.

As a means of getting along he accepts offers of doing small jobs, such as doing work on a farm, or anything that he is capable of doing within a reasonable length of time. Hagstotz, who is of German parentage, is well-dressed in a corduroy suit, and gives every appearance of being prosperous. He is well equipped for his long joruney with a stout pair of shoes and possessing good health, he will no doubt accomplish his purpose with little difficulty.

WASP WAIST CONTESTS.

Curious Course of Training In Old Time Girls' Schools.

A letter recently unearthed from a trunk shows that in the sixties of the last century principals of girls' schools thought they were fitting the girls for society by urging them to retain small waists. Accordingly they offered prizes to the girls having the smallest waists. The girls were put through a course of training for reducing their waist measure. The conditions of the contest were that the corset should not be removed on retiring at night and that each pupil must be inspected every morning to make sure she had not loosened her corset. One of the persons who engaged in the contest afterward wrote of it:

"Some of us tried hard to be permitted to retire from the contest, but we were rebuked for stultifying ourselves and accused of making fools of our principals. On the following morning the undergoverness, with her maid, came as usual to superintend the toilets, and after satisfying herself that each lace was drawn in to the utmost she fastened it in a knot at the top and, passing the ends through a piece of card, placed her own seal on them, so that any attempt to loosen the corset during the night might be infallibly detected in the morning."—Detroit Free Press.

WHITE DEER SKINS.

They Passed About as Banknotes at One Time In China.

In China, the first country in the world credited with using banknotes, certain skins were so valuable that they were accepted as cash and passed from hand to hand in the same way as banknotes are at the present day. The negotiability of these skins arose thus:

The Emperor Ou Ti, being in want of money, gave his treasurer to understand that such a state of affairs must not continue. At that time it was customary for princes and courtiers on entering the royal presence to cover their faces with a piece of skin. Taking advantage of this custom, the treasurer ordered a decree to be issued forbidding the use of any other skins for this purpose except those of a certain white deer in the royal parks. Immediately there was a demand for pieces of these skins, which, being a monopoly, were sold at a high price and the royal coffers refilled. The steady value of the skins thus secured made them readily pass and acceptable as an equivalent of coin of the realm.

A Stenographer's Stumble.

A judge in one of our middle west states advertised for a stenographer with experience in legal work. A number of applicants called at his office for the purpose of making application for the position. Each applicant was given a trial to test her speed, accuracy, etc. Among the applicants was a young lady whose anxiety to make a good showing evidently unnerved her. The judge dictated to her a few sentences in legal language, one of which was, "That would give him time to complete the devastation of the assets." The sentence as transcribed by the young lady on the typewriter read as follows: "That would give him time to complete the devil's station with a hatchet." Although much amused at her ludicrous blunder, the judge permitted her to go away without telling her of her mistake.—Case and Comment.

Madrid's Fearful Climate.

Madrid is afflicted with the most changeable climate of any European capital. The temperature varies from as much as 107 degrees in the summer to as little as 16 degrees in the winter, and at all seasons of the year it indulges in violent fluctuations. It is by no means uncommon in December to wake up with the thermometer registering about 20 degrees and to find it mount to more than 60 degrees by the afternoon. Some years ago an oscillation of 37 degrees was registered in one day. No wonder, therefore, that lung troubles are far more prevalent in Madrid than in St. Petersburg.—London Chronicle.

How Music Affected Boswell.

Boswell had a good deal more feeling for music than Dr. Johnson and suffered at his master's hands. Once in a moment of expansiveness he told Johnson that music "affected him" to such a degree as to agitate his nerves most painfully, producing alternative sensations of pathetic dejection, so that he was ready to shed tears, and of daring resolution, so that he was inclined to rush into the thickest of the battle.

"Sir," replied Johnson, "I should never hear it at all if it made me such a fool."

A Human Tendency.

"You approve of economy, don't you?"

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum; "only too many of us are apt to economize on the cigars we hand our friends instead of those we smoke ourselves."—Washington Star.

The Influence of the Trees.

When we plant a tree we are doing what we can to make our planet a more wholesome and happier dwelling place for those who come after us, if not for ourselves.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

If there were no pride in our hearts we should not complain of the pride of others.

How to Have a Warm House

First—install a BOYNTON "Square Pot," Patented, Furnace in the basement.

Then—in the morning before business and in the evening before retiring, step down and turn the BOYNTON clinkerless, ash-cutting grate. This clears the fire perfectly. Now put in a little coal; set the dampers for the degree of heat you wish, and leave the

BOYNTON
"Square Pot"
FURNACE

to do the rest. The BOYNTON is the most reliable house-heater known. It consumes less coal and gives more heat for the coal consumed, than any other heater on the market.

The BOYNTON "Square Pot" never holds dead fire. BOYNTON Boilers are now equipped with this same economical fire box and quick clearing grate. See your dealer about BOYNTON "Square Pot" furnaces and boilers.

The Leading Duty

of a trustee under a will, is the conservation of the estate and its increase by investment and the accumulation of surplus income.

In the discharge of such duties as this, it is evident that a Trust Company stands in a much more advantageous position to advance and protect the interests of an estate than any individual can.

In the important work of collecting moneys of an estate, for instance, such an institution is better qualified and more successful than individuals.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY PRESS

Japanese Logic.

A teacher of English in Japan recently gave as an examination question, "What is a ventilator?" Besides the number of answers that were approximately correct, there were two which indicated that the students must have been absent either in body or mind on the day when the schoolroom ventilator had been discussed. The first was, "The ventilator lives in the mountains;" the second, "Columbus was a great ventilator." When occasion offered the teacher reminded his class that attention and application are requisite for acquiring knowledge and seriously asked them why any one should have given an answer such as the one concerning Columbus. One of the best spokesmen in the class essayed an explanation somewhat as follows:

"Columbus brought new ideas back to the old world; he changed the current of thought and opened a great door into the new and outer world; therefore he was a great ventilator."—Youth's Companion.

Washing Your Hands.

When you go to the washstand and carefully wash your hands with a generous application of soap and hard brush do not think for an instant that your hands are clean. The tenacious microbe refuses to be disturbed and clings to the flesh throughout the whole operation. There are some chemical compounds which will dislodge the busy bacilli to a certain extent, but not entirely. According to the investigations of a medical authority of the Prussian army, the best results in the direction of giving the hands a sanitary cleaning are accomplished by the use of alcohol. A bath of pure alcohol will remove about 99 per cent of the germs. Where it is desired to clean the hands hygienically it is recommended that the hands be not first washed with water, for this will so adulterate the alcohol that it cannot accomplish its work as effectively as otherwise.

The Story of a Famous Hymn.

The famous hymn beginning "God moves in a mysterious way," known as "Cowper's Hymn," had its origin as follows: Cowper was all his life the victim of melancholia and more than once attempted suicide. One day, bent upon destroying himself, he got into a cab and ordered the driver to take him to a certain point on the river where he intended to drown himself. The cabman, noticing his strange appearance and feeling that all might not be right with him, drove him about the city and finally stopped in front of the poet's door. Stepping out and recognizing the old familiar surroundings and shocked at the thought of his narrow escape, Cowper exclaimed, "God moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform," and, rushing in, immediately composed the immortal hymn.

The Man With a Cold.

The sympathy given to the man with a hard cold is purely perfunctory. We know, or at least we think we know, that he will not die. We know that he is thoroughly wretched, yet we are equally certain that in three days or so he will be coming upstairs two at a time. This does not comfort him, though he may know it himself. He therefore feels himself an outcast, a pariah. He is cut off from the ordinary human relations. If he so much as kisses his wife or child he is a blackguard, mentally self convicted of it. Nobody loves him, and he may go out into the kitchen and drink cough sirup.—Boston Transcript.

Keeping the Actors Clean.

Some years ago, when playing in Leeds, I started a swimming competition among the members of my company and to encourage them offered as a prize a silver loving cup (won, by the way, by the late Edward Lonnen). The event apparently created some interest in the town, and a friend heard two men engage in a discussion as follows:

First Man—I say, durst to know this 'ere Terry's given a coop to bes' swimmer i' company?

Second Man—Aye. What's that for?

First Man—Oh, I suppose it's to keep them play actors clean.—Edward Terry in Era Annual.

Not "a Royal Maggot."

I a royal maggot! I am a soldier, I come from the people, I have made myself! Am I to be compared with Louis XVI.? I listen to everybody, but my own mind is my only counselor. There are some men who have done France more harm than the wildest revolutionaries—the talkers and the rationalists. Vague and false thinkers, a few lessons of geometry would do them good.—Napoleon (Quoted in "The Corsican").

Cards on Sunday.

Pepys, the diarist, was greatly scandalized when he first saw cards played on a Sunday. "I did find the queen, the Duchess of York and another at cards, with the room full of ladies and great men, which I was amazed to see on a Sunday, having not believed, but contrarily flatly denied the same a little while since."

Small Things.

We are too fond of our own will. We want to be doing what we fancy mighty things, but the great point is to do small things when called to them in a right spirit.

The Tank.

Friend (to confirmed toper)—I don't see how you can drink so much. It's shocking. Toper—It shocks me too. It surprises me. I suppose it's just luck.

To give awkwardly is churlishness. The most difficult part is to give. Then why not add a smile?—La Bruyere.

She watched him, and drew back instinctively towards the door, as if expecting that he would again try to give it back to her. But he shook his head now, bowed with all the grace he could affect, which was little, and by way of making her feel that he accepted the gift, he pressed it to his heart, as she had done, and to his lips, but not to his forehead, because he was afraid that might cause some new mistake, as he did not know what the gesture meant.

Barak's face changed instantly; she smiled, nodded, and waved her hand to him, to say that it was all right, and that she was quite satisfied. Then she made a sort of salute that he thought very graceful indeed, as if she were taking something from near the floor and laying it on her forehead, and she laughed softly and was out of the room and had shut the door before he could call her back again.

He stood still in the middle of the room, looking at the gem in his hand with an expression of grave doubt.

"Well," he said to himself, and his lips formed the words, though no sound articulated them, "that's a queer sort of a morning's work, anyway."

He reflected that the very last thing he had ever expected was a present of a fine ruby from a pretty heathen girl in man's clothes, recommended to him by Logotheti. Though he almost laughed at the thought when it occurred to him, he did not like the idea of keeping the stone; yet he did not know what to do with it, for it was more than probable that he was never to see Barak again, and if he ever did, it was at least likely that she would refuse to take back her gift, and as energetically as on the first occasion.

At that moment it occurred to him that he might sell it to a dealer and give the proceeds to Lady Maud for her good work, and taking his hat and gloves he went out immediately, without even telling Stemp that he was going.

He walked up at a leisurely pace from his hotel by the river to Piccadilly and Bond street, and entered a jeweler's shop of modest appearance but ancient reputation, which had been in the same place for nearly a century, and had previously been on the other side of the street.

Outside, two well-dressed men were looking at the things in the window; within, a broad-shouldered, smart-looking man with black hair and dressed in perfectly new blue serge was sitting by the counter with his back to the door, talking with the old jeweler himself. He turned on the chair when he heard the new-comer's step, and Mr. Van Torp found himself face to face with Konstantin Logotheti, whom he had supposed to be in Paris.

"Well," he said, without betraying the surprise he felt, "this is what I call a very pleasant accident, Mr. Logotheti."

The Greek rose and shook hands, and the American did not fail to observe on the counter a small piece of tissue paper on which lay an uncut stone, much larger than the one he had in his pocket.

"If you are in any hurry," said Logotheti politely, "I don't mind waiting in the least. Mr. Pinney and I are in the midst of a discussion that may never end, and I believe neither of us has anything in the world to do."

Mr. Pinney smiled benignly and put in a word in the mercantile plural, which differs from that of royalty in being used every day.

"The truth is, we are not very busy just at this time of the year," he said.

"That's very kind of you, Mr. Logotheti," said Van Torp, answering the latter, "but I'm not really in a hurry, thank you."

The stress he laid on the word "really" might have led one to the conclusion that he was pretending to be, but was not. He sat down deliberately at a little distance, took off his hat, and looked at the gem on the counter.

"I don't know anything about such things, of course," he said in a tone of reflection, "but I should think that was quite a nice ruby."

Again Mr. Pinney smiled benignly, for Mr. Van Torp had dealt with him for years.

"It's a very fine stone, indeed, sir," he said, and then turned to Logotheti again. "I think we can undertake to cut it for you in London," he said. "I will weigh it and give you a careful estimate."

As a matter of fact, before Van Torp entered, Logotheti had got so far as the question of setting the gem for a lady's ring, but Mr. Pinney, like all the great jewelers, was as discreet and tactful as a professional diplomatist. How could he be sure that one customer might like another to know about a ring ordered for a lady? If Logotheti preferred secrecy, he would only have to assent and go away, as if leaving the ruby to be cut, and he could look in again when it was convenient; and this was what he at once decided to do.

"I think you're right, Mr. Pinney," he said. "I shall leave it in your hands. That's really all," he added, turning to Mr. Van Torp.

"Really? My business won't take long either, and we'll go together, if you like, and have a little chat. I only came to get another of those extra large collarstuds you make for me, Mr. Pinney. Have you got another?"

"We always keep them in stock for your convenience, sir," answered the famous jeweler, opening a special little drawer behind the counter and producing a very small morocco case.

Mr. Van Torp did not even open it, and had already laid down the money, for he knew precisely what it cost.

"Thanks," he said. "You're always so obliging about little things, Mr. Pinney."

"Thank you, sir. We do our best. Good-morning, sir, good-morning."

The two millionaires went out together. Two well-dressed men stood aside to let them pass and then entered the shop.

"Which way?" asked Logotheti

"Your way," answered the American. "I've nothing to do."

"Nor have I," laughed the Greek. "Nothing in the world! What can anybody find to do in London at this time of year?"

"I'm sure I don't know," echoed Van Torp, pleasantly. "I supposed you were on the continent somewhere."

"And I thought you were in America, and so, of course, we meet at old Pinney's in London!"

"Really! Did you think I was in America? Your friend, the heathen girl in boy's clothes, brought me your card this morning. I supposed you knew I was here."

"No, but I thought you might be, within six months, and I gave her several cards for people I know. So she found you out! She's a born ferret—she would find anything. Did you buy anything of her?"

"No. I'm not buying rubies to-day. Much obliged for sending her, all the same. You take an interest in her, I suppose, Mr. Logotheti? Is that so?"

"I?" Logotheti laughed a little. "No, indeed! Those days were long ago. I'm engaged to be married!"

"By the bye, yes. I'd heard that, and I meant to congratulate you. I do now, anyway. When is it to be? Settled that yet?"

"Some time in October, I think. So you guessed that Barak is a girl."

"Yes, that's right. I guessed she was. Do you know anything about her?"

Logotheti told his companion the story of the ruby mine, substantially

"Where's She Hiding from You?"

as it was narrated at the beginning of this tale, not dreaming that Van Torp had perhaps met and talked with the man who had played so large a part in it, and to find whom Baraka had traversed many dangers and overcome many difficulties.

"It sounds like the 'Arabian Nights'," said Mr. Van Torp, as if he found it hard to believe.

"Exactly," assented Logotheti. "And, oddly enough, the first of those stories is about Samarkand, which is not so far from Baraka's native village. It seems to have taken the girl about a year to find her way to Constantinople, and when she got there she naturally supposed that it was the capital of the world, and that her man, being very great and very rich, thanks to her, must of course live there. So she searched Stamboul and Pera for him, during seven or eight months. She lived in the house of a good old Persian merchant, under the protection of his wife, and learned that there was a world called Europe where her man might be living, and cities called Paris and London, where people pay fabulous prices for precious stones. Persian merchants are generally well-educated men, you know. At last she made up her mind to dress like a man, she picked up an honest Turkish manservant who had been all over Europe with a diplomatist and could speak some French and English as well as Tartar, she got a letter of recommendation to me from a Greek banker, through the Persian who did business with him, joined some Greeks who were coming to Marseilles by sea, and here she is. Now you know as much as I do. She is perfectly fearless, and as much more sure of herself than any man ever was, as some young women can be in this queer world. Of course, she'll never find the brute who thought he was leaving her to be murdered by her relations, but if she ever did, she would either marry him or cut his throat."

"Nice, amiable kind of girl," remarked Mr. Van Torp, who remembered her behaviour when he had refused her proffered gift. "That's very interesting, Mr. Logotheti. How long do you count on being in London this time? Three or four days, maybe?"

"I dare say. No longer, I fancy."

"Why don't you come and take dinner with me some night?" asked the American. "Day after to-morrow, perhaps. I'd be pleased to have you."

"Thank you very much," Logotheti answered. "Since you ask me, I see no reason why I should not dine with you, if you want me."

They agreed upon the place and hour, and each suddenly remembered an engagement.

"By the way," said Mr. Van Torp, without apparent interest, "I hope Mme. Cordova is quite well? Where's she hiding from you?"

"Just now the hiding-place is Bayreuth. She's gone there with Mrs. Rushmore to hear 'Parsifal.' I believe I'm not musical enough for that, so I'm roving till it's over. That's my personal history at this moment! And Miss Donne is quite well, I believe, thank you."

"I notice you call her 'Miss Donne' when you speak of her," said Van Torp. "Excuse me if I made a mistake just now. I've always called her Mme. Cordova."

"It doesn't matter at all," answered Logotheti carelessly, "but I believe she prefers to be called by her own name amongst friends. Good-by till day after to-morrow, then."

"At half after eight."

"All right—half-past—I shall remember."

But at two o'clock, on the next day but one, Logotheti received a note brought by hand, in which Mr. Van Torp said that to his great regret he had been called away suddenly, and hoped that Logotheti would forgive him, as the matter was of such urgent importance that he would have already left London when the note was received.

This was more than true, if possible, for the writer had left town two days earlier, very soon after he had parted from Logotheti in Pall Mall, although the note had not been delivered till 48 hours later.

CHAPTER V.

Mr. Van Torp knew no more about Bayreuth than about Samarkand, beyond the fact that at certain stated times performances of Wagner's operas were given there with as much solemnity as great religious festivals, and that musical people spoke of the Bayreuth season in a curiously reverent manner. He would have been much surprised if any one had told him that he often whistled fragments of "Parsifal" to himself and liked the sound of them; for he had a natural ear and a good memory, and had whistled remarkably well when he was a boy.

The truth about this seemingly impossible circumstance was really very simple. In what he called his cow-punching days, he had been for six months in company with two young men who used to whistle softly together by the hour beside the camp fire, and none of the other "boys" had ever heard the strange tunes they seemed to like best, but Van Torp had caught and remembered many fragments, almost unconsciously, and he whistled them to himself because they gave him a sensation which no "real music" ever did. Extraordinary natures, like his, are often endowed with unnoticed gifts and tastes quite unlike those of most people. No-one knew anything about the young men who whistled Wagner; the "Lost Legion" hides many secrets, and the two were not popular with the rest, though they knew their business and did their work fairly well. One of them was afterwards said to have been killed in a shooting affray and the other had disappeared about the same time, no one knew how, or cared, though Mr. Van Torp thought he had recognized him once many years later. They were neither Americans nor Englishmen, though they both spoke English well, and never were heard to use any other language.

Mr. Van Torp was fond of music, quite apart from his admiration for the greatest living lyric soprano, and since it was his fancy to go to Bayreuth in the hope of seeing her, he meant to hear Wagner's masterpiece, and supposed that there would not be any difficulty about such a simple matter, nor about obtaining the sort of rooms he was accustomed to, in the sort of hotel he expected to find where so many rich people went every other year. Any one who has been to the holy place of the Wagnerians can imagine his surprise when, after infinite difficulty, he found himself, his belongings and his man deposited in one small attic room of a Bavarian tanner's house, with one feather-bed, one basin and one towel for furniture.

"Yes, sir."

"I suppose I'm thought close about money," continued the millionaire, thinking aloud, "but I call $5 a day dear for this room, don't you?"

"Yes, sir, I do indeed! I call it downright robbery. That's what I call it, sir."

"Well, I suppose they call it business here, and quite a good business, too. But I'd like to buy the whole thing and show 'em how to run it. They'd make more in the end."

"Yes, sir. I hope you will, sir. Beg pardon, sir, but do you think it would cost a great deal?"

"They'd ask a great deal, anyway," answered the millionaire thoughtfully. "Stemp, suppose you get me out some things and then take a look around, while I try to get a wash in that—that tea-service there."

Mr. Van Torp eyed the exiguous basin and jug with some curiosity and much contempt. Stemp, impassive and correct under all circumstances, unstrapped a valise, laid out on the bed what his master might need, and inquired if he wished anything else.

"There isn't anything else," answered Mr. Van Torp, gloomily.

"When shall I come back, sir?"

"In 25 minutes. There isn't half an hour's wash in that soup-plate, anyway."

He eyed the wretched basin with a glance that might almost have cracked it. When his man had gone, he proceeded to his toilet, such as it was, and solaced himself by softly whistling as much of the "Good Friday" music as he remembered, little dreaming what it was, or that his performance was followed with nervous and almost feverish interest by the occupant of the next room in the attic, a poor musician who had saved and scraped for years to sit at the musical feast during three days.

"E sharp!" cried an agonized voice on the other side of the closed door, in a strong German accent. "I know it is E sharp! I know it!"

Mr. Van Torp stopped whistling at once, lowered his razor, and turned a mask of soapsuds in the direction whence the sound came.

"Do you mean me?" he inquired in a displeased tone.

"I mean who whistles the 'Good Friday' music," answered the voice. "I tell you, I know it is E sharp in that place. I have the score. I shall show you if you believe not."

"He's mad," observed Mr. Van Torp, beginning to shave again. "Are you a lunatic?" he asked, pausing after a moment. "What's the matter with you, anyhow?"

"I am a musician, I tell you! I am a pianist!"

"It's the same thing," said Mr. Van Torp, working carefully on his upper lip, under his right nostril.

"I shall tell you that you are a barbarian!" retorted the voice.

"Well, that doesn't hurt," answered Mr. Van Torp.

He heard a snort of scorn on the other side and there was silence again. But before long, as he got away from his upper lip with the razor, he unconsciously began to whistle again, and he must have made the same mistake as before, for he was interrupted by a deep groan of pain from the next room.

"Not feeling very well?" he inquired in a tone of dry jocularity. "Stomach upset?"

"E sharp!" screamed the wretched pianist.

Van Torp could hear him dancing with rage or pain.

"See here, whoever you are, don't call names! I don't like it. See? I've paid for this room and I'm going on whistling if I like, and just as long as I like."

"You say you make noises you like?" cried the infuriated musician. "Oh, no! You shall not! There are rules! We are not in London, sir, we are in Bayreuth! If you make noises, you shall be thrown out of the house."

"Shall I? Well, now, that's a funny sort of a rule for a hotel, isn't it?"

"I go complain of you," retorted the other, and Mr. Van Torp heard a door opened and shut again.

In a few minutes he had done all that the conditions would permit in the way of making himself presentable, and just as he left the room he was met by Stemp, the 25 minutes being just over.

"Very good, sir. I'll do what I can, sir," said the excellent man, as Mr. Van Torp pointed to the things that lay about.

As he went out, he recognized the voice of his neighbor, who was talking excitedly in voluble German, somewhere at the back of the house.

"He's complaining now," thought Mr. Van Torp, with something like a smile.

He had already been to the best hotel, in the hope of obtaining rooms, and he had no difficulty in finding it again. He asked for Mme. da Cordova. She was at home, for it was an off-day; he sent in his card, and was presently led to her sitting room. Times had changed. Six months earlier he would have been told that there had been a mistake and that she had gone out.

MISS FLORENCE LEVINE BECOMES MRS FERTIG

Miss Florence Levine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max Levine, of West Second street, and Moses Fertig, of New Brunswick, were married last evening at the Jewish synagogue on New street, in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends from this city, New Brunswick and New York city. The ceremony was performed by Rabbi Davidson.

The bride was gowned in white silk and carried a bouquet of bride roses. The bridesmaid was Miss Sadie Golstein, of this city, who wore a gown of pink messaline and carried a bouquet of sweet peas. The best man was Isaac Fertig, of New Brunswick, a brother of the groom.

After the ceremony a reception was held in Sebring's Hall, where several hundred guests gathered to extend congratulations, and enjoy a dance. During the evening supper was served. Mr. and Mrs. Fertig left last night on a wedding trip. They will reside in New Brunswick. The bride received a large collection of gifts.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

The chess tournament now in progress at the Chess Club of Plainfield High School is rapidly assuming the proportions of a fierce contest. The amazing interest shown in the series of games already played grows with each succeeding game. On March 24 Schuck was leading by half a game, but since then VanDeventer has assumed the lead by the same margin and as he has played consistently throughout the tournament he is now looked upon as the probable winner. Van Hoesen, another persistently aggressive manipulator of the men, has forged gradually ahead so that he now is tied with Silbert and Schuck for second honors.

	Won.	Lost.
L. VanDeventer	15	7
S. Silbert	14½	7½
F. Van Hoesen	14½	7½
C. Schuck	13½	7½
L. Shaw	13	8
F. Schwed	13	8
H. Shrager	12	9
E. Hunting	11½	9½
L. Strong	9½	11½
A. Manley	8½	12½

SEA GIRT TO HAVE MILITARY SCHOOL

A school for instruction for the officers of the National Guard of New Jersey will be established at Sea Girt beginning June 22 and to continue one week. The school will be in charge of regular army officers, who will give technical instruction to their National Guard pupils in everything relating to their duties. An order was issued by the Governor late Saturday afternoon through Adjutant General Sadler to that effect.

This step is entirely new in the history of the National Guard of the State. Regular officers have visited Sea Girt, but as critics rather than as instructors. In this case the officers of the State Guard will receive instruction similar to what is given in the military schools on the Federal reservations. It is proposed to make this instruction a regular part of the military routine in this State. It is in line with the policy of the war department in brining the National Guard up to such a state of efficiency that it may be counted upon as a reliable second line of defense.

The military school will precede the regular summer encampment of the different regiments, so that the lessons received may be utilized by the officers in practice during the encampment. It is not known what regular officers will be designated as instructors. There are 383 commissioned officers of the National Guard, exclusive of forty-five officers of the Naval Reserve. Of these officers three are generals, 106 are staff and departmental officers, six are cavalry officers, ten are officers of field artillery and 243 are officers of the infantry. Last year thirty-nine commissioned officers from brigadier-general to second lieutenant resigned, retired or became superannuated and two died, reducing the number to 383.

UNVEIL MEMORIAL WINDOW AT ST. PETERS

Impressive services in German marked the dedication of the beautiful altar and window at St. Peter's German Luthern church, yesterday morning, and the edifice was thronged with worshippers, all joining in the spirit of thankfulness for the gifts. The altar and window were given to the church by Mrs. Charles Moldenke and Mrs. Richard Moldenke, in memory of their mother, Mrs. Anna Heims, a sainted member of the church for many years.

The altar and window were presented to the church by Dr. Charles Moldenke, on behalf of his wife and her sister, and then Rev. John Duerschner, pastor, who was in charge, conducted the impressive dedicatory service of the Lutheran church, in which the altar and window were dedicated forever to the service of God. Attention was also called to the munificent gift of Mrs. Dorothea Taylor, a member, which included the re-carpeting of the entire church and altar platform, Mr. Duerschner taking occasion to express his profound gratitude on behalf of the church and congregation. The offering at the service was the largest in the history of the church.

During the services there were violin and organ selections by Charles and William Spier; also two beautiful contralto solos by Miss Gertrude Heins, of Cranford. After the services, everyone remained to admire the window, altar and carpet. In the afternoon there was a service in English and last night the regular Swedish service was held.

The beautiful window represents "The Christ," designed by Charles Lamb, of New York, and made by J. & R. Lamb, after the famous painting of Hoffman. A suitable inscription is to be found at the bottom of the window, including the names of Mrs. Charles Moldenke and Mrs. Richard Moldenke. The altar is one solid piece of oak and a work of art.

Between Hong Kong and Yokohama they will stop for two days at Shanghai and one day each at Nagasaki and Kobe, Japan. Yokohama will be their headquarters until June 5, when they sail for Honolulu and San Francisco, reaching the latter port early in July.

At a hotel in Cairo, upon his return from a trip up the Nile, the former governor found a tourist party in which were a number of friends. He also met J. Pierpont Morgan, and had a pleasant evening with him. Lord Decies and his wife, who was formerly Vivien Gould, of Lakewood, were in the hotel, but kept to themselves. The party was also entertained by a daughter of Dr. M. F. Kirkbride, who has been a summer resident of Spring Lake for many years, and who married an English army officer.

Twelve deacons and eleven elders of the Newark Conference were ordained in the Central M. E. church, Newark, yesterday, at which time Bishop Henry Warren presided, assisted by the four district superintendents. Bishop Warren, according to the annual custom, delivered the conference sermon yesterday morning. He spoke on the vastness of God's riches in glory by which man is strengthened in his inner spirit and that this inner help is rendered in order that Christ may dwell in human hearts.

The other services held throughout the day were all of a religious character and were largely attended. This morning the business session was resumed and will probably be continued until tomorrow, when the appointments will be announced by the Bishop. As stated last week, Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson and Rev. C. S. Kemble expect to return to their respective charges and Rev. C. C. Cain, of Oxford, expects to be sent to Grace M. E. church.

BURTIS REPRIMANDED AT NAVAL ACADEMY?

Midshipman William Burtis, of Annapolis, a son of former Councilman and Mrs. Murray Burtis, of the borough, according to reports from the Naval Academy, has been reprimanded by naval officers and warned not to bring Miss Mary H. Beers, daughter of Prof. Beers, of Yale faculty, to academy hops in the future.

Officers of the academy have declared that no matter what the social status of a girl and no matter whether she was in society or not, if she occupied a position as nurse girl in an officer's household she would positively be persona non grata at Naval Academy functions. Today naval officers refuse to deny or affirm that Midshipman Burtis was reprimanded. There were reports that Prof. Beers, father of the young woman and his influential friends would seek an investigation. The incident has caused considerable of a stir and the popular opinion seems to be with Burtis, as the social standing of the young woman seems to be unquestioned except by cads.

Chalmers "30" Touring Car, $1500 Detachable Pere-Duers, $40

Chalmers MOTOR CARS HAVE GOOD MOTORS

Back of every smooth-running Chalmers motor there are many thorough tests of efficiency. As each motor comes from the Assembling Department it is tested for accuracy under electric power. Each part must be perfectly assembled, the whole running smoothly.

After this comes the most important test of all. At varying speeds, from 800 to 1200 revolutions, each motor is run 24 hours under its own power to determine to the last degree of certainty that every part works smoothly and silently. After this the motor is hitched to a dynamometer which makes the engine carry a load equivalent to a touring car with its full number of passengers. Under this strain the motor is run an equivalent of 300 miles.

And finally each motor which passes the test is assembled in a car and sent out for a 200 mile road test in actual service.

There is a Chalmers motor which will work right for you and give you the "best run for your money" you have ever had from any purchase. Let us fix your delivery date now.

BRODHEAD'S VIEW

TO ABOLISH REGISTER'S OFFICE.

Traces the Movement in the State and Re-affirms That There is no Petty Politics Behind His Measure.

Not in years has so much controversy been engendered in Union county as that caused by Assemblyman Calvin Brodhead's measure, House bill, No. 529, abolishing the office of register of deeds in counties having a population of between 140,000 and 200,000. To explain his position Mr. Brodhead made a statement to The Daily Press today.

"In the first place," said Asemblyman Brodhead, "it should be borne in mind that the agitation for the abolition of the office in second class counties arose first in Bergen county during the last campaign. Robert A. Sibbald, the Democratic candidate for register of deeds, ran on the anomalous platform that the office was unnecessary and if he should be elected he would ask for legislation providing for its abolition. The office in Bergen had been created the previous year by the Legislature merely to provide a job for the then speaker, Ward, who secured the Republican nomination and was fortunately defeated. It was one of those cases where the best laid plans miscarried.

"Early in the session the present Assemblyman from Bergen, Mr. Hinners, introduced a bill providing for the abolition of the office. For a time, before the official promulgation of the census, it was thought that his bill might effect Camden and Union as it included all counties with a population up to 140,000. There was much skirmishing around and lobbying under way at once to hold up, and it was held up until the census was officially promulgated and it was found that Union county had barely escaped having a population a trifle over 140,000, or to be exact 140,197.

"On the first day of the session, Senator Leavitt, Republican, also introduced a bill abolishing the office in all second class counties. This bill was never allowed to get out on the floor but was allowed to die a natural death in committee.

"As a further instance of the general trend of legislation of this character, Mr. McCran, the Republican majority leader in the House, introduced a series of bills on the first day of the session providing that in Passaic county there should be no increase in the salaries of the county officials, although under the then law Passaic county was entitled to be considered a first class county, and all salaries, including the county clerk, surrogate, register, sheriff, prosecutor of the pleas, judges and so on, jumped up to the plane fixed for first class counties. All the series of bills went through the Legislature and have become laws. While the officers affected naturally object the legislation meets with the hearty approval of the average taxpayer.

"In addition to all this, Senator Prince came forward a week or two ago with a bill providing for the abolition of the office of register of deeds in Passaic county, a county with a population of 215,000, or about 75,000 more than we have in Union county. It was asserted that the office was unnecessary and that the duties could and should be performed by the county clerk, with a consequent saving to the taxpayers of the county of about $10,000 per year.

"I simply cite these facts to illustrate the trend of legislation along these lines and as evidence of the way the matter was regarded in other counties. I had a natural reluctance to introduce such a measure affecting Union county on account of the suspicion it would engender that it was a cheap political move and solely designed to harass the county chairman of the Republican committee in this county, who holds down the office of register of deeds. For a number of years I have been convinced that this office was a political one and unnecessary. A great many citizens all over the county hold the same opinion and I have heard them so express themselves many times. They get along satisfactorily without the office in other counties where the volume of business is larger and there is no valid reason why it cannot be done here.

"In Union county it costs us in four salaries a total of $16,000 per year to merely supervise and direct the clerical work of the county. We have a county clerk at $6,500, and a deputy at $2,500. These two offices should naturally and properly be merged into one, all under the charge of one man and one deputy, with a resultant saving of $9,000 per year in salaries alone and probably anoth-

WILLIAM H. BURRIDGE DIED THIS MORNING

Following an illness of several months, William Hodge Burridge died yesterday morning at the home of his niece, Mrs. Abram G. Hooley, of Rockview terrace. For the past four weeks he had been confined to his bed and because of his advanced age failed rapidly despite skilled medical aid. A private funeral service was held this morning and the body will be taken to Toledo, O., for interment.

Mr. Burridge was born in England and spent many years of his life as one of the prominent attorneys in Cleveland, O. He came to Plainfield with his niece, Mrs. Hooley, about ten years ago and had since resided at her home. During his entire life Mr. Burridge had been a student and had traveled and studied in many lands. Of a most kindly and cheerful nature his greetings will be missed by all who had the pleasure of knowing him. Even at his extreme age he was remarkably fine looking and his old-time courteous manners will be long remembered. He had made many friends in the city and borough who will receive the news of his death with keen regret.

COOLEY PRESIDENT OF BORO'S BOARD

Dr. J. H. Cooley, who has been a member of the North Plainfield Board of Education for many years, was made president of that body at its annual organization meeting last night. The selection was unanimous and the members expressed great satisfaction at having a man so well versed in borough school affairs take charge of the session. Dr. Cooley succeeds Nelson A. Miller, who has been president for several terms, but who refused re-election. He stated that because of having to travel on account of business it would be impossible for him to even take the chairmanship of a committee.

In retiring from the president's chair, Mr. Miller thanked his associates for the support they had given him. He said there had been some squabbles, perhaps, but no more so than was necessary for the proper transaction of business. He regretted that business would not permit him to devote the time to the work in the future as he had in the past, but he promised his support so far as possible to the incoming president and committees.

An assuming his new station, Dr. Cooley expressed his gratification for the honor conferred upon him and declared he would discharge the duties incumbent upon him to the best of his ability. He called for nominations for vice-president and the name of Rev. G. A. Warner was the only one suggested. His election was unanimous.

Before appointing committees Dr. Cooley stated he believed a new one should be added to the list, a visiting committee. It would serve to bring the teaching corps and pupils into closer relationship with the board, he said, and facilitate the work. His suggestion met with approval. The new members of the board, Eugene A. Edgar and Thomas E. Currin, were formally sworn in by Superintendent Krebs, and received recognition in important work as evidenced by the following committee appointments:

Finance, Messrs. Woodruff, Currin, Laing; building and grounds, Messrs. Boyer, Laing, Currin; books and supplies, Messrs. Rushmore, Woodruff and Miller; truancy, Messrs. Edgar, Warner and Miller; teachers, Messrs. Cooley, Boyer and Warner; auditing Messrs. Currin and Edgar; visiting, Messrs. Edgar, Cooley and Rushmore.

A general discussion followed Dr. Cooley's remark that parents have a tendency to ignore the dividing line between the Watchung and Somerset Schools. Members of the board are frequently importuned to let pupils in one district attend school in the other, and it was agreed that the practice should be stopped. The line will remain as it is and will be enforced except under cases of absolute necessity.

Superintendent Krebs reported that the enrollment in the schools at the present time is 1,133 against 1,076 last year. The Somerset School has 856 and the Watchung 247. Bills to the amount of $545.51 were ordered paid.

T. O. Gavett Hurt.

At 7 o'clock last evening, Theodore O. Gavett, son of Joseph O. Gavett, of Third place, was injured in a collision with a horse at the corner of Central avenue and West second street. He was riding a motorcycle in company with a friend and as the corner was reached, Mr. Gavett ran into a horse owned by the Public Service Company ridden bareback by a boy who was taking the animal to the stable. Mr. Gavett's injury consisted of a sprained leg. He was attended by Dr. Ellis W. Hedges.

MONTHLY BANQUET OF COMMERCE CHAMBER

At the special meeting of the dinner committee of the Chamber of Commerce last evening an excellent menu was submitted which was unanimously approved. It will be served by Henry Windham at the Hotel Waldorf. The committee reported that as the number of seats at the banquet is limited to 100 and as most of them are already sold those who want to enjoy the dinner would better obtain their tickets today or tomorrow.

The dinner takes place Thursday evening at 6:30 o'clock and immediately afterwards the guests will adjourn to the chamber's rooms in the Frost building, where a general discussion of current affairs will take place. Col. W. S. Fuller, of Jersey City, and former Mayor Alexander Gilbert will be the speakers, the latter having for his topic, "The New York Clearing House."

OVER MOY'S VETO

Common Council Disregards the Mayor's Objections in Many Cases.

DEFEAT PROPOSED ORDINANCES

Chairman of Laws Committee Provoked at Colleagues Actions Declines to Present Firemen's Salary Increase.

Several ordinances and amendments to ordinances offered by Councilman F. L. Holt, chairman of the committee on laws and ordinances, fared badly at the April meeting of the Common Council, last night. Mr. Holt was so provoked over the treatment they received that he finally gave up in disgust and absolutely refused to present an ordinance for Chairman Taylor of the fire committee, providing for an increase in the wages of the firemen. There was an apparent feeling of sympathy on the part of some for the treatment accorded Mr. Holt.

It was explained by Mr. Holt that the ordinances or amendments were not his own, but that he had been requested to draft them and present them for other members. He has spent considerable time on them and he naturally felt aggrieved over the action of his fellow-members.

The first opposition was shown when Mr. Holt called up on third reading the ordinance amending the ordinance prescribing the duties of a corporation counsel. The amendment provided that a man eligible for the position must reside here, but could practice anywhere in the State, while in the original form it required that the corporation counsel shall not only reside, but practice here.

At first it looked as though it might go through, but then Mr. Montgomery interposed objections. He believed that there were good lawyers in Plainfield capable of filling the position, and he moved to lay the ordinance on the table, then he moved to put it on second reading, only to withdraw his motion later on. Mr. Mygatt said that failure to pass the ordinance "would only prolong the awful agony," but there was not enough votes present to pass the ordinance and it went back to its original form.

Upon the invitation of the Council, suggested by Mr. Buxton, who was president pro tem, the lawyers present were given an opportunity to speak on the proposed amendment. Winfield S. Angleman, one of those present declared that the ordinance in its original form had served the city for thirty years and had been satisfactory. He said that Plainfield had been and was still well supplied with lawyers and that there could be no reason for a change except political or for a trick.

Mr. Angleman said that by amending the ordinance the city would give away the main asset of the lawyers here. The fact that the late C. A. Marsh held the office of corporation counsel so many years, help to make his reputation and lawyers here generally look upon that office as a desired goal. The incumbent is criticized if he is wrong and praised if he is right.

J. Henry Crane, another local lawyer, also spoke in the same vein, adding that a local lawyer is acquainted with conditions here and has a general idea of the laws and government. He thought the corporation counsel should not only reside here, but practice here and said that he would hate to see the amendment pass. He declared that the bar association here is second to none and its members well able to care for any legal question that might come up.

Mr. Holt said that the ordinance was not his own, but that he had been requested to draft the amendment, which really combined two ordinances.

When a vote was called for on the adoption of the amendment, Councilman Buxton, Gloak Montgomery, C. C. Randolph and W. W. Wilson voted in the negative and Councilman Clay, Holt and Taylor in the affirmative.

Mr. Holt then moved to a third reading the ordinance to repeal on ordinance providing for the appointment of a corporation counsel and this was killed and similar treatment was accorded the resolution fixing the salary of the corporation at $1,250, Councilman Buxton, Gloak, Montgomery, C. C. Randolph and W. W. Wilson voting the negative and Councilmen Clay, Holt Mygatt and Taylor voting in the affirmative.

Another ordinance called up by Mr. Holt on second reading provides for rules and regulations governing the operation of the trolley cars in this city. This ordinance got through on second reading, but there was a narrow escape. It was first amended, allowing the company ten days in which to make any requested changes, instead of five days. It was the opinion of some of the mem-

RELIGION OF IBSEN

TAUGHT MARVELOUS LESSONS.

His Characters and His Dreams Told by Lecturer to Monday Afternoon Club at Hartridge Auditorium.

With the comprehension growing out of personal acquaintance and the ties of a common nationality,, Mme. Jutta Bell-Ranske gave an enthusiastic lecture on "Ibsen and His Message," yesterday afternoon before the Monday Afternoon Club at the Hartridge auditorium. She described Ibsen as a man of intense suffering which gave him sympathy with th social side of nature, the big human side. It was a dream of his, she said, that every nation should have theatres, not for amusement, but where psychological problems could be discussed.

Mme. Bell-Ranske told of his father's wealth and position which were lost when Henrick was eighty years old, and the suffering of the boy who was ignored by his former associates. At an early age, she said, he showed a marvelous brain and read the classics and psychological books. Even then he had dreams of becoming a great man. At the age of sixteen years, he was apprenticed to a chemist, and the would-be poet was obliged to make pills for a period of four or five years. The lecturer told of Ibsen's up-hill struggle through three decided developments, the classic, the romantic and the spiritual. She referred to Ibsen's wife as a marvelous woman, whom Ibsen called "Soul of My Life." The mid-channel of life was spoken of as a period between youth and age, when to all comes an awakening and questioning as to the meaning of life and truth.

Ibsen, the lecturer said, had a big religion though he was a spiritual anarchist and he was a daily reader of the Bible, the symbolism of his plays being that of the Bible. Woman's responsibility before and after motherhood was a subject brought out by the lecturer, who quoted from the dramas showing the faulty basis on which foolish women brought up their children. Mme. Bell-Ranske claimed that Ibsen taught marvelous lessons in the dramas that gave his message to the world. He, himself said there is something greater than poetry, art or the drama. It is life, She spoke of Isben's desire that she should enact a part in his drama, but she thought she could better interpret him in her lectures and there give Ibsen's message to the world. She concluded her lecture with the last words written her by Ibsen, "Remember that in all you do, what is essential is spiritual fellowship."

MRS. JOHN P. GROSS HAS PASSED AWAY

Mrs. Clara Baker Holly Gross, widow of John P. Gross and daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Baker, died at 5:30 o'clock this morning, at her home, 661 Belvidere avenue, following an illness of four years with heart trouble and complications. The death of Mrs. Gross will recall to the minds of many of the older residents the fact that her husband was principal of the Plainfield public schools during the '70s and early '80s.

Mrs. Gross was born at Wheeling, West Virginia, in 1846 and removing to Plainfield in 1875 she continued to reside here to the time of her death. Her husband died in 1882, after a long and successful career as a teacher and educator. Prior to four years ago Mrs. Gross was very active and even during her illness her mind was as bright as ever. Although an Episcopalian, Mrs. Gross attended the Friends meeting here and at the Fifteenth Street Meeting-House New York. Sh was a granddaughter of Judge Ruggles, of Ohio, who represented that State in the United States Senate for twenty-eight years. Prior to that he was a Circuit Court judge. Mrs. Gross is survived by one son, Albert A. Holly, with whom she lived.

The funeral will be held at the late residence Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. Elory G. Bowers, of St. Stephen's church, will officiate and the burial will be in the New York Bay Cemetery on Friday.

FIREMEN'S SALARIES LIKELY TO BE RAISED

Steps were taken at the April meeting of the Common Council last night, to increase the pay of firemen, and an ordinance covering this was adopted on first and second readings and ordered advertised. There being no objection raised, it is to be presumed that the ordinance will go through on third reading.

The changes raise the salary of the chief from $1,100 to $1,350, that of first assistant from $1,080 to $1,200; that of captains from $1,020 to $1,140. The salary of the engineer of steamer is left the same, $82.50 a month, while the drivers, tillerman, etc., are divided into five classes as at present. Each class, except that of E, the lowest, is changed. Class E men get $720 as at present. The other changes follow: Class A, $960 to $1,000; B, $900 to $960; C, $840 to $924; D, $780 to $792 and E $720 as at present.

Call-men will receive $55 a year as at preent and where they act in the capacity of captains they will receive $100. Those who act as engineers of the steamer will receive $82 a year. The changes will be effective from January 1, 1911.

YOUNG MAN KILLED; BODY UNIDENTIFIED

An unidentified man about twenty years old, was ground to pieces near the Netherwood station of the Central Railroad yesterday afternoon at about 4 o'clock. The body was discovered by an engineer of a freight train and brought to this city. The body was so badly mangled that identification would be difficult and there was nothing in the clothing which would lead to identification. It is believed that the man was stealing a ride and fell off in attempting to alight just after the train reached the outskirts of the city.

The dead man was dressed in a black suit of clothes and everything about him indicated personal cleanliness, but not a mark is left to indicate where he came from. The body is lying at Cole's undertaking establishment on West Second street, where it was removed at the instance of the police.

EXPLAINS REAL OBJECT OF WOMEN'S JUBILEE

Mrs. Daniel Rapalje, of Carlton avenue, told the story of the missionary jubilee recently held in New York city, to the members of the Ladies' Church Work Society of Trinity Reformed church yesterday afternoon, at the regular meeting of the society.

According to Mrs. Rapalje, the various meetings in New York served more than one purpose. While it was expected that $1,000,000 would be raised another object was in view when the jubilee was anounced. It was to arouse the women of America to the duty they owed to the women and families of the benighted of foreign lands. This object was attained and as a result all over the country the women are awakening to the necessities presented to them by a comparison of the work done in foreign missions during the last half century.

Mrs. Rapalje's address was listened to with profound attention and impressed the members of the society as being almost as good as having temselves witnessed the great pageant in Manhattan.

Team of Horses Missing.

Word was received by Chief of Police Kiely this morning that a team of horses belonging to Samuel Block, a contractor of Roselle Park, had disappeared from that place last night and it is believed they were stolen. They were hitched to a Columbia dump wagon. One is a bay and the other a black and together they weighed about 3,200 pounds.

An Alleged Thief.

George M. Cruse, who has been lanquishing in police headquarters since Friday morning, was released on his own recognizance this morning on suggestion of Mayor Moy. He will have to await the action of the May grand jury for the alleged theft of a micrometer taken from the Spicer Mfg. Co. plant.

DON'T LEAVE HORSES UNTIED ON THE STREET.

Mayor George W. V. Moy instructed Chief Kiely this morning to order the patrolmen to warn drivers of horse driven vehicles that it is unlawful to allow their horses to stand unhitched. The mayor does not went to have men arrested for first offenses against the ordinance.

Offenders have been brought into police headquarters at the rate of half dozen a day, but in each instance sentence has been suspended because each one pleaded ignorance of the law. Hearing the cases takes up considerable time of the court and only serves the purpose which the police can do just as well.

Youth Bought Liquor.

When George Curtis, sixteen years old, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning charged with being drunk and disorderly, he said he did not remember much about it except to allege that he had bought liquor at four different saloons in this city and North Plainfield. Curtis was so boisterous on West Front street last night at 8 o'clock that Patrolman Nolan was compelled to take him to police headquarters. Judge DeMeza said he would sentence Curtise on Saturday morning.

Parties bidding will be required to specify in their bids the name of the coal and shippers of same.

All coal to be thoroughly screened over a sieve fine enough to take out all dust and small particles of coal, and to be prepared acceptable to the Committee on Fuel, or their agent or representative.

All coal to be placed in the coal bins within the public school buildings without any extra expense to the Board for handling or trimming the coal in the bins, and to be delivered at such time as the Board may direct.

Bids to specify whether long or short tons.

Payment for all coal contracted for to be made after July 1, 1911.

All proposals to be endorsed "Proposals for Coal," and addressed to the Secretary of the Board.

Upon receipt of the bids or proposals the Board will immediately proceed to unseal the same and publicly announce the contents in the presence of the parties bidding, or their agents, provided such parties or their agents choose to be then and there present; and also to make proper record of the prices and terms upon the minutes of the Board.

No bids will be received until the day and hour above named, and none thereafter.

The Board reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

News and Notes

BASEBALL.

The New York Yankees defeated the Cincinnati Reds Sunday afternoon at Cincinnati by a score of 6 to 1. The National Leaguers secured but three hits off of Vaughn and Quinn, who were on the mound for the New Yorkers.

Hal Chase, manager of the Yankees, hurt his knee in the game with the Reds Sunday and had to retire. He will be out of the game, it is expected, for the next four or five days.

Christy Mathewson is not likely to pitch any more exhibition games, on account of a bad finger on his left hand. In practice Saturday Matty tried to stop a line hit and now he has a swollen digit. The finger is badly swollen at one of the joints and is in bandages.

Pitcher Corey, who was a member of the Toronto Eastern League team last year, will play with the Wilkes-Barre team in the New York State League this season. He signed his contract on Saturday and reported to Manager Clymer at Wilkes-Barre yesterday.

Shelden Lepeune, the big outfielder of the Brooklyn Nationals, who was injured a few days ago in an automobile clash, is improving rapidly in the General Hospital at Knoxville, Tenn. It is expected that he will be able to join the team again within the next week or ten days.

Eddie Collins, who wore a Newark uniform at one time, being loaned there for three days by Connie Mack, while the club was managed by Walter Burnham, was cordially greeted when he stepped to the plate in the first inning Sunday. The second sacker responded by hitting a long fly to left which Swayne nailed.

Rube Waddell pitched his first full game of the season for Minneapolis, the American Association Champions, at Memphis, Tenn., Sunday, and according to general opinion he showed much of his old-time form, striking out three men in the eighth inning with the bases full and winning his game in the tenth inning, 4 to 3.

GOLF.

Accepting an offer from the Fox Hills Golf Club the New York Athletic Club has decided to hold its first golf tournament over the links at Clifton, Staten Island, some time in May. The exact dates are as yet unsettled, but they will be between May 15 and 19. The length of the tournament is another matter to be determined later. Two cups have already been offered, one for the club championship and the other for members fifty years old or more.

Following its plan inaugurated last fall the Country Club of Lakewood has decided to run off another senior' golf tournament this spring. The affair will be held on Wednesday, Arpil 19, the day previous to the opening of the anual three-day invitation tournament. Two net score prizes and one gross are offered, and all golfers fifty-five years old or over are eligible.

Entries stating handicap at home club or on the Metropolitan Golf Association list should be sent to F. A. Potts, chairman of the greens committee, up to and including Tuesday, April 18. The competition will be the usual eighteen-hole medal play handicap.

THE IMITATORS

Many little pressing tailor shops claim to do Dry Cleaning. These are the magicians. These the people who simply take in your clothes, brush out the dust, remove such spots as they can, pressing fairly well. Your clothing is then sent home and after a few days the spots reappear. You naturally condemn Dry Cleaning, when in truth your garments have only been sponged and pressed.

You should send your clothes here. We dust them properly, having the right equipment. Then we put your garments in just the right bath for their special needs, depending upon condition, texture, etc. Drying and airing after cleaning is accomplished here under the most sanitary and perfect conditions.

Send your next work to us—if you appreciate quality.

ROUTINE BUSINESS OF COMMON COUNCIL

An ordinance providing for the opening up of East Sixth street from Richmond to Central was introduced and passed on first and second readings and ordered advertised at the Common Council meeting last night. A public hearing on it will be held on May 1. A public hearing was granted on the ordinance to vacate a portion of Church street. No one opposed the improvement and the ordinance was passed on third reading.

Petitions from the directors of the Public Library and reading room asking for an appropriation of $7,500 for the coming year and from the Shade Tree Commission asking for $2,440 for the year, together with $300 for the care of the city park were received and they took the usual course. By resolution $16,000 was determined as the amount for street lighting for the coming year, and the sum of $1,500 was voted for the care of the indigent poor at Muhlenberg Hospital for the year. These amounts were incorporated in the tax budget which was also offered.

The Y. M. C. A. petitioned the Council in a tax matter and this was referred to the finance committee. The Plainfield Dental Society, advocating a free dental clinic, asked the Council to appropriate $1,000 for the equipment of a suitable place. This was referred to the finance committee, and several petitions for lights in the east end were also referred.

Mayor Moy appointed Charles A. Sturtevant a special policeman and this was referred to the police committee. Street Commissioner Gavett reported that twenty-eigh sewer permits were granted during the month and Building Inspector Doane reported the granting of thirty-nine permits.

Clerk H. G. Adams, of the District court, reported receipts of $159.01 and expenditures of $68, and Overseer-of-the Poor A. D. Ayres reported a total expenditure of $320 for the past month.

The sum of $5,500 was appropriated for sewer extension work in accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Mygatt. The request of the Board of Health for $7,500 for the coming year was approved in accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Mygatt.

Mr. Gloak reported on the petition of property-owners on St. Mary's Avenue for permission to install a sewer, and on his motion it was granted, with the understanding that the work be done under the direction of Street Commission Gavett. At the suggestion of Mr. Gloak the clerk was instructed to notify residents of Leland avenue that certain improvements were not made because of the objection of other residents.

The ordinance providing for the opening of Astor place was passed and the improvement will be made in the usual way. A resolution by Mr. Gloak, which was adopted, called for the laying of sidewalks on certain streets where property-owners had failed to attend to the matter. It was agreed to hold an adjourned meeting Monday evening, April 10, on motion of Mr. Gloak.

Several petitions for lights were reported back by Mr. Clay and be recommended that two lights be placed on Terrill road, one on Randolph road, one on George street and one on Sumner avenue. Councilmen Holt, Mygatt and Taylor voted against the light on Sumner avenue, because the street has not been accepted.

The petition from Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., for an appropriation of $100, was referred to the finance committee on motion of Mr. Holt.

bers that the five days would be too short a time.

Mr. Holt in urging the adoption of the ordinance, declared that the city at present has no hold on the trolley company, it being able to do just as it pleases, and it was the belief of some members that the city should have the proper control over its operations. The ordinance, he explained, was largely in the language of the late Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh.

The ordinance provides among other things that the street commission shall make an inspection of the company's equipment at least once every three months and a penalty of $20 is imposed for infractions of certain provisions and $50 for other infractions. It also provides that notices of violations must be made to the company in writing. The ordinance was adopted on two readings and ordered advertised, Councilman Buxton and Mygatt voting in the negative.

Feeling a little encouraged by the success of the last named ordinance, Mr. Holt called up the one providing for a "safe and sane" celebration of July 4, but he did not get far with this one. He moved it to a second reading, but he was scarcely given an opportunity to explain certain points, when it was moved that the ordinance be laid on the table. Mr. Mygatt and Mr. Clay objected to Mr. Holt speaking on the subject, insisting on the vote to lay on the table. This motion prevailed, Councilman Buxton, Clay, Mygatt, C. C. Randolph and W. W. Wilson voting in the affirmative and Councilman Gloak, Holt, Montgomery and Taylor voting in the negative.

It was this action that incensed Mr. Holt and led him to declare that he absolutely refused to offer an ordinance giving the firemen an increase in pay. It was getting late and Mr. Taylor finally took the ordinance and got it through on first and second readings and ordered advertised.

Notwithstanding the objections of Mayor G. W. V. Moy regarding several resolutions passed at a previous meeting, the Common Council, at its April session last night, put them through over the veto. One of these resolutions called for an appropriation of $300 for equipping the alms house with a bathroom. The Mayor objected because it was not shown that bids were received for the work. Mr. Montgomery declared that bids were received, one from C. W. Krausse and another from George J. Tobin. Tobin's was for $220, the lower and the contract would be awarded to him.

Another resolution objected to by the Mayor, on the grounds that the bids were not exactly in accordance with the conditions, was that awarding the contract for the supply of oats, coal, hay, straw, etc., and this was passed over his veto, as was also the resolution in the tax matter of Elston M. French, in which Judge William Newcorn gave the Council an opinion.

The Council also passed over Mr. Moy's veto the resolution in the matter of W. A. Coddington, trustee for C. M. Meeker, in a settlement of $1,367.24, the balance due on the street paving contract. Mr. Moy claims that the papers in the case do not show the individual releases of the creditors and he put his veto on it for that reason.

The Council engaged in a long discussion of the question of the proposed opening of Kensington avenue, and it resulted in killing the proposition for the present as the ordinance calling for the apointment of E. T. Barrows, W. A. Garrigues and J. Fred MacDonald as commissioners and May 22 as the time for treating with property-owners, failed to pass, no one would second Mr. Gloak's motion. It was agreed that there were legal technicalities to be determined and it would be best to lay the matter over for the present. In the meantime the Council will get legal advice as to its rights.

Howard Williams, one of the interested property-owners, addressed the Council at length, presenting strong and forcible arguments to show that the improvement is not needed according to the proposed plans. He said that by making an angle at the junction of the extension and Park avenue, the expense would be practically nothing, while if the original plans were followed it would mean an expense of at least $15,000 considering property, damages, etc.

Councilman Clay and Holt also protested against the proposed action. Mr. Gloak was insistant on pressing the matter, claiming that the matter had been hanging fire since 1904. He then presented an old petition signed by thirty or more property-owners asking for the improvement, but it was shown that a small per centage were property-owners.

Mr. Gloak offered another ordinance calling for the macadamizing of a number of streets in the east and west end of the city; also providing for an issue of $34,000 worth of street improvement bonds, but Mr. Clay raised a question as to the legality of the action and thought it would be best to get legal advice and this matter was also held up for that purpose.

Unable to resist the call of his old trade, Robert E. Smith, of Trenton, is about to resign as superintendent of the crematory and will go back to the ice wagon for the summer. "Towser" Smith has long been known as an ardent Democrat, and when that party got in power one of its first act was to give "Towser" a job. But he says he cannot stand the troubles of an officeholder and he is going back to the ice wagon. "An iceman don't have to take anybody's sass," Mr. Smith says, "at least in summer."

BRODHEAD'S VIEWS

er $1,000 could be saved in incidentals and the economies that would result in combining the clerical forces. There is no foundation whatever for the assertion that the efficiency of the offices would be in any way impaired. On the other hand it should and would be enchanced. With a county clerk who will properly attend to the duties that he is well paid for and with a competent deputy, it is absurd to maintain that this work cannot be kept on a high a basis of efficiency as it is at present. It is being done in Monmouth county for instance. It may not be commonly known but it is a fact that the business of the office of register of deeds in that county is greater by several thousand dollars than it is in Union county and the work is all satisfactorily done by the county clerk. The records there are more extensive and extend back farther and more papers are filled in the course of a year than are filled in the office in Union county

"All this can be done by the county clerk in Mercer, Middlesex, Bergen, Monmouth and Passaic and it is efficiently done. Now why cannot it be done in Union county and in Camden? In view of all the facts, what warrant is there for holding on to the office in any county of the state outside of Hudson and Essex?

"In Union county it is true the present occupant of the office was elected a couple of years ago and is undoubtedly capable and efficient, but there is every reason to believe that his duties could be just as capably performed by any number of men who in other pursuits are rated to be worth from $1,800 to $2,000 a year. The people of Union county never had anything to say about the institution of this useless office. On the other hand there is every reason to believe that it resulted from political jugglery and was created by a pliant and boss-ridden legislature to make a good berth for organization favorites.

"There has recently been a great deal of discussion about the commission form of government. It represents the modern trend of thought in governing municipalities and is the outgrowth of conditions that are becoming intolerable. People are realizing that the government of municipalities is essentially a business proposition and they are demanding that the same results be achieved in the management of their business as in private business.

"What private business would run a county like we run Union? What business man would subdivide the office of register of deeds and county clerk as we do in Union county, putting each office under the head of a $6,500 man and under each man a deputy at $2,500? It is a fair assumption that the business would be handled at about one-third the figure so far as the salaries of the supervising head is concerned. The proposition as it now exists in Union county is indefensible from any standpoint. It is a burden on the taxpayers, an economic waste and contrary to every principle of good government."

CONFERENCE IN MONTCLAIR, 1912

By a standing vote that was overwhelmingly in the affirmative, Montclair yesterday morning was designated as the place of next year's sessions of the Newark Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Invitations to the conference to meet in 1912 at Montclair, Paterson and Newark were extended. James L. Hayes, on behalf of the official board of Central church, Newark, extended an invitation to return next year, but this was subsequently withdrawn in view of the force with which the acceptance of the other two invitations was urged.

The invitation to go to Paterson was presented by Rev. Dr. L. C. Muller, superintendent of the Paterson district, and its acceptance was urged by Rev. Dr. Jacob A. Cole and Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass. The vote, however, indicated a small proportion of the delegates in favor of going to the Silk City.

Rev. H. F. Randolph, pastor of the First Methodist church, represented the suburban Methodists in urging the conference to go to Montclair.

Following devotional services in charge of Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, the sixth day in the annual session of the conference was opened yesterday morning with a mere handful of delegates present. Their numbers, however, were rapidly augmented by late arrivals and the transaction of business of importance was practicipated in by a representative gathering.

Among other matters no little importance was attached to the report of the child labor committee and the adoption of the following resolution:

"Whereas, The National Child Labor Committee has conducted investigations in the principal cities of twenty-three States to learn the conditions under which night messengers are employed; and

"Whereas, New Jersey has been included in this national study, where it has been found that the majority of calls requiring the service of night messengers after 10 o'clock at night come from Chinese restaurants, disreputable hotels, saloons and questionable rooming houses; that they are sent with notes to and from inmates of disorderly houses; that they are used to convey refreshments from Chinese restaurants, catering to such houses; and

"Whereas, The night messengers—largely between fifteen and twenty years of age—are engaged in this employment which, aggravated by the unnatural hours of sleep, irregularity of meals and exposure to the inclemencies of the night tend to enfeeble the body, destroy all self-restraint and result in demoralization and disease; and

"Whereas, It has been stated that this occupation is a 'blind alley,' leading to no advancement and with no systematic effort to teach the night messenger boys telegraphy or any other useful trade; and

"Whereas, A bill is now pending in the New Jersey House of Representatives known as Senate bill No. 33 which provides that no minor shall be employed as messenger after 10 o'clock at night and before 5 o'clock in the morning; and

"Whereas, This bill is indorsed by the New Jersey and National Child Labor committees, churches, civic and charitable organizations and physicians, be it therefore

"Resolved, That the Newark Conference of Methodist Ministers heartily supports the efforts of the New Jersey and National Child Labor committees to have Senate bill No. 33 enacted into law, and to this end we earnestly urge our Senators and Representatives in Legislature assembled, to pass said bill No. 33."

ALBERT ULRICH AIMS AT PUBLICITY

Insisting that he had an abundance of witnesses to prove the allegations he has made against the noted negro educator, Albert Ulrich pleaded not guilty in the Court of Special Sessions yesterday to the information charging him with assault on Booker T. Washington.

Ulrich, accompanied by his attorney, reached the court in a distinctly defiant mood. In entering his plea of not guitly he asked that the charges against him be preferred and a speedy trial granted. Ulrich said that many false allegations had been published regarding him since he was arrested and that he intended when his case was called for trial, to "insist on a complete probe so that I may be vindicated."

Washington was not in conrt, but the district attorney said that he will at once get into communication with him, and if he can come to town will move the case for trial some time next week.

This announcement seemed satisfactory to Ulrich who declared that his witnesses are prepared to show that Dr. Washington was "loitering" about the house at 11½ East Sixty-third street for more than an hour before the alleged assault was committed.

When Ulrich was asked regarding the charge brought by a woman now residing in East Orange, N. J., that she is his wife, and whether he is married to the woman who has appeared in the present case as Mrs. Ulrich, alleging that Dr. Washington accosted her as she took her dog out for an airing, he referred the questioners to his lawyers. The latter said:

"The friends of Dr. Washington seem to be laying great stress on this revelation to vindicate him in connection with what happened three weeks ago. We are, however, willing to have the entire matter fully aired, and think it will not help the doctor very much. This case is going on to a finish."

Dr. Washington is reported as the purchaser of a handsome summer home in an exclusive residential section near Huntingdon, Long Island.

DEMOCRATIC LEADERS AT BURLINGTON APR. 5

Leaders of the new Democracy in New Jersey believe the keynote of next year's Presidential campaign will be sounded at the Jeffersonian dinner and mass meeting of the Burlington County Democratic Club, which will be held at the Auditorium Hotel and theatre at Burlington next Wednesday evening, and at which Speaker Champ Clark, Governor Woodrow Wilson, United Statese Senator James E. Martine, William Jennings Bryan and former Mayor Frank S. Katenbach, of Trenton, will be the principal speakers.

"The Duty of Democrats" will be the subject discussed by Speaker Clark, and it is expected that his discourse will directly bear upon the coming Presidential campaign, in which there are many who believe that Champ Clark himself will figure as a candidate.

To Jerseymen the speech of Governor Wilson promises to be of the utmost interest and importance. Speaking in the same theatre, Mr Wilson, when a candidate, promised to come back and talk over the post-election issues with the voters of Burlington county, and he has promised to make good with the theme, "Questions of the Day." This address will have to do almost entirely with the legislative history of the last few weeks.

The subject selected by Mr. Bryan has even the manager of the meeting puzzled. He has wired the committee he will speak on "Watchman, What of the Night?" When entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Birch a few days ago Mr. Bryan agreed to address the Jeffersonian meeting, and was asked to select a subject that should be a message of hope to Democrats of the nation.

EXPECT OPEN WAR BY TWO SENATORS

The closing of the session of the Legislature will be marked by a lively controversy in the upper branch, with Senators Prince and Frelinghuysen as the principals, and in the Assembly as well as in the Senate there will be a bitter fight over the military court martial retirement proposed, with the State Military Board and other national guard organizations divided on the subject.

The controversy between Senator Prince, who is the Republican floor leader, and Senator Frelinghuysen, who was presiding officer last year, involves the Gubernatorial nomination of the party. Colonel Frelinghuysen aspired to the office last fall and was much chagrined at the poor showing he made in the State convention which nominated Mr. Lewis. He is now more determined than ever to go after the nomination in 1913.

In opposition to this is the disposition of the Republican leaders to give Mr. Lewis another chance. They feel that he would have won the last year but for the nomination of Woodrow Wilson, and are confident that no other Democrat can beat him. Naturally Senator Prince is for Mr. Lewis, for both are from the same county, Passaic.

This has led Senator Prince to oppose the efforts of Senator Frelinghuysen to obtain the appointment of a general investigating committee, with himself at the head. It is charged that as head of the special School Investigating Committee Senator Frelinghuysen has aimed to further his personal ambitions, and it is feared that he would do the same if he were allowed to manage a county investigation campaign. Senator Prince and Senator Frelinghuysen have had several tilts lately in party conferences, and now an open break between them is expected.

She was alone; a letter she had been writing lay unfinished on the queer little desk near the shaded window, and her pen had fallen across the paper. On the round table in the middle of the small bare room there stood a plain white vase full of cornflowers and poppies, and Margaret was standing there, rearranging them, or pretending to do so.

She was looking her very best, and as she raised her eyes and greeted him with a friendly smile, Mr. Van Torp thought she had never been so handsome before.

Margaret held out her hand and he took it; and though its touch and her friendly smile were like a taste of heaven just then, he pressed her fingers neither too much nor too little, and his face betrayed no emotion.

"It's very kind of you to receive me, Miss Donne," he said quietly.

"I think it's very kind of you to come and see me," Margaret answered. "Come and sit down and tell me how you got here—and why!"

"Well," he answered slowly, as they seated themselves side by side on the hard green sofa. "I don't suppose I can explain, so that you'll understand, but I'll try. Different kinds of things brought me. I heard you were here from Lady Maud, and I thought perhaps I might have an opportunity for a little talk. And then—oh, I don't know. I've seen everything worth seeing except a battle and 'Parsifal,' and as it seemed so easy, and you were here, I thought I'd have a look at the opera, since I can't see the fight."

Margaret laughed a little.

"I hope you will like it," she said. "Have you a good seat?"

"I haven't got a ticket yet," answered Mr. Van Torp, in blissful ignorance.

"No seat!" The prima donna's surprise was almost dramatic. "But how in the world do you expect to get one now? Don't you know that the seats for 'Parsifal' are all taken months beforehand?"

"Are they really?" He was very calm about it. "Then I suppose I shall have to get a ticket from a speculator. I don't see anything hard about that."

"My dear friend, there are no speculators here, and there are no tickets to be had. You might as well ask for the moon!"

"I can stand, then. I'm not afraid of getting tired."

"There are no standing places at all! No one is allowed to go in who has not a seat. A week ago you might possibly have picked up one in Munich, given up by some one at the last moment, but such chances are jumped at! I wonder that you even got a place to sleep!"

"Well, it's not much of a place," said Mr. Van Torp, thoughtfully. "There's one room the size of a horse-box, one bed, one basin, one pitcher and one towel, and I've brought my valet with me. I've concluded to let him sleep while I'm at the opera, and he'll sit up when I want to go to bed. Box and Cox. I don't know what he'll sit on, for there's no chair, but he's got to sit."

Margaret laughed, for he amused her.

"I suppose you're exaggerating a little bit," she said. "It's not really quite so bad as that, is it?"

"It's worse. There's a lunatic in the next room who calls me E. Sharp through the door, and has lodged a complaint already because I whistled while I was shaving. It's not a very good hotel. Who is E. Sharp, anyway? Maybe that was the name of the last man who occupied that room. I don't know, but I don't like the idea of having a mad German pianist for a neighbor. He may get in while I'm asleep and think I'm the piano, and hammer the life out of me, the way they do. I've seen a perfectly new piano wrecked in a single concert by a fellaw who didn't look as if he had the strength to kick a mosquito. They're so deceptive, pianists! Nervous men are often like that, and most pianists are nothing but nerves and hair."

He amused her, for she had never seen him in his present mood.

"E sharp is a note," she said. "On the piano it's the same as F natural. You must have been whistling something your neighbor knew, and you made a mistake, and nervous musicians really suffer if one does that. But it must have been something rather complicated, to have an E sharp in it! It wasn't 'Suwanee Rriver,' nor the 'Washington Post,' either! Indeed, I should rather like to know what it was."

"Old tunes I picked up when I was cow-punching, years ago," answered Mr. Van Torp. "I don't know where they came from, for I never asked, but they're not like other tunes, that's certain, and I like them. They remind me of the old days out west, when I had no money and nothing to worry about."

"I'm very fond of whistling, too," Margaret said. "I study all my parts by whistling them, so as to save my voice."

"I had no idea that was

"If He's the Fellow We used to Call Levi Longlegs on the Ranch."

possible."

"Quite. Perhaps you whistle very well. Won't you let me hear the tune that irritated your neighbor, the pianist? Perhaps I know it, too."

"Well," said Mr. Van Torp, "I suppose I could. I should be a little shy before you," he added, quite naturally. "If you'll excuse me, I'll just go and stand before the window so that I can't see you. Perhaps I can manage it that way."

Margaret, who was bored to the verge of collapse on the off-days, thought him much nicer than he had formerly been, and she liked his perfect simplicity.

"Stand anywhere you like," she said, "but let me hear the tune."

Van Torp rose and went to the window and she looked quietly at his square figure and his massive, sandy head and his strong neck. Presently he began to whistle, very softly and perfectly in tune. Many a street-boy could do as well, no doubt, and Mrs. Rushmore would have called it a vulgar accomplishment, but the magnificent prima donna was too true a musician, as well as a singer, not to take pleasure in a sweet sound, even if it were produced by a street-boy.

But as Mr. Van Torp went on, she opened her eyes very wide and held her breath. There was no mistake about it; he was whistling long pieces from "Parsifal," as far as it was possible to convey an idea of such music by such means. Margaret had studied it before coming to Bayreuth, in order to understand it better; she had now already heard it once, and had felt the greatest musical emotion of her life—one that had stirred other emotions, too, strange ones quite new to her.

She held her breath and listened, and her eyes that had been wide open in astonishment, slowly closed again in pleasure, and presently, when he reached the "Good Friday" music, her own matchless voice floated out with her unconscious breath, in such perfect octaves with his high whistling that at first he did not understand; but when he did, the rough hard man shivered suddenly and steadied himself against the window-sill, and Margaret's voice went on alone, with faintly breathed words and then without them, following the instrumentation to the end of the scene, beyond what he had ever heard.

Then there was silence in the room, and neither of the two moved for some moments, but at last Van Torp turned, and came back.

"Thank you," he said, in a low voice.

Margaret smiled and passed her hand over her eyes quickly, as if to dispel a vision she had seen. Then she spoke.

"Do you really not know what that music is?" she asked. "Really, really?"

"Oh, quite honestly I don't!"

"You're not joking? You're not laughing at me?"

"I?" He could not understand. "I shouldn't dare!" he said.

"You've been whistling some of "Parsifal," some of the most beautiful music that ever was written—and you whistle mavellously, for it's anything but easy! Where in the world did you learn it? Don't tell me that those are 'old tunes' you picked up on a California ranch!"

"It's true, all the same," Van Torp answered.

He told her of the two foreigners who used to whistle together in the evenings, and how one was supposed to have been shot and the other had disappeared, no one had known whither, nor had cared.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

A show which is attracting general attention this year from lovers of both music and comedy, is "A Trip to Africa," in which Madame Sissieretta Jones, the original Black Patti, supported by the Black Patti Musical Comedy Company, the strongest troupe of Afro-American actors ever assembled, is playing this year. The abilities of Madame Jones are well known to the American pubic and of her it is sufficient to say that she is in her zenith as a singer. The co-star with Madame Jones this season is Jolly John Larkins, who plays the leading comedy role, assuming a double part that of Ras Jenkins and King Rastus. A number of well known colored stars are in their supporting company and number among them, Edward Dorsey, Jennie Peal, Will Cook, Thomas Sadlsi, James H. Gray, H. Morgan Prince, Ada Alexander, Ruby Taylor, Zenie Hunter, Emma Prince and numerous other high class Afro-American performers. There is also a large chorus, composed of good singers. Among the song hits are "All I Want is My Honey Boy," "I Ain't No Fool," "Boola, Bolla," "In the Bright Moonlight," "I Wish I was in Heaven," and "Honey I Want You." This attraction will be at the Plainfield theatre tonight.

PROTESTED AGAINST SCHOOL HOUSE SITE

A further conference was held at the regular meeting of the Board of Education last evening, with the committee of Kensington avenue property owners who are protesting against the school site proposed by the board. The committee was composed of H. McWilliams, H. G. Phillips, Philip Suffern, Noah C. Barnhart and Mr. Lawrence. An apparent misunderstanding as to the position of the board on certain sites was cleared up and a better understanding arrived at than at the meeting held a month ago when the first protest against the proposed site was made by the residents of that locality.

Vice-President W. S. Tyler presided in the absence of Leander Lovell. He made clear to the objectors that the Board was exercising all its patience and intended giving the protestants every consideration in the matter. He declared that the members of the board had misunderstood certain statements made by one of the original committee and that since the matter of proposed sites for the new school had been cleared up so far as one in question was concerned that the board would be glad to receive a written statement of other possible locations proposed by the residents and take the matter under further consideration, although the need of beginning operations at an early date was obvious.

Mr. McWilliams acted as spokesman for the committee and made it clear that the protest was in nowise made to hamper the board in securing for the city the needed schoolhouse. It was the opinion, he said that other sites, some of which were mentioned would answer the purposes of the board just as well as the one already selected and besides, the committee had practically arranged to take Kensington avenue site off the board's hands if a solution to the problem could be found.

Among the routine matters discussed by the board was the letter of Miss Mabelle C. Phillips, in which the board was asked to provide a visiting nurse for the poor school children and which was referred to Superintendent Maxson for a later report. The petition of Chales Suhr, Jr., for a decision on the music contract for the commencement season decided in favor of Mr. Suhr, Dr. Maxson saying that the music was eminently satisfactory last year.

Bills amouting to $1,300 were ordered paid and the following communication from the principals of the schools was read:

"We the undersigned principals desired on behalf of the teachers in our building and also in our own behalf, to express to the board our great appreciation of the generous treatment accorded the teachers' petition for a revision of the salary schedule. May we also take this occasion to express our gratitude for the helpful, considerate attitude which the board has ever shown toward its teachers in other matters than salary.

"There are few cities where the teachers hold their Board of Education in as high regard as do the teachers of Plainfield.

"Signed: M. E. Humpston, Genevieve Petrie, Anna M. Day, Noel J. Bullock, Flora I. Griffin."

The balance reported in the hands of the Custodian of School Funds was $25,934.19. Bids for school supplies were received from J. L. Hammett & Co., $1,645.50, and F. N. Little & Co., $1,771.50. Advertising for bids for the coal supply was ordered and April 12 set as the date for opening the bids. Bills amounting to $1,300 were ordered paid.

A scheme by which it was expected that the board might save money in their coal consumption was suggested by an engineer from New York and was taken under advisement by the committee on supplies. The scheme suggested was the simple one of testing the coal by a process which will denote the exact amount of ash and other constituents of anthracite and by this means select only the coal which will give the greatest heat. It is possible that the Board may give a test or two in order to satisfy itself of the practicability of the scheme.

DUNELLEN SCHOOL BOARD RE-ORGANIZES.

The Dunellen Board of Education met last night for the purpose of reorganizing for the present year. A. F. Todd was re-elected president, W. S. Frederick vice-president and A. J. Hamley district clerk.

The following committees were appointed: Finance, T. W. Day, A. J. Hamley and W. S. Frederick; teachers, T. W. Day, F. R. Wynkoop and R. F. Bogardus; text books and supplies, A. J. Hamley, A. F. Todd and M. R. Dayton; buildings and repairs, W. S. Frederick, George Cameron and S. W. Neilor.

Endorse Brodhead Bill.

A spirited meeting of the Democratic Club held in the club rooms last evening, resulted in an endorsement of Assemblyman Brodhead's bill, No. 529, and of the Plainfielder's work in general since he became assemglyman. Resolutions to this effect were drawn up and unanimously adopted. The matter of an increase of salary to City Judge William G. DeMeza, was debated, but opinion was divided.

WILSON IS HAILED AS NEXT PRESIDENT

Governor Woodrow Wilson was mentioned again Sunday in connection with the Presidency of the United States at the annual session of the New Jersey Conference of Charities and Correction in Alexander Hall, Princeton. Dr. Woods Hutchinson, the physician and magazine writer, was the speaker, and he made the reference in a preface to his lecture on "The Elimination of the Unfit."

Governor Wilson took the suggestion with a smile, but made no comment on it.

Dr. Hutchinson also made a plea for moderate publicity in regard to medical matters in opposition to the old custom of mere 'silence, powders and pills." He showed that times had changed with regard to the medical and other professions.

"The difference now is," he asserted, "that the doctors are beginning to preach and the preachers are beginning to practice."

Quoting from figures he had himself collected, Dr. Hutchinson declared that only five people in a thousand, or one-half of 1 per cent., are ranked as criminals. He referred to Magistrate Corrigan's statements about the pickpockets, yeggmen, burglars, and other disreputable characters at large in New York, and remarked:

"Imagine a health officer making such a report of disease to the press'."

Governor Wilson spoke extemporaneously on "Love or Human Fellowship, the Law and Taxes." One defect in government, he declared, was that the taxes came from the poor people, and not from their wealthier neighbors.

"The poor people are squeezed and squeezed," he asserted, and his utterance was greeted with cheers.

The first speaker of the afternoon was Dr. Seymour L. Cromwell, President of the association, who attacked the United States pension system, and declared it was responsible for a recent large increase in taxes.

"These pensions," he said, "extend to the third and fourth generation."

The Charities Association drew almost as large a crowd as William Jennings Bryan several Sundays ago, when he spoke from the same platform. Students and townspeople attended in good numbers, in addition to the delegates.

The convention lasts till Tuesday, and a special meeting will be held tonight at 8 o'clock. The housing problem, as applied to the masses of poor people, will be discussed tomorrow morning, and that afternoon Prof. Royal Meeker of the Princeton faculty will preside and describe conditions among the people in rural communities. Prof. Meeker has made a close study of economic conditions among the laboring classes, and his talk, it is expected, will prove interesting.

The Gloucester County Hostorical Society has accepted an invitation to hold its next meeting at Grenloch.

When a cake of ice fell on his hand, James Concord, forty-five years old, of 433 Philip street, Camden, had several badly lacerated fingers dressed at Cooper Hospital, Sunday.

Charles D. Krause, who was elected to council at Absecon by a single vote after a vigorous campaign against Thomas Goldenberg, brother of Prosecutor Goldenberg, has tendered his resignation, giving ill health as his reason.

Citizens of Millville were surprised Saturday to learn from the inspector of the Board of Health that there had been in the city during the past year twenty cases of smallpox. The matter had been kept secret by the Board of Health.

The barking of a dog at 5 o'clock Sunday morning aroused Dr. Alonzo Smith at Malaga, to find his barn on fire. Before he could dress, the whole building was enveloped in flames, completely destroying carriages, harness, feed and two valuable horses. The origin of the fire is a mystery. The loss is estimated at $1,200.

Among the distinguished visitors at Atlantic City, Sunday was Secretary of State Philander C. Knox, who motored there from Philadelphia in the morning and spent the day with a party of friends on the Boardwalk and at the Hotel Chelsea, where his daughter, Mrs. J. R. Tendell, has procured reservations over the Easter holidays.

Detective Robert Miller, who was rushed to the Pacific Coast with a bill of indictment to take into custody Alonzo Reed, son of wealthy parents, who left his daughter and wife two years ago, has returned to Atlantic City without the fugitive. When he arrived at Yakima, Wash., Reed had been released, and he traced him to Seattle, where he lost the track, Reed having left the country by steamer.

Daniel Hatton, aged sixty years formerly of Camden, who recently moved to Oaklyn, was struck and killed Sunday by a trolley car at his home. Mr. Hatton had just alighted from an eastbound car and stepped directly in front of a speeding trolley car bound for Camden. He was dragged nearly thirty feet and was badly crushed and mangled. It took considerable time to get his body from underneath the car.

Because the death rate of Trenton has exceeded the birth rate, the officials of the Board of Health are aroused and say that it is the belief that children are born of whom no report is made. An edict has been issued by the board and unless the physicians promptly report all births the police will be asked to take action. In the last year 2,061 deaths and but 1,538 births were recorded, and the board officials say that they are positive that the births really exceeded the deaths.

PICTURES SENATOR

Amusing Sketch of "Farmer Orator" James E. Martine's Characteristics.

HIS ORATORY PEDESTRIAN.

In His Gestures the United States Senator "Gives a Correct Imitation of Windmill Geared Both Ways."

The Saturday Evening Post in its issue tomorrow will publish an article of interest concerning United States Senator James E. Martine, on the title page of "Who's Who-and Why." An excellent picture of the Senator adorns the page, beneath which appears the inscription: "When he pounds on a desk and demands action he is Titanic." The article concerning the Senator in part follows:

Neatly arranged on his what-not in the parlor of his farmhouse in Plainfield, New Jersey, James E. Martine, the new Senator from that state, has an imposing collection of belts, cups, medals, decorations and other insignia testifying eloquently to the fact that he holds all Eastern records for being defeated for office.

Once, in the early days, he did squeak into the Common Council and recently he bulged into the Senate; but between the two there is a line of endeavor to become the servant of the people untarnished by a single victory. Time and again he has flung his banner to the breeze and marched boldly forth for the suffrages of the people; and time and again the people have said; "Not yet, Jimmie—not yet!" and have firmly jammed the iron heel of defeat in the immediate vicinity of his Adam's apple.

On many successive election days the voters of New Jersey, sitting at breakfast, have scanned the morning papers, yawned and announced: "Election day—well—well—how time does fly! I suppose we'll have to go out and beat Martine for something." And the supposition was always correct, for Martine was always running and the duty was always to be done. Twice he evinced a desire to go to Congress, and both times it got no further than the desire stage. Three times he stormed the ramparts of the state senate and three times he was left without the breast-works. Four times he concluded they needed him in the New Jersey legislature and four times he was told to guess again. Twice at state conventions they gave him the hook when he wanted to run for governor; and between these essays they turned him down for sheriff and for mayor.

And you never heard him talk? Still, the chances are all in your favor if you will drop into Washington any day during his service and get a seat in a Senate gallery. Not that that is so extremely important, for you probably will hear him as you come up the hill; but it might be as well to go into a gallery, for he does a good many things, when he talks, that add to the ensemble. He has the finest circulation gesture North of the Ohio River. He can whirl his right arm forward and his left arm backward at one and the same time, giving a correct imitation of a windmill geared two ways. When he pounds on a desk and demands action he is Titanic.

Still these are mere mannerisms. The distinguished feature of Senator Martine's oratory is pedestrian. As he warms up to his denunciation of existing abuses he begins to stride back and forth like a caged lion—I think it is like a caged lion—maybe tiger might be better; anyhow, like something that strides up and down. And when he gets to striding you'd just better believe he skins 'em and hangs their quivering hides on the palings! One time, when he was making a speech in a New Jersey village, he got to striding back and forth on the platform and strode off the end, turning a graceful double flipflap and lighting on the back of his head. He was immediately rescued from his undignified position by an enthusiastic audience and set back upon the platform, where is was noted with intense satisfaction, by those who were following him, not only that he did not lose the thread of his argument but that the only abbreviation of the speech occurred at the exact moment when he lit—and that consisted merely of the elision of two syllables from the expression "ruled by the money god, Mammon," and detracted very little from the effectiveness of his argument.

PASTORS ASSIGNED

Bishop Warren Returns Two Local M. E. Ministers and Tranfers One.

REV. MR. CAIN COMES HERE.

Great Surprise Over Appointment Given Rev. W. C. O'Donnell—Rev. Mr. Shoop Goes to Pittsburg Conference.

Bishop Henry Warren, presiding at the closing session of the Newark Conference yesterday, announced the appointments for the year and, as stated in The Daily Press, Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson was returned to the First M. E. church and Rev. C. S. Kemble was sent back to the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, while Rev. C. C. Cain, formerly of Oxford, was transferred to Grace M. E. church to succeed Rev. Ora J. Shoop, who goes to the Mount Washington M. E. church, Pittsburg.

Mr. Shoop has been at Grace M. E. church two years, coming here from Cranford. The church to which he goes at Mount Washington, Pittsburg, has a membership of 550 with 600 members in the Sunday school. Its property is valued at $62,000. Mr. Shoop will succeed Rev. D. C. Dorchester, who has been there two years, and who will become pastor of St. Mark's church on Staten Island. Mr. Dorchester will succeed Rev. Alfred Evans, who has been transferred to Bound Brook to succeed Rev. Perry Bascom, who has been made conference evangelist.

Perhaps one of the greatest surprises in connection with the appointments was that of sending Rev. William O'Donnell, formerly of this city, from St. Paul's church, Newark, one of the most important charges in the conference, to Woodbridge, one of the smallest. There has been no attempt made to explain this change. It is rumored that Mr. O'Donnell will not remain at Woodbridge; that he is slated for a professorship in Goucher College, Baltimore, Md., a position for which he is well qualified.

Rev. Charles E. Scudder, formerly of North Plainfield, who married Miss Jennie Crossley, daughter of Justice Crossley, was sent to Trinity church, Staten Island, where he will be called upon to erect a new edifice, which Rev. W. E. Palmer, last year's pastor, refused to do, there being a difference of opinion regarding the site. Mr. Palmer has been sent to Perth Amboy. Rev. E. C. Dutcher, formerly of Dunellen, has been sent from Harrison to Calvary church, Paterson. Rev. W. A. Knox is returned to his charge at Dunellen.

FAREWELL RECEPTION FOR REV. ORA J. SHOOP

The Ladies' Aid Society of Grace M. E. church gave a farewell reception to Rev. and Mrs. Ora J. Shoop at the church, last evening. Despite the disagreeable weather the edifice was filled with members and friends. There was an informal program comprising piano duets by Miss Alva Force and Miss Woodruff; flute solos by Walter Sampson, accompanied by Miss Alice Carroll, and the choir rendered several selections.

William J. Conroy, who was in charge of the program, introduced S. S. Swackhamer, who made some felicitious remarks concerning Mr. and Mrs. Shoop and wishing them success in their new field, after commenting on their good work here. Mr. Shoop responded in a happy vein, thanking the members for their earnest co-operation during his pastorate. Refreshments were served during a social hour.

VICTIM IDENTIFIED

Youth Who Met His Death on R. R. Tracks Was Frank Angelo.

SAD SCENE AT UNDERTAKER'S.

Young Man Was on His Way From Westfield to Visit Friends Here When He was Cut to Pieces by Engine.

Missing their son since Monday afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Angelo, of 509 Central avenue, Westfield, came to this city last evening and identified the seventeen year old boy lying dead at Cole's under taking establishment. A pathetic scene followed the viewing of the body. Mrs. Angelo threw herself across the coffin screaming the name of her son, Frank, and lamenting the day he took it into his head to get a day off from the Aeolian factory at Garwood and make a visit to friends in Plainfield.

Frank Angelo, the dead boy, was a model son, according to his parents and had always been dutiful and good to them. On Monday he asked the superintendent of the factory where he worked for the afternoon off and securing the permission went home, changed his clothes and told his mother that he was going to Plainfield to call on some friends in West Fourth street.

Instead of taking the trolley or train it is believed that the youth decided to walk along the tracks of the Central Railroad and it is thought that in sidestepping a train coming toward him he walked deliberately in front of another coming from behind. The body was badly mangled when found and as nothing in the clothing indicated where the boy lived or what his name might be it was thought to be impossible to identify him.

Mr. and Mrs. Angelo are well-to-do Italians engaged in business in Westfield. The body was taken there today after having been viewed by County Physician F. W. Westcott. The funeral will be held on Friday, services being in Holy Trinity church, Westfield.

SALVATION ARMY STILL NEEDS NEARLY $2,000

The funds being raised for cancelling the mortgage on the Salvation Army headquarters is assuming large enough proportions to warrant Captain Hewitt in believing that the whole amount will be subscribed before the time limit expires on Saturday. Yesterday the total amount contributed had reached $5,100 which leaves but $1,900 to be obtained. The anniversary celebration of the Army, which will be held on Sunday in various churches, promises to be a big affair.

The program for the various services to be held includes a concert, by the staff band on Saturday evening at the Y. M. C. A. On Sunday morning the band with a number of officers of the Army will conduct services in Temple Baptist church. Colonel Jenkins will speak at the Scotch Plains Baptist church and in the afternoon the great service of the day will be held in the First Baptist church. Here Commander Eva Booth will speak on "Bridging the Gulf."

In the evening Commander Booth will speak in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church on "Omnipotence Ungloved." At the Park Avenue Baptist church the same evening Colonel William Peart will conduct a service, while Colonel Damon will preach in the First Methodist church.

Given a Surprise Party.

Miss Sophie Vogel and Emil Vogel, of Dewey Park, were given a surprise party at their home, Monday evening. The time was spent in playing games, singing and enjoying instrumental music, after which refreshments were served. There were about forty young people present from Dunellen, Bound Brook, Morristown, Elizabeth and this city.

The Geran Bill.

In speaking to a correspondent at Trenton this morning Senator Bradley declared that after certain inaccuracies in the Geran elections bill had been eliminated it would be passed by the Senate. The Senate committee has discovered that the necessary changes involve considerable work.

NO STAR CHAMBER

State Charities Societies Oppose Making Their Meetings Exclusive.

LOCAL DELEGATES PRESENT.

Prof. Royal Meeker, Willet M. Hays and Lawrence Vieller Make Addresses at Princeton Session.

One of the largest and what is believed to have been the most interesting of all the conferences of the New Jersey Charities and Correction Societies came to a close yesterday afternoon at Princeton, and when Professor Royal Meeker, of Newark, had finished his speech on "Living Conditions in Rural Communities" there were several who gasped and wondered whether such things were possible. Among other things done at the conference and perhaps the most important, was the refusal of the delegates to allow the passage of resolutions which would have had a tendency to make the association a political one.

Hugh F. Fox, of this city, headed the Plainfield delegation from the Charities Organization Society, among whom were Miss Mabelle C. Phillips, Miss Holly, Mrs. J. K. Meyers, Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, Mrs. Frank Hyde, Mr. and Mrs. Champlain L. Riley, Miss Adelaide Ball, William S. Tyler, H. L. De Forest, Miss Zoe Bateman, Mrs. Thomas Day, Mr. and Mrs. George P. Mellick, Mrs. W. H. Murray, Mrs. Dexter Tiffany and Miss Florence Tweedy.

Strenuous objection arose when certain resolutions were introduced which would make the proceedings of the united body a star chamber affair and it was finally decided to sidetrack all such things and permit the public to enter into the discussions of subjects which might come up in the future. After the conference had adjourned it was discovered that the move to make the conference a public one had met with the approval of nearly every delegate present.

Speeches on "The Housing Problem," a topic introduced by Lawrence Vieller, director of the National Association,. took up the morning session and in the afternoon Assistant Secretary of Agriculture William M. Hays spoke on "Country Life."

An interesting feature of the day was the exhibits shown of work done in the various correctional institutions, more especially those of Jamesburg and Rahway, in which manual training is one of the methods adopted to help the inmates help themselves. Some of the work shown was truly remarkable.

COLORED INDUSTRIAL HOME FOR THE PLAINS

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire and Rev. F. St. John Fitch, of this city, attended the meeting of the East Association of Baptist Minisers, held at the Fairmount Baptist church, Newark, yesterday. The whole day was given up to a general discussion of matters looking to an advancement of the interests of the Baptists in the East Association. Mr. Maguire was made a member of the program committee for the coming year.

During the conference, a committee of five colored Baptist ministers appeared seeking an endorsement of a proposition to establish what will be known at the Alpha Industrial Association. This Association has purchased 135 acres of land at Scotch Plains, upon which will be erected suitable buildings and work of an industrial nature will be carried on among the colored people. This work will be chiefly educational in character. The East Association listened to the proposition and appointed a committee to investigate and present the matter at the meeting of the East New Jersey Baptist Association to be held in the Parmly Memorial Baptist church, Jersey City, on June 6.

PARK COMEDY CLUB'S PRODUCTION MAY 18-19

Two dates originally announced for the presentation of the four-act comedy "The Henrietta," by the Park Comedy Club, have been changed from May 12-13 to Thursday and Friday evenings, May 18-19. Three rehearsals are being held a week for the forthcoming production under the personal direction of Fred C. Patterson, of New York, who, it will be remembered staged last year's success, "Trelawney of the Wells."

This year's cast of "The Henrietta" camprises many of those who appeared last year with such success in "Trelawney," and it is said that even now the rehearsals are beginning to indicate a finished production. The play this year will be given under the auspices of the Anti-Tuberculosis League of Plainfield and North Plainfield and with this popular charity as an object the social as well as financial success of the undertaking is assured.

MAYOR ENJOYS LAUGH AT COUNCIL'S EXPENSE

Because the Common Council passed several resolutions over the veto of Mayor G. W. V. Moy, His Honor is enjoying a good laugh today. Some of these resolutions carried with them an expenditure of money and the Mayor says that some of the councilmen evidently thought that they had sufficient power to put them through without the Mayor's signature.

"No evidence of indebtedness against the city shall be valid unless signed by him," and in this case the "him" referred to is the Mayor. Admitting that the evidence of indebtedness is a bill, according to the city charter no bill is good until approved by the Mayor, Mr. Moy says, and no one can get any money from the city unless the Mayor signs the warrant and approves the bill. It is provided, Mr. Moy asserts, that the Mayor must be satisfied not only as to all facts in the case, but the law as well.

The court decision on this question declares: "That the Mayor has supervisory inspection of all matters pertaining to the expenditure of the people's money."

There are now several bills awaiting payment, but which are held up because the Mayor will not approve them, the Common Council deciding to take the matter in its own hands.

STATION AGENT SCARED; HAD YOUTHS ARRESTED.

The agent at the Netherwood station of the Jersey Central got anxious yesterday afternoon when two young men took refuge from the rain under the station roof and telephoned to police headquarters that two suspicious characters were loitering there. The two young fellows were Martin Lavelle, 22, and Thomas Costello, 21, both of Whitehaven, Pa., and employees of the Pennsylvania railroad.

They were simply waiting for a chance to get a trolley car and had no evil intentions. Their records were investigated by Detective Sergeant John Flynn and this morning Judge De Meza dismissed them.

Rice Failed to Sing.

Owing to the illness of his wife, Leon Rice, who was to have given a song recital at Y. M. C. A. Hall last evening, could not appear. It was announced this afternoon by Secretary Parker that Mr. Rice would certainly sing on Monday evening next. All those having tickets with last night's date upon them may consider the invitation as simply extended for a few days.

Proctor's Good Show.

McBride, Purcell and Shelley, a funny trio, are presenting a fine sketch at Proctor's theatre, entitled "Three Men in a Boat;" while "The Women of Tomorrow," a clever up-to-date burlesque on woman's suffrage, is a scream. Barrett and Scanlon, comedy acrobats, have a good act and Hogan and Westcott, singers and dancer, are good.

County A. O. H. Building.

The Union County Board of the Ancient Order Hibernians at a meeting in Elizabeth, Monday night, considered a proposition and plans for the erection of a building in Elizabeth for the county association. The county board will report further on the matter at a meeting to be held May 1.

Will Meet the Hounds.

The Watchung Hunt Club will not hold its mid-week chase this afternoon on account of the weather. On Saturday afternoon the riders will meet at the New Brooklyn pond at 3 o'clock.

JUDGE UNDERPAID

City Court Magistrate to Ask Police Board Tonight for $1,500.

SALARIES HIGHER ELSEWHERE.

Mayor Supports City Judge's Request—Board Expected to Rearrange Police Posts—May Fill a Vacancy.

City Judge William G. DeMeza will appear before the Councilmanic Police Board tonight and make a request for an increase in his salary from $1,000 to $1,500. The increased amount of work which he has been called upon to perform in connection with the duties of his office makes him feel fully warranted, he says, in asking for more salary. Since January 1, he has disposed of an unusually large number of cases of all sorts, there being a total of 300 arrests. He also collected fines amounting to about $320.

Judge DeMeza is required to give a greater part of his time to business of the city court, the hours he puts in at police headquarters does not comprise all his duties, for he is obliged often to devote a considerable amount of time in his office to the city's work. It is cited that Judge William Newcorn receives a salary of $1,500 and he sits but once a week in the District Court. It is understood that Mayor G. W. V. Moy favors an increase of $500 in Judge DeMeza's salary.

Elizabeth pays its city judge $2,000 and gives him a clerk at a salary of $1,200. Perth Amboy pays $1,600 and New Brunswick pays a like salary, Judge DeMeza is often required to spend money out of his pocket and is put to expenses which are not returned to him through his salary.

Another important matter to be taken up this evening at the board meeting, will be the re-arrangement of the posts of the city to meet present conditions. The present arrangement has been in effect since the time that Chief Grant was in office and in a great many respects are all out of proportion to present day needs.

The police board may decide to fill a position of roundsman, now vacant and no doubt some action will be taken in the case of Thomas O'Gorman. The plan is to drop him and put someone else in his place as driver and janitor at police headquarters. There may also be started the investigation regarding the silverware case, as previously announced by Mayor Moy.

LIQUOR'S INFLUENCE MADE McELROY RASH.

William McElroy, of 120 Madison avenue, tried yesterday noon to force his way into a saloon on East Front street while under the influence of liquor. He became so boisterous that the proprietor was compelled to call Patrolman Meyers to arrest the man. Judge De Meza discharged McElroy this morning with a warning.

The court declared after discharging McElroy that he thought it his duty to protect business men from obstreperous people and as the saloonkeepers are taxpayers and are entitled to every protection he would do his part to guard them from undesirable patrons.

SMASHED TRAFFIC LAMP; PUNISHMENT AWAITS HIM.

A local resident was arrested this morning at 1:30 o'clock for deliberately breaking with his walking stick the traffic light at North and Park avenues, will have to answer to a complaint made by Chief Kiely in the city court. According to Patrolman Nolan, who made the arrest, The man walked up to the green light and with one swipe of his cane smashed the globe. The man offered to appear at police headquarters this morning and pay the damage. The chief had ordered the man's appearance in court.

WEAK, WEARY WOMEN.

When the back aches and throbs

When night brings no rest nosleep
When urinary disorders set in Women's lot is a ewary one.
There is a way to escape these woes.
Doan's Kidney Pills should be used.
Have cured women here in Plainfield.
This is one Plainfield woman's testimony.

Mrs. Anthony Wahl, R. F. D. No 1, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I had such distressing pains in my back that I could hardly stand and it was out of the question for me to stoop. I was all crippled up and I knew perfectly well that my kidneys were the cause of my trouble. A neighbor recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to me and on her suggestion, I used them. They gave me almost immediate relief and three boxes changed me from chronic sufferer to a healthy woman. I still take Doan's Kidney Pills occasionally when a cold settles on my kidneys and they act as a preventive of any serious recurrence of my former trouble. You may publish this account of my experience for the benefit of other kidney sufferers."

AMONG OUR NEIGHBORS

WESTFIELD.

Work was commenced Monday sprinkling the county roads with a tar preparation to lay the dust. The same complaint is being made as before, the crosswalks are sprinkled with the tar and the preparation is carried into the stores and houses much to the disgust of the housekeepers.

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought

All of the Westfield journeymen painters went out on a strike Monday for $3.75 per eight-hour day. The matter was not settled until late yesterday afternoon, when the bosses agreed to pay the advance.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Several of the early gardeners are beginning to wish that they had held off planting for a week or two longer.

Mrs. James C. Lyons, of Westfield avenue, is visiting her neice, Mrs. Charles Smith, at Westfield.

The members of the B. Y. P. U., of the Baptist church, held a business meeting last night, in the parlors of the church. Owing to the storm but few of the members were out.

Samuel Johnson, of Front street, who has been at Worcester, Mass., for several months, entering a press for the Walter Scott Co., has returned home.

The weekly prayer and praise meeting of the Baptist church will be held tonight in the church parlors.

Willaim Jamison has moved from Stanbury avenue, to the Seeley cottage, on Bartle avenue.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Dr. Tuttle has returned from Brooklyn and taken possession of his place on Greenbrook road, which has been occupied by Vincent Manahan. The latter has moved to his newly purchased house at Lincoln place and Second street.

Owing to the fact that some of the members were absent, only routine business was transacted at last night's meeting of the Dunellen Board of Education. The time was devoted to the reading of reports and the passing of bills.

Contractor George Huff is engaged in excavating for the cellar of the garage to be erected on North avenue, adjoining the Dealaman property. The building will be of brick and concrete construction.

The local auditors of the Dunellen Building and Loan Association accounts will probably finish their work today. The auditors are George T. Schenck, Charles Coriell, Jr. and Fred Wilcox.

Harry Tinsman, who recently purchased a lot on Lincoln avenue, from George W. Day, plans to erect a house there during the coming summer.

It is understood that chicken raising on an extensive scale is to be commenced on the Endicott farm below New Market.

Art exhibits will again be held in the Whittier and Lincoln Schools on Friday and Saturday of this week.

Mrs. John Peters, Jr., has been detained at home by grip and complications the past few days.

Samuel Merrill, of the borough, has gone to Philadelphia to visit relatives.

NEW PICTURE FRAMES.

Simplicity is a marked feature of the new styles in picture frames. And burnishing gold and mahogany are the newest colors for frames. The former is a dull gold, and is so dull that it and mahogany blend beautifully, and so are often used together.

The effect of such combination is so entirely different from the old style of framing with wood and a strip of gilt next the glass, that it is difficult to believe that the same colors are just carried out in the new tones. These shades used together bring out brown pictures effectively.

An authority on art furnishing is responsible for the information that the gold alone, the wood alone, and the two in combination may be used to successfully frame all kinds of pictures that are generally hung on walls of living rooms, parlors, libraries and bedrooms.

Narrow frames, from one to two inches, are correct for medium-sized pictures, while for smaller subjects, such as photographs, only a half-inch frame is required. The latter is usually of dark wood, beautifully polished to show the grain.

Both oval and square frames are correct. The latter are more expensive, because more difficult to make and polish.

Wooden frames are flat and plain, except in a few cases, when a little carving is seen as a motif placed in the centre of the top of a square frame. The plain frames are, however, considered better taste.

Gold frames are exceedingly dainty in design, small delicate molding being preferred to bold patterns. Indeed, some of the frames give the impression of being worked with the needle and gold thread used generously, rather than molding.

Dr. Thomas Blair has purchased the Brown property at 414 Park avenue and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ramsey Blair, of East Second street, have taken up their residence with him on Park avenue.

BASEBALL.

Fans down in Greensboro, N. C., gave Josh Devoe, of the New York Giants, a five-spot Monday afternoon for knocking out a home run drive. Incidentally the fan won a twenty-dollar bill on the smash, as he got odds 20 to 1 that not a member of the New York Giants would put the ball over the fence in centre field.

The Phillies defeated the Athletics in the Interleague series at Philadelphia Monday by a score of 5 to 1. The series now stands one to one. First game was played last Saturday.

Bugs Raymond worked part of the game for the Giants Monday afternoon against the Greensboro team. The eccentric one had three strikeouts and gave but one free pass to first base.

Shortstop Russell Blackburn, of the Chicago Whit Sox, was operated upon Monday at Chicago for floating cartilage of the knee. He expects to be able to get into the game by the first of May.

"Lefty" Russell, the $12,000 beauty, worked for the Athletics Monday against the Phillies. Two bingles were made by the National Leaguers of the delivery of the former Eastern League dispenser of slants.

Jimmy Callahan is shining in all his old glory with the White Sox this spring. Nothing infantile about Duffy's team with such seasoned players as Dougherty, Callahan and McIntyre in the outfield and Lord and McConnell in the infield.

The Senate at Lincoln, Neb., Monday afternoon passed the Sunday baseball bill over the veto of Governor Aldrich. The executive informed the Senate of his reason for disapproving the bill Monday morning. He thought the measure too radical, in that it legalized baseball without restriction as to sections of the State outside the cities and towns. The measure scored twenty-one votes when it was taken up in the afternoon. This was one more than the number necessary to overcome the veto. The bill will be sent to the House today.

The National Board of Arbitration of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues acted favorably upon and decided to recommend to the annual meeting of the National Association the proposition that all reserved players must be tendered a contract on or before February 1 of each year.

The third game of the series of three games between the New York Americans and the Cincinnati Nationals, scheduled to be played at Cincinnati Monday, was called off on account of wet grounds. The Yankees left for Columbus, O.

GOLF.

The Advertising Golf Association, of 103 members, will hold four tournaments this year, as follows:—May 11, Oakland; June 8, Apawamis; September 28, Montclair, and October 26, Knollwood.

Fox Hills expects to use the regular summer greens by next Saturday. Dunwoodie will open a week later and Van Cortlandt Park the first week in May.

For the first time in the history of New York Athletic Club sport, the members will hold a closed golf tournament this year. Play will extend for a period of five days—May 15 to 19—on the links of the Fox Hills Golf Club.

Out on the public golf links, at Forest Park, Brooklyn, improvements will be begun shortly. The Brooklyn Forest Park Golf Club has voted to expend a thousand dollars on its club house and links, the Park Department to co-operate in the work.

Improvements are being made on the links of the Essex County Country Club, at West Orange, in preparation for the coming season. Some of the holes are being shortened, others lengthened, while in several spots greens are being shifted to more desirable locations.

The annual Foursome Tournament for the Dewar Challenge Shields, open to London professionals, was played at Fulwell. With the exception of Braid, Vardon and Sherlock, all the best players connected with the clubs round London competed. The holders were the brothers J. H. and Joshua Taylor, who had such powerful opponents as Duncan and Mayo, Ball and Robson, Reid and Kinnell, Hepburn and Hunter, etc., to meet. Ball and Robson won, defeating Johns and Kettley, 3 and 2. J. H. and Joshua Taylor were beaten by Duncan and Mayo, 5 and 3, they in turn failing before the ultimate runners-up.

CYCLIST HITS HORSE; MIRACULOUS ESCAPES.

The horse which collided with a motorcycle ridden by Theodore Gavett at Second street and Madison avenue Monday night belonged to L Kornfield, the baker, and not the Public Service Corporation as previously stated. The animal was quite badly hurt and is now under the care of a veterinary. A Polish boy, who had been riding the horse was also severely injured. He was thrown over the horse's head like a ball and hardly an inch of his face escaped being cut and scraped by the macadam. One leg was badly sprained and his back and side were wrenched.

Mr. Gavett sustained a dislocated knee cap as well as numerous severe bruises. People who witnessed the accident declare it is a miracle that the participants escaped as luckily as they did. The horse was galloping up Second street and the motorcycle speeding down Madison avenue when they collided at the corner.

Urges Income Tax.

Calling attention to the fact that the Maine legislature had reconsidered its action and ratified the income tax amendment to the federal constitution, Governor Wilson, in a message to the New eJrsey Senate last night, urged that body to do the same. The Senate has rejected the amendment and the house has ratified it.

Number 3

THE IMITATORS

Many little pressing tailor shops claim to do Dry Cleaning. These are the magicians. These the people who simply take in your clothes, brush out the dust, remove such spots as they can, pressing fairly well. Your clothing is then sent home and after a few days the spots reappear. You naturally condemn Dry Cleaning, when in truth your garments have only been sponged and pressed.

You should send your clothes here. We dust them properly, having the right equipment. Then we put your garments in just the right bath for their special needs, depending upon condition, texture, etc. Drying and airing after cleaning is accomplished here under the most sanitary and perfect conditions.

Send your next work to us—if you appreciate quality.

IF you have never had a bank account you cannot understand the feeling of independence and happiness that comes with the possession if one.

A great writer has said that many people with good incomes are more unhappy than beggars because they live beyond their means. If you have never had a bank account you realize the truth of this assertion and cannot understand the feeling or independence and happiness that you may so easily enjoy.

HINTS IN THE SEARCH FOR BEAUTY.

Few girls are able to give to their adornment the care that the beauty specialist demands. If they followed all rules they would have good skins and hair, perhaps, but their brains would be starved and their hearts atrophied for lack of development.

The busy girl may be inclined to scoff at beauty measures and pride herself on being above such vanities. If she does so, foolish indeed is she. It is not vain to look one's best; indeed it is a good health investment.

What is needed are everyday rules for everyday beauty.

It is not needful to have elaborate massage, a maid and unlimited time to make the best of one's self physically. A little care of the right sort given daily is all that is required.

Remember, the complexion is the barometer of the body, and watch it well. It the skin is blotched, sallow or pasty, there is something wrong, perhaps physically, perhaps through neglect of sanitary precautions.

You may have such a good digestion that it will make the blood flow freely in your veins, but if you neglect to keep your face properly washed, your skin will not reflect health.

The skin of the face absorbs impurities rapidly. After a day's shopping or exposure to the winds and dust these impurities must be cleaned or the skin will clog.

It will not take long. A thorough washing with pure soap and water or an application of hot cloths does it. When the skin feels hot rub in a little cold cream and rest a few minutes, the wipe off and spray the face with cold water to act as a tonic.

Where sensitive skin is injured by too much water there are good cleansing creams that may be used, or the face can be wiped off after exposure with three parts of rose water to one part of glycerine.

You may not have time or money for hair treatment, but every woman can brush her hair for five minutes daily and let it hang for ventilation. No woman should be so busy or so tired that she omits to take down her hair at night and massage the scalp.

Keep erect, have your room well ventilated, draw deep breaths frequently, see that your corstes are well adjusted and not allowed to be sloppy, wear comfortable shoes for the sake of your nerves and temper and do not overeat if you value your good looks.

Take time to rest a few minutes each day. It will keep you young longer than all other beauty prescriptions.

Besides eating moderately, learn to eat slowly. Bolting food is ruinous to good looks. When under heavy strain let your meals be small and frequent.

PICTURE MODELS FOR GIRLS.

Long picture dresses are going to be very modish again for little girls. One of the frocks is of apple green chiffon velvet made in high Empire fashion, with a sash; a quaint deep bertha of coarse green chenille fringe is placed around the shoulders, dipping to a V in the centre, front and dack.

One or two straps of creamy insertion connect the V, but otherwise the shoulders are bare; the dress reaches to just above the ground, and has a chenille fringe which completes the lengthiness.

Another little dress of a similar "picture" type was in white satin and lace not only long, but of the "hobble" description, being no wider around the feet than around the body. The lace was draped in a fichu around the shoulders; no sleeves were to be seen beneath the lace, and one has no doubt that a wee child might make a charming little picture in this frock, but for practical purposes one suggests all these frocks as a new and refined method of punishing youthful deviations from the path of complete goodness. To suggest these things as garments in which to send a child to enjoy herself is grotesque, to say the least of it.

THE FUR COAT.

It is handsome.
But it isn't enough.
It was not made for all.
The one-coat girl should avoid it.
It is awful to perspire through warm days.
Besides a heavy fur coat is not good to walk in.
For motoring, for traveling and for the coldest days it is fine.
Some lightweight pony and the exquisite broadtail is not burdensome, also they are not warm enough for the severest wear.
After a girl has a good warm coat suit a fur coat is a luxurious addition. For mere warmth though a knitted wool coat will bring the cloth coat suit to sufficient coziness.

Protection for Matress.

The pad or cover spread directly over the mattress under the sheet is a great protection and a similar protector placed under the mattress, so that the mattress does not rest on the springs, is well worth while. If one has not old coverlets to be used for the purpose, newspapers will serve as an excellent substitute. For camp use, the newspapers have an added value. Their warmth is an item worthy of careful consideration.

DRINKING WATER FOR THE HEALTH.

Two great aids to beauty and health in the world are the simplest and least often followed. A woman who will not fail to take obnoxious medicine, recommended by her doctor, at the most inconvenient times, finds it too difficult to adopt these two remedies—fresh air and quantities of pure water.

Even those who have successfully educated themselves in the fresh air cult still neglect the equally important habit of drinking plenty of pure water. They daily bathe the body externally without a thought of the necessity of internal bathing.

Any doctor will tell you that a certain quantity of awter should be taken daily; a pint and a half is the very least that one is supposed to drink. Yet there are many people who never drink water at all.

When one thinks of the cleansing power of water upon the body applied externally one is astonished that it is not more universally used as an internal cleanser.

A woman whose complexion was the envy of all drank twelve glasses of pure water a day between meals and slept with every window in her bedroom wide open. While she was fortunate enough to start life with a good complexion she attributes all the freshness and youth of her looks to these simple causes.

The morning bath has become a necessity to all who indulge in the niceties of life, and it would be well if the morning drink would also be adopted by women. Nothing is so good for one as to take a glass or two of water immediately after one's bath, or the first thing when one rises. If cold water gives one a feeling of nausea, and it does to many, take hot water. This should be durnk as hot as one can bear it and in as great a quantity as one can stand. The juice of half a lemon in it works wonders for the complexion and the health.

Every woman should take all reasonable precautions to keep herself well, because ill health saps vitality Each time one is ill a tiny bit of youth and freshness is sacrificed. One's reserve force is lowered and every illness acts against the preservation of one's good looks.

If one can cultivate a few simple habits that will help one to keep health and good looks, is it not the part of wisdom to form these habits?

Begin at once to throw open all your windows and to drink water all during the day and you will be astonished to see how much younger you will look and how much prettier you will be. And youth—in face and figure—is now the aim and desire of every woman. She strives for its slim freshness as she used to strive for beauty.

Tulle Roses.

A charming trimming on a pink silk evening dress seen recently consisted of a cluster of five roses, formed of pink tulle, with green tulle stems twisted over thin wire, sewed to the left side of the low neck. The effect was exceedingly attractive, and showed again the value of the little touches to raise a gown from the commonplace.

LOW'S HUNTER LICENSE BILL FAILS IN SENATE.

The Senate gave a sledge-hammer blow yesterday to Senator Low's bill providing for the repeal of the $1 hunter's license bill. There were but four votes in favor of the bill and fourteen against.

Senator Low and Senator Gebhardt said that there was a greater demand in their counties for this bill than for any other before the Legislature.

Senator Frelinghuysen declared that the passage of the act would result in a great injury to the sport of hunting. He declared that the very men to be injured most by the passage of the bill would be those who are now most anxious to have it enacted.

Senators Leavitt and Fitzherbert also spoke against the measure. Senator Brown, of Monmouth, said his constituents were against the repeal of the license.

CAMP FOOD.

Gee, how good it is to feed
At the table of a camp,
Where each dish is what you need,
Just the right and proper stamp.
You, who dieted so much
Back there in the broiling town,
Now eat flapjacks, spuds, and such—
Glory, how you bolt 'em down!

Cooling winds and azure skies,
Sunshine bringing back the tan,
There's no need to Fletcherize
For the happy camping man;
Bacon sizzling in its fat;
Fish, just captured from the pool;
Well, with such a spread as that
Who could hold a diet rule?

Pale dyspeptics learn to eat
As they did when they were boys;
Appetites grown weak, effete,
Wake again to olden joys;
Food in camp—come, pass your plate,
Why, your meal is scarce begun;
Hungry, aren't you? Ain't it great?
That's what Doctor Nature's done.

RENEW MOVE TO GET CLEVELAND MEMORIAL

Further steps were taken at a meeting of the Caldwell Borough Council Monday night to advance the plan of acquiring Grover Cleveland's birthplace in that borough as a memorial. Suggestion that this be done was made at the time of Governor Wilson's visit to Caldwell.

It is now suggested also that adjoining property be obtained and used as a Cranegie library site.

William H. Van Wart, Thomas S. Gladding and Henry V. Condict, of Caldwell, appeared before the council to urge action in the matter. As an aid to the movement, Mr. Van Wart asked the council what the borough could do toward the maintenance of the proposed memorial.

Mayor Espy declared that he was heartily in favor of the plan, but could not make any definite statement at present as the matter would have to be taken up with the solicitor. He then named the following committee to confer with that official and those interested in the project: Councilmen John W. Gosman, Albert E. Marr and Wilfred F. Maxwell.

The Council was asked what could be done toward relieving the property, from taxation. It was pointed out that this could only be done by special legislative act. The committee was then directed to take this matter under advisement also and report at an early date.

Other business of the Council included the discussion of the matter of the application for a saloon license by William Healy, of Caldwell, now before the court. It was decided to instruct the borough solicitor to enter a protest in the borough's behalf against the said license on the ground that it is against the best interests of the community that any more saloons be established.

An ordinance to lay out and open Park avenue was passed on first reading and the property owners will be given a hearing April 17. Ordinances to lay a concrete sidewalk on both sides of Hillside avenue, and open and grade Hillside avenue from Hatfield street to the borough line, were also introduced and property holders will be given a hearing April 17.

An ordinance to lay a bluestone or concrete sidewalk on both sides of Roseland avenue was adopted and property holders were given sixty days to complete the work.

GUARD FOR BUSINESS END OF ALL HATPINS.

Assemblyman McGowan, of Essex, is on the trial of the heartless young women who are in the habit of wearing those uninviting, sharp-pointed and projecting devices designed to hold their headgear in place. Without the least show of fear of the consequences, the man from Essex introduced a bill in the House Monday night, by which he hopes to safeguard the optics of mere man and others and otherwise render less menacing the crowding of street cars and other places, where ducking of hatpins is a daily necessity.

If Mr. McGowan has his way the long hatpin is doomed. He proposes to limit the extension of the business end of them to half an inch beyond the hat unless such pins are rendered safe so far as the indiscriminate and innocent diversion of pricking an unsuspecting passer-by is concerned. While he does not attempt to say what kind of a device must be placed on the point of the pin he provides for such a scheme of protection.

Under the provisions of the proposed law there is no reason why the wholesale "stabbing affairs" as some legislators view them, cannot be halted by the sticking of an onion or a potato on the danger points. Mr. McGowan declared he was not particular as to how the young women complied with the law so long as they did away with the "fine points" of their belfry adornments. Under the proposed law it will cost a young woman $5 the first time she happens to violate the law. A second offense will cost her $25 and a third $30. After that time, however, in case of a conviction she will be guilty of a misdeameanor. So there!

Pluckemin's $5000 Fire.

The residence of Constable James Woods, at Pluckemin, was burned yesterday. The fire is believed to have originated from a defective flue. Much of the contents of the building were saved. Two other houses nearby caught fire, and the Presbyterian church, just across the street, was twice in flames, but the firemen succeeded in extinguishing them. Word was sent to the Far Hills fire department, which hustled to the scene and did good work in preventing the spread of the blaze. The loss is about $5,000, and is only partially covered by insurance.

Thinks He's Found "Gold."

According to residents of Myersville, "gold" has been discovered on the farm of George Xlham. While the farmer was digging for a well he noticed a substance in rock excavated which looked yellow to him, and upon the advice of neighbors says he sent it to a smelting works in Newark for an analysis. Later he received word, it is declared, to send along a barrelful, which he did yesterday.

SOME THINGS DONE IN OTHER PLACES

In Columbus, Ohio, householders must dampen ashes before the cans are set out.

In Scranton, Pa., garbage cans must be tightly covered and must be clean and dry on the outside before they are set out for collection.

In Pittsburg hoisting engines for buildings in course of erection must be wholly within the building, and building materials delivered in the street must be transferred to the premises within two hours. No building materials may be left in the street over night.

In Erie, Pa., truckloads of bricks must be wet before they are dumped so as to prevent dust.

In Philadelphia at the main postoffice you can buy a money order, get a money order cashed, register a leeter or package, in fact transact any postal business at any hour of the day or night, seven days in the week.

In Louisville, Ky., nearly all men remove their hats while in dry goods or millinery stores.

In Houston, Tex., they call it Huston, with the "u" long, and not as if the first syllable were spelled "house."

In Cleveland, Ohio, the officials of the street railway have private trolley cars fitted with movable chairs, tables and couches, also buffets.

In Boston nearly every one wears gloves at work or play the year round. Some women even wear gloves as well as eye-glasses in the surf at Nantasket and Revere Beach.

In Savannah shrimps are the chief articles on the free lunch bill of fare.

In New Orleans the gin fizz is the most popular drink and it isn't like any other gin fizz on earth. The barkeepers have negro assistants who do nothing but shake gin fizzes. They also sell absinthe frappe at the soda fountains in the Crescent City.

In Wheeling, W. Va., the saloons are never closed except from midnight Saturday till 5 o'clock Sunday morning. This is not the law but the regulation of a former Mayor, the intent being to rid the streets of drunken men before women going to early Sunday mass are abroad.

In Sisterville, W. Va., standard Oil Company checks, which are issued by the thousand every month to oil well owners, pass as legal tender.

In San Francisco a pretzel is a big sugar coated bun.

In Denver all trolley cars in use both summer and winter are divided in the middle. The forward half is open and the rear half closed and heated. The two halves are about equally patronized at all seasons.

In Salt Lake City the gutters of all streets constantly run full of clear mountain snow water. Hence the streets are always clean.

In Oshkosh the police are on the honor system and the police say it works well.

In Tacoma they teach pronounciation and elocution in the primary grades of the public schools. When a native trolley conductor announces a street there's no trouble understanding him.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

Miss Effie Beekman has been appointed to succeed Miss Helen Woolley, on the staff of The Oracle. Miss Woolley resigned from the position of literary editor.

The baseball team plays their first hard game of the season this afternoon with the Upsala College team.

Arrangements have been made to permit the use of the Y. M. C. A. swimming pool for the boys who wish to enter the swimming events in the school strength tests. The hours are from 2 to 3 o'clock on Monday and Wednesday afternoons. The final tests will also take place here.

A special committee has been appointed from the four classes of the school to look after the pictures and statuary of the school and includes among its members Samuel Silbert, Louis Matlach, Effie Beekman, Egbert Fountain, Katherine Benjamin, Felix Janke, Claire Neuman and Bradford Williams.

HIGHER LICENSE FEE FOR RAHWAY SALOONS.

An ordinance increasing the inn and tavern license fee in Rahway from $500 to $700 was passed on its first reading by the Excise Board Monday night. The change will become effective by July 1, when the majority of licenses expire.

Former Police Justice Walton B. Selover was appointed attorney for the board at a salary of $50 per year.

The Board of Excise consists of three members. James B. Mershon and John H. Williams, recently appointed by Judge E. S. Atwater, are high license men. Julius Adler, who has been a member of the board for the past six years, does not approve of increasing the present fee. Mr. Adler was not present at the meeting of the board Monday night.

THE DIVA'S RUBY

BY

AUTHOR OF "SARACINESCA," "ARETHUSA" ETC., ETC.

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY F. MARION CRAWFORD

"All sorts of young fellows used to drift out there," he said, "and one couldn't tell where they came from, though I can give a guess at where some of them must have been, since I've seen the world. There were younger sons of English gentlemen, fellows whose fathers were genuine lords, maybe, who had not brains enough to get into the army or the church. There were cashiered Prussian officers, and Frenchmen who had most likely killed women out of jealousy, and Sicilian bandits, and broken society men from New York. There were all sorts. And there was me. And we all spoke different kinds of English and had different kinds of tastes, good and bad—mostly bad. There was only one thing we could all do alike, and that was to ride."

"I never thought of you as riding," Margaret said.

"Well, why should you? But I can, because I was just a common cow-boy and had to, for a living."

"It's intensely interesting—what a strange life you have had! Tell me more about yourself, won't you?"

"There's not much to tell, it seems to me," said Van Torp. "From being a cow-boy I turned into miner, and struck a little silver, and I sold that and got into nickel, and I made the Nickel Trust what it is, more by financing it than anything else, and I got almost all of it. And now I've sold the whole thing."

"Sold the Nickel Trust?" Margaret was quite as much surprised as Lady Maud had been.

"Yes. I wasn't made to do one thing long, I suppose. If I were, I should still be a cow-boy. Just now, I'm here to go to 'Parsifal,' and since you say those tunes are out of that opera, I dare say I'm going to like it very much."

"It's all very uncanny," Margaret said thoughtfully. "I wonder who those two men were, and what became of the one who disappeared."

"I've a strong impression that I saw him in New York the other day," Van Torp answered. "If I'm right, he's made money—doing quite well, I should think. It wouldn't surprise me to hear he'd got together a million or so."

"Really? What is he doing? Your stories grow more and more interesting."

"If he's the fellow we used to call Levi Longlegs on the ranch, he's a Russian now. I'm not perfectly sure, for he had no hair on his face then, and now he has a beard like a French sapper. But the eyes and the nose and the voice and the accent are the same, and the age would about correspond. Handsome man, I suppose you'd call him. His name is Kralinsky just at present, and he's found a whole mine of rubies somewhere."

"Really? I love rubies. They are my favorite stones."

"Are they? That's funny. I've got an uncut one in my pocket now, if you'd like to see it. I believe it comes from Kralinsky's mine, too, though I got it through a friend of yours, two or three days ago."

"A friend of mine?"

He was poking his large fingers into one of the pockets of his waistcoat in search of the stone.

"Mr. Logotheti," he said, just as he found it. "He's discovered a handsome young woman from Tartary, or somewhere, who has a few rubies to sell that look very much like Kralinsky's. This is one of them."

He had unwrapped the stone now and he offered it to her, holding it out in the palm of his hand. She took it delicately and laid it in her own, which was so white that the gem shed a delicate pompegranate-colored light on the skin all round it. She admired it, turned it over with one finger, held it up towards the window, and laid it in her palm again.

But Van Torp had set her thinking about Logotheti and the Tartar girl. She put out her hand to give back the ruby.

"I should like you to keep it, if you will," he said. "I shan't forget the pleasure I've had in seeing you like this, but you'll forget all about our meeting here—the stone may just make you remember it sometimes."

He spoke so quietly, so gently, that she was taken off her guard, and was touched, and very much surprised to feel that she was. She looked into his eyes rather cautiously, remembering well how she had formerly seen something terrifying in them if she looked an instant too long; but now they made her think of the eyes of a large affectionate bulldog.

"You're very kind to want to give it to me," she answered after a moment's hesitation, "but I don't like to accept anything so valuable, now that I'm engaged to be married. Konstantin might not like it. But you're so kind; give me any little thing of no value that you have in your pocket, for I mean to remember this day, indeed I do!"

"I gave nothing for the ruby," said Van Torp, still not taking it from her, "so it has no value for me. I wouldn't offer you anything that cost me money, now, unless it was a theater for your own. Perhaps the thing's glass, after all; I've not shown it to any jeweler. The girl made me take it, because I helped her in a sort of way. When I wanted to pay for it she tried to throw it out of the window. So I had to accept it to calm her down, and she went off and left no address, and I thought I'd like you to have it, if you would."

"Are you quite, quite sure you did not pay for it?" Margaret asked. "If we are going to be friends, you must please always be very accurate."

"I've told you exactly what happened," said Van Torp. "Won't you take it now?"

"Yes, I will, and thank you very much indeed. I love rubies, and this is a beauty, and not preposterously big. I think I shall have it set as it is, uncut, and only polished, so that it will always be itself, just as you gave it to me. I shall think of the 'Good Friday' music and the chimes, and this hideous little room, and your clever whistling, whenever I look at it."

"You're kind to-day," said Mr. Van Torp, after a moment's debate as to whether he should say anything at all.

"Am I? You mean that I used to be very disagreeable, don't you?" She smiled as she glanced at him. "I must have been, I'm sure, for you used to frighten me ever so much. But I'm not in the least afraid of you now!"

"Why should any one be afraid of me?" asked Van Torp, whose smile had been known to terrify Wall street when a "dorp" was expected.

Margaret laughed a little, without looking at him.

"Tell me all about the Tartar girl," she said, instead of answering his question.

Van Torp told her Baraka's history, as far as he knew it from Logotheti.

"I never heard such an amusing set of stories as you are telling me to-day," she said.

"That particular one is Logotheti's," he answered, "and he can probably tell you much more about the girl."

"Is she really very pretty?" Margaret asked.

"Well," said Van Torp, quoting a saying of his favorite great man, "for people who like that kind of thing, I should think that would be the kind of thing they'd like."

The prima donna smiled.

"Can you describe her?" she asked.

"Did you ever read a fairy story about a mouse that could turn into a tiger when it liked?" inquired the American in a tone of profound meditation, as if he were contemplating a vision which Margaret could not see.

"No," said she, "I never did."

"I don't think I ever did, either. But there might be a fairy story about that, mightn't there?" Margaret nodded, with an expression of displeased interest, and he went on: "Well, it describes Miss Barrack to a T. Yes, that's what I call her. She's put 'Barak' on her business card, whatever that means in a Christian language; but when I found out it was a girl, I christened her Miss Barrack. People have to have names of some kind if you're going to talk about them. But that's a digression. Pardon me. You'd like a description of the young person. I'm just thinking."

"How did you find out she was a girl?" Margaret asked, and her tone was suddenly hard.

"It was a question of form, you see," he said awkwardly.

"Form? Formality? I don't understand." Margaret was really puzzled.

"No, no!" Mr. Van Torp was actually blushing. "I mean his form—or her form—"

"Certainly. Yes. Only, you see, he had a kind of fit—the boy did—and I thought he was going to faint, so I picked him up and carried him to a sofa, and—well, you understand, Miss Donne. I knew I hadn't got a boy in my arms, that's all."

"I should think so!" assented the Englishwoman. "I'm sure I should! When you found out she was a girl, how did she strike you?"

"Very attractive, I should say; very attractive," he repeated with more emphasis. "People who admire brunettes might think her quite fascinating. She has really extraordinary eyes, to begin with, those long fruity eastern eyes, you know, that can look so far to the right and left through their eyelashes. Do you know what I mean?"

"Perfectly. You make it very clear. Go on, please."

"Her eyes—yes." Mr. Van Torp appeared to be thinking again. "Well, there was her complexion, too. It's first-rate for a dark girl. Ever been in a first-class dairy? Do you know the color of Alderney cream when it's ready to be skimmed? Her complexion's just like that, and when she's angry, it's as if you squeezed the juice of about one red currant into the whole pan of cream. Not more than one, I should think. See what I mean?"

"Send Mr. Van Torp's Man Up, Potts."

"Yes. She must be awfully pretty. Tell me more. His she nice hair? Even teeth?"

"I should think she had!" answered Mr. Van Torp, with even more enthusiasm than he had shown yet. "They're as small and even and white as if somebody had gone to work and carved them all around half a new billiard ball, not separate, you understand, but all in one piece. Very pretty mouth they make, with those rather broiled-salmon-colored lips she has, and a little chin that points up, as if she could hold her own. She can, too. Her hair? Well, you see, she's cut it short, to be a boy, but it's as thick as a beaver's fur, I should say, and pretty black. It's a silky kind of hair, that looks alive. You know what I mean, I daresay. Some brunettes' hair looks coarse and dusky, like horsehair, but hers isn't that kind, and it makes a sort of reflection in the sun, the way a young raven's wing-feathers do, if you understand."

"You're describing a raving beauty, it seems to me."

"Oh, no," said the American innocently. "Now if our friend Griggs, the novelist were here, he'd find all the right words and things, but I can only tell you just what I saw."

"You tell it uncommonly well!" Margaret's face expressed anything but pleasure. "Is she tall?"

"It's hard to tell, in men's clothes. Three inches shorter than I am, maybe. I'm a middle-sized man, I suppose. I used to be five feet ten in my shoes. She may be five feet seven, not more."

"But that's tall for a woman."

"Is it?" Mr. Van Torp's tone expressed an innocent indifference.

"Yes. Has she nice hands?"

"I didn't notice her hands. Oh, yes, I remember!" he exclaimed, suddenly correcting himself. "I did notice them. She held up that ruby to the light and I happened to look at her fingers. Small, well-shaped fingers, tapering nicely, but with a sort of firm look about them that you don't often see in a woman's hands. You've got it, too."

"Have I?" Margaret looked down at her right hand. "But, of course, hers are smaller than mine," she said.

"Well, you see, orientals almost all have very small hands and feet—too small, I call them—little tiny feet like mice."

Margaret's own were well-shaped, but by no means small.

"The girl is in London, you say?" Her tone made a question of the statement.

"She was there two days ago, when I left. At least, she had been to see me that very morning. Almost as soon as she was gone I went out, and in the first shop I looked into I met Logotheti. It was Pinney's, the jeweler's, I remember, for I bought a collar stud. We came away together and walked some time, and he told me the Tartar girl's story. I asked him to dine to-day, but I was obliged to leave town suddenly, and so I had to put him off with a note. I dare say he's still in London."

"I daresay he is," Margaret repeated, and rising suddenly she went to the window.

Mr. Van Torp rose too, and thought of what he should say in taking his leave of her, for he felt that he had stayed long enough.

The prima donna was still looking out of the window when the door opened and her English maid appeared on the threshold. Margaret turned at the sound.

"What is it?" she asked quietly.

"There's Mr. Van Torp's man, ma'am," answered Potts. "He wants to speak to his master at once."

"You had better tell him to come up," Margaret answered. "You may just as well see him here without going all the way downstairs," she said, speaking to Van Torp.

"You're very kind, I'm sure," he replied; "but I think I'd better be going, anyway."

"No, don't go yet, please! There's something else I want to say. See your man here while I go and speak to Mrs. Rushmore. Send Mr. Van Torp's man up, Potts," she added, and left the room.

The American walked up and down alone for a few moments. Then the impassive Stemp was ushered in by the maid, and the door was shut again.

"Well?" inquired Mr. Van Torp. "Has anything happened?"

"Yes, sir," Stemp answered. "They have turned us out of the house, sir, and your luggage is in the street. Where shall I have it taken, sir?"

"Oh, they've turned us out, have they? Why?"

"Well, sir, I'm afraid it's partly my fault, but there must be some misunderstanding, for I'm quite sure I didn't whistle in your room, sir."

"So am I, Stemp. Quite so. Go on. What happened?"

"Well, sir, you hadn't been gone more than ten minutes when somebody knocked, and there was the landlord, if that's what he calls himself, and a strange German gentleman with him, who spoke English. Rather shabby-looking, sir, I thought him. He spoke most uncivilly, and said I was driving him half crazy with my whistling. I said I hadn't whistled, and he said I had, and the landlord talked German at me, as it were sir. I said again I hadn't whistled, and he said I had, the shabby gentleman, I mean, speaking most uncivilly, sir, I assure you. So when I saw that they doubted my word, I put them out and fastened the door, thinking this was what you would have ordered, sir, if you'd been there yourself, but I'm afraid I did wrong."

"No, Stemp. You didn't do wrong."

"Thank you, sir."

"I suppose, though, that when you put them out they didn't exactly want to go, did they?"

"No, sir, but I had no trouble with them."

"Any heads broken?"

"No, sir. I was careful of that. I sent the landlord downstairs first, as he was a fat man and not likely to hurt himself, and the shabby gentleman went down on top of him quite comfortably, so he did not hurt himself either. I was very careful, sir, being in a foreign country."

"What happened next? They didn't come upstairs again and throw you out, I suppose."

"No, sir. They went and got two of these German policemen with swords, and broke into the room, and told me we must move at once. I didn't like to resist the police, sir. It's sometimes serious. The German gentleman wanted them to arrest me, so I offered to pay any fine there was for having been hasty, and we settled for two sovereigns, which I thought dear, sir, and I'd have gone to the police station rather than pay it, only I knew you'd need my services in this heathen town, sir. I'm highly relieved to know that you approve of that, sir. But they said we must turn out directly, just the same, so I re-packed your things and got a porter, and he's standing over the luggage in the street, waiting for orders."

"Stemp," said Mr. Van Torp, "I'd been whistling myself, before you came in, and the lunatic in the next room had already been fussing about it. It's my fault."

"Yes, sir. Thank you, sir."

"And it will be my fault if we have to sleep in a cab to-night."

The door opened while he was speaking, and Margaret heard the last words as she entered the room.

"I'm sorry," she said, "I thought you had finished. I could not help hearing what you said about sleeping in a cab. That's nonsense, you know."

"Well," said Mr. Van Torp, "they've just turned us out of the one room we had because I whistled 'Parsifal' out of tune."

"You didn't whistle it out of tune," Margaret answered, to Stemp's great but well-concealed astonishment. "I know better. Please have your things brought here at once."

"Here?" repeated Mr. Van Torp, surprised in his turn.

"Yes," she answered, in a tone that forestalled contradiction. "If nothing else can be had you shall have this room. I can do without it."

"You're kindness itself, but I couldn't do that," said Mr. Van Torp. "Bring our things to this hotel, anyway, Stemp, and we'll see what happens."

"Yes, sir."

Stemp disappeared at once, and his master turned to Margaret again.

"Nothing will induce me to put you to such inconvenience," he said, and his tone was quite as decided as hers had been.

She smiled.

"Nothing will induce me to let a friend of mine be driven from pillar to post for a lodging while I have plenty of room to spare."

"Very, very kind, but—"

"But the mouse may turn into a tiger if you contradict it," she said with a light laugh that thrilled him with delight. "I remember your description of the Tartar girl!"

"Well, then, I suppose the hyena will have to turn into a small woolly lamb if you tell him to," answered Mr. Torp.

"Yes," laughed Margaret. "He a small, woolly lamb at once, please, a very small one!"

"Knee-high to a kitten, certainly," replied the millionaire submissively.

"Very well. I'll take you with me to hear 'Parsifal' to-morrow, if you obey. I've just asked Mrs. Rushmore if it makes any difference to her, and she has confessed that she would rather not go again, for it tires her dreadfully and gives her a headache. You shall have her seat. What is it? Don't you want to go with me?"

Mr. Van Torp's face had hardened till it looked like a mask, he stared firmly at the wall, and his lips were set tightly together. Margaret gazed at him in surprise while he spoke have counted ten. Then he spoke slowly, with evident effort, and in an odd voice.

"Excuse me, Miss Donne," he said, snapping his words out. "I'm so grateful that I can't speak, that's all. It'll be all right in a second."

FIVE YEAR OLD BOY MAKES LONG TRIP

Tagged to "M. V. Sturgess, of Samptown, R. F. D., No. 2," William Bailey, aged five years, arrived at South Plainfield on the Lehigh Valley Railroad about last midnight, apparently well pleased with his long trip alone and as happy as he could be. Mr. Sturgess resides some distance from the railroad station, and, the little fellow being in charge of the conductor of the train, was turned over to Station Agent Lindaberry, who took care of him until this morning, when Mr. Sturgess called for him and took him to his home.

It was planned that the little fellow, a relative of Mr. Sturgess, should make a visit at the latter's home and neither of his parents being able to make the trip with him, decided to place a tag on the youngster and put him in charge of the conductor of the train.

STATE EDUCATION BOARD RE-ELECTS HAYS PRESIDENT.

James L. Hays, of Newark, yesterday was re-elected president of the State Board of Education, at the annual meeting. Mr. Hays and three other members were not reappointed to the board until his term expired. Being out of office a week, the old board, before reorganizing unanimously re-elected Mr. Hays. The venerable president was not at the meeting, and Edward Russ, of Hoboken, was sent to notify him.

Mr. Hays, thinking he had been elected for another year, delivered a speech of acceptance. Then he was informed he had been re-elected by the old board to wind up the year's business. Later Mr. Hays was re-elected by the new board without opposition. S. St. John McCutchen, of the borough, is a member of the State Board of Education.

EMPEROR INTERESTED IN THIS CORPORATION

Dr. Richard Moldenke, of Watchung, whose expert knowledge of metals is known throughout this country, as well as abroad, has just been elected president of a large corporation which has a considerable amount of German capital for its backing. Some of this capital has been furnished by German banks and the Emperor has also become interested to the extent of making an investment. The character and purpose of the new corporation cannot be learned at present, but is will be announced at a meeting to be held in Pittsburg, Pa., on May 24, at which time Dr. Moldenke will publicly disclose his plans.

Dr. Moldenke is secretary of the American Foundrymen's Association, and is also a member of the commission appointed by President Roosevelt which makes frequent tests of safety devices for the protection of miners and employes of foundries throughout the country.

Monday night, Dr. Moldenke addressed a large gathering of representatives of the American Brake-Shoe Foundry Company, on the subject of "The Best Way to Melt Metals". The meeting was held in New York city.

ORIENT'S NEW WOMEN SUBJECT OF ADDRESS

With the fascinating subject "The New Woman of the Orient," for her theme, Miss Clyde Burnett presented a paper full of absorbing interest at the meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, of the First Baptist church, held yesterday afternoon in the lecture room. Miss Burnett described the new woman of the Orient, with few points in common with the new woman of the Occident.

A long line of oriental nations, India, Turkey, Persia, Egypt, Siam, Japan, Corea and China, came under Miss Burnett's review. In most of them the position of women, she said, was like that of beasts of burden, without girlhood and little chance of happiness until Christianity brought a change in the statue tnd they have taken their rightful place in the home, the companion of their husbands and trainers of their children. The Bible, prayer and personal service, she said, were the three great powers that had accomplished these results.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

The public is invited to a lecture to be given in the auditorium on Friday at 12.30 o'clock. Professor McClanahan, of New York, will illustrate "Liquid Air."

Miss Janette Neighbor recited before the class in public speaking this morning. The selection was "Kathleen's Defiance."

Miss Anne Johnston, president of the Girls' Athletic Association made a speech at assembly this morning in behalf of the players who will give two plays on Saturday evening, in the auditorium. She asked for the support of the entire school.

Announce Approaching Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Marshman Slocum, of 502 Central avenue, have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Mary Slocum, and Edwin More Daniel, 2d, son of Leslie M. Daniel, of West Eighth street. The wedding will take place on Tuesday evening, April 18, at 8 o'clock at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church.

WANTS PLAN CHANGED TO COMMIT INSANE

Representatives of the Knights of Pythias appeared before the House State Hospital Committee yesterday, at Trenton to urge the passage of the bill changing the manner of committing a person to the Hospitals for Insane. The bill would necessitate the trial of the alleged insane person before a jury or judge as the case demanded. Former Judge John Ulfich, of Plainfield, was the spokesman for the Pythians and pointed out that some persons are sent to insane institutions who should not have been and that the Board of Managers of the Trenton Hospital found that such conditions existed a number of years ago. How many became after being sent there, Judge Ulrich said, he was not in a position to state. He wanted other safeguards than the examination of two physicians.

Dr. Cotten, of the Trenton Hospital, and Dr. Evans, of the Morris Plains institute, stated that the bill was not a good one. Dr. Evans characterized the measure as "dangerous and pernicious but drawn with good intentions." Dr. Cotten said New Jersey has the best law of any State as all the good points from various countries have been embodied in it. Requests for copies of the present law, Dr. Cotton said, are being received continually as an insane person can be taken care of immediately and the delay of other places obviated.

Both physicians asserted that they had no personal interest in the proposed law or the existing one but believed that the Pythians did not understand the conditions. They pointed out the damage that could be committed by a person suffering from acute mania while awaiting for court proceedings. Seventy per cent. of the cases are said to be sudden.

The doctors also told of the rights of the persons committed and that speedy release is possible if an injustice has been done.

"DON'T SPANK ME," SAID THE YOUNGSTER.

Thinking that his greatest offense was breaking the window Neil Scott, the four-year-old son of Robert Scott, of Verdon street, ran crying to his mother yesterday afternoon begging forgiveness, but at the same time showing a lacerated wrist from which the blood was gushing. Mrs. Scott at once realized the seriousness of the cut and called Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan who found an artery in the youngster's wrist cut which necessitated sewing up.

After taking seven stitches in the boy's wrist and staunching the flow of blood Dr. Buchanan tried to find out how the accident happened. He learned that in trying to do a few athletic stunts which involved the use of his little fists, Master Scott had accidently pushed one bunch of digits through a pane of glass in the kitchen window. It is believed that he would have bled to death had not prompt attention been given him.

—Assistant County Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., and family, and Mrs. Mary C. Fristbrook and family, have removed from Grant avenue to their new home on East Second street, near Washington street. The house vacated by them will be occupied by Andrew Muir and family, of Essex street.

—Four youths were arraigned before Judge De Meza in the city court this morning charged by Central Railroad Detective Lavarette with trespassing on the company's tracks and incidentally shooting craps on Sunday. Judge De Meza discharged the quartet after obtaining their promise to refrain from gambling and trespassing in the future.

PREPARING MANUALS FOR THE BOY SCOUTS

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt said in a speech at New Orleans recently that he hoped the "Boy Scout" movement would cover the entire United States before the end of 1911. He thoroughly believes in the work and is firm in the conviction that it is the very best thing ever invented for boys.

The editorial board of the Boy Scouts of America, of which William D. Murray, of this city, is chairman, is busy working over the final pages of two manuals which will be issued within a few months. One of the books will be especially adapted to the boys while the other will have to do with the instruction of Scout Masters. It is planned to have these books so plainly written that the youngest scout can readily understand them. No such books have ever been printed before and they are awaited with consuming curiosity by all the scouts in this city.

For New Township.

Only two speakers were heard on the bill for the creation of Ursino township in Union county for the House Town and Township committee at Trenton yesterday and a further hearing will be arranged. The House session interferred with the hearing. Joseph Hague, an Elizabeth lawyer, spoke against the bill and Joseph K. English was for it. Senator Kean, whose property is affected was present but did not speak. It is the contention of those against the bill that the taxpaying property has been taken in and the poorer property left out.

Moose May Have Clubhouse.

Plainfield Lodge, No. 310, Loyal Order of Moose, is planning to secure a dwelling near the center of the city for the purpose of making it a clubhouse. The organization had originally planned to occupy the top floor of the new Abrams building but gave up the idea in favor of the club proposition. The matter is now in the hands of a committee.

Mails to Be Received and Dispatched and General Delivery Window to Be Kept Open on Sundays.

Explanation for closing the carriers' window at the postoffice on Sundays is made in the following letter received by Postmaster Elias H. Bird from Assistant Postmaster General C. F. Granford:

My Dear Sir: As you know the Postmaster General is deeply interested in the welfare of postal employes; believing liberality with respect to compensation and other conditions of employment to be the best policy, he has recommended repeatedly that a law be enacted authorizing him to extend the annual leave of absence with pay for postoffice clerks and city letter carriers from fifteen to thirty days.

Although provision to this end was made in the appropriation act for the next fiscal year as passed by the Senate, this section of the bill failed in conference. Section 3 of this cat, however, provides for allowing clerks and carriers compensatory time off for Sunday work as follows: "That hereafter for services required on Sundays of supervisory officers, clerks in first and second class postoffices, and city letter carriers, compensatory time off during the working days in amount eqaul to that of the Sunday employment may be allowed, under such regulations as the Postmaster General may prescribe, but this provision shall not apply to auxiliary or substitute employes'."

The Postmaster General is very anxious to give the employes the benefit of this legislation immediately, believing that they are entitled to one day's rest in seven and that their efficiency will be increased thereby. At present, however, nearly one-half of the carriers report every Sunday to make deliveries through their windows, their average service being about three hours, although the amount of mail delivered is very small.

As practically all of the carriers are scheduled for forty-eight hours' work during the remaining six days of the week, it is impossible to allow them compensation time for this Sunday work under the present conditions. It becomes necessary, therefore, to change the practice with reference to the delivery of mail on Sunday.

There is a very strong sentiment throughout the country in favor of closing postoffices on Sundays as shown by petitions received from religious organizations, and commercial bodies, by numerous letters and petitions from the general public and by the comments of the press. In a large number of offices the department has authorized the discontinuance of Sunday service where the sentiment was favorable and seemed to justify such action. It is believed therefore, that the discontinuance of the Sunday deliver through the carriers' windows at least can be effected without inconvenience to the public and with great benefit to the officers and employes of the postoffice under the following conditions:

The General Delivery window should be kept open a sufficient length of time to accommodate the traveling public and those patrons of the office who call for urgent personal mail.

Mails should be received and dispatched as usual and distributed to boxes, enough clerks being detailed for deputy on Sunday to carry this plan into effect, such clerks should be allowed compensatory time off during the week. Business men who desire their mail regularly on Sundays should be allowed to rent boxes (at the full rate) even though their mail is delivered by carrier on the other days of the week.

The department realizes that a search of the carriers' cases by the general delivery clerk would consume a little time, but it is anticipated that patrons will refrain from calling for mail on Sundays unless the occasion was urgent and that under such circumstances they would be willing to wait. Any patron desiring an important personal communication delivered to him on Sunday should be accommodated upon payment of the prescribed fee for special delivery service.

To prevent any delay in the first delivery Monday morning, carriers should be required to report a little earlier on that day to route their mail within the prescribed time on Monday morning, would be to require such carriers to serve a sufficient time on Sunday to perform this work.

As this innovation is devised for

TO EXTEND WIDENING OF SOMERSET STREET

The question of widening Somerset street, between Jackson and Johnston avenues, will be one of the important matters to be considered by the North Plainfield Council, tomorrow night. H. C. VanEmburgh, civil engineer, has drawn a map showing in detail the proposed improvement, together with the system of drainage of surface water, etc., and this will be exhibited at the meeting. The improvement, if made, would call for an issue of bonds, the amount to be determined later after the estimated cost of the work if secured.

The Public Service Corporation has decided to replace its old rails with new ones on Somerset street from Grandview avenue to Johnston's Drive, and to raise the roadbed so as to give better drainage. This work will be started very soon and be completed as quickly as possible so that if the widening proposition is decided upon it can be taken up at an early date.

It is also expected that the Council will receive a petition from the North Plainfield Park Association asking for the macadamizing of Clinton avenue from the brook to Greenbrook road. So far as known nothing else of great importance is expected to come up at this meeting. The sewer matter is not quite ready for any further action on the part of the Council, although the commission is still at work on plans.

LARGER QUARTERS FOR KINGS' DAUGHTERS

Ways and means for securing a new building and equipment for a day nursery to take the place of the present inadequate quarters on West Third street, were discussed at some length at the meeting of the executive committee of the City Union of The King's Daughters, this morning. The need for a new building and equipment is pressing and the women are anxious to secure a new site and erect a building that will meet present and future requirements.

Mrs. M. E. Edgerton bequeathed the society $10,000 for The Day Nursery and it is expected that that amount will be paid over within a short time. The officers of the city union have already signed a release at the request of Joseph T. Tate, the executor.

In connection with the bequest the question has arisen as to the probability of the King's Daughters paying an inheritance tax in New York State on the money left to them. It is said that if the money is in New York State an inheritance tax will be demanded. Otherwise the King's Daughters will not lose that part of the bequest as New Jersey has no such law.

Eleven circles responded to the roll call this morning and the monthly reports showed that during March 535 children were cared for at The Day Nursery, fifty more than in any one previous month. In estimating the number of children cared for, the count is made by the day, mothers being required to pay five cents a day for the keeping and care of each child. Miss DeLany, the city nurse, reported having made 175 visits during March.

SALVATION ARMY NEEDS $1,500 FOR $7,000 FUND.

The appeal on behalf of the local corps of the Salvation Army by the citizens' committee is steadily increasing. Additional subscriptions to the amount of $400 have been received, which leaves a balance of $1,500 to be subscribed in the next four days in order to obtain the $2,500 conditional promises on the $7,000 fund.

If this amount can be raised in the next few days it will free the local work of building debts and the money which is now being paid out as interest on mortgages can be diverted into the spiritual and relief work, the success of which has been felt in this city for the past twenty years.

Summer Price of Coal Prevails.

The usual summer retail price of coal is now prevailing in this city, that is $6 a ton for domestic sizes. Recently, the operators raised the wholesale price of coal twenty-five cents and local consumers will be obliged to pay this increase later on when the usual jump is made. At this time of the year the retail price is the lowest dealers being anxious to get orders in early for filling the bins of their customers before the fall and winter rush begins.

DEMOCRATS SPEAK

Wilson, Bryan and Martine Evoke Enthusiasm at Burlington.

WILSON GETS DEMONSTRATION.

"Peerless Leader" Lauds Governor and Martine at a Jefferson Day Celebration Held at Trenton.

Speaking at a celebration of the birthday of Thomas Jefferson, held at Burlington last night, Governor Wilson evoked great enthusiasm by declaring that the reform most needed by the nation was the taking away of power from a few and the giving of it to the people.

Governor Wilson, William Jennings Bryan, Senator Martine and Frank S. Katzenbach spoke at a public meeting held after a Jefferson banquet, and Governor Wilson said in part:

"The great interests have sought to control legislation, partly because of a fundamental distrust of popular government on the part of the men who have been at the head of our industrial system. They distrust democracy itself. It is a notable circumstance that when in very recent months it was suggested, very foolishly but very persistently, that there was danger of the establishment of a monarchy in this country (a suggestion which did deep injustice to the statesman in connection with whose name it was made) from quarters not a few in this country the suggestion was hailed with unconcealed satisfaction. There were men of large affairs who said without reserve that they thought we should be better off in such circumstances. Nothing could more clearly prove their fundamental distrust of government by the people.

"They do not believe that the people understand their own best interests. They hold a theory of trusteeship of government, of government for the people, but not government by the people; the theory of those who would protect the people against themselves, patronize them, act for them, construct their governments in their interests but without their co-operation and consent. Under the demoralization influence of such policies as are embodied in the high protective tariff this has become, in fact, the theory of the Republican party. The 'superior' people, the people of large business and of large experience, must, in their view, determine and be sponsor for the policy of the country.

"It is against this theory that the great reaction had set in. The first victories for the people have been won; victory after victory will follow these first successes, until we have again carried our institutions back to their first inspiration and founded them once more upon absolute confidence in the people as their own masters and arbiters.

"A 'progressive' is a man who sees the new way of progress and of development; who rejects trusteeship and all conceptions of privilege and believes in common rights. Hence the measures to which we are in the present session of our Legislature devoting our chief energies.

"First, to cut off the secret and hidden uses of money in politics by effective legislation against corrupt practices. Second, to give the people direct access to their government at every point by a thorough going reform of our primary and election laws. Third, to give to the government which shall thus directly represent the people the control of public service corporations—those particular corporations concerning which the argument for control is clearest. And fourth, to provide insurance for workingmen against industrial accidents. These are the preliminary measures of justice and reform. When we have given the people control of the government and have remedied some of the fundamental iniquities of our present industrial system, we shall be free to pursue a rational program of modern reform.

"These measures are merely items representative of the general principle that industry, like politics, is not for communities, but of them; that the only term to be sought in public action is the common term—the interest, vitality, development of the people as a whole; their frank inclusion in every process, whether of legislation or of adjudication; that the general readjustment must be based upon a renaissance of rights and humanities as against all privilege and private power."

Speaking to the toast "Watchman What of the Night," Colonel William Jennings Bryan reviewed the Democratic struggle for reform in the last fifteen years, and praised the work of Governor Wilson in New Jersey as one of the greatest influences for political advencement in all the East. Many of the State pol-

FOSGATE BEATS VAN-NEST IN CIVIL SUIT

After a trial before a jury in the District Court this morning, in which Blanchard Fosgate sued Lewis C. VanNest, to recover $142 on three separate items, the plaintiff recovered a veridct of $123.10, which included an offset of 18.90, admitted by the plaintiff. Judge William Newcorn presided and in charging the jury made a very plain statement of the causes in the case. Francis J. Blatz appeared for Mr. Fosgate and Robert Newton Crane argued for Mr. VanNest.

Mr. Fosgate sued to recover the cost of plans drawn by him alleged to be on the order of Mr. VenNest. The testimony showed that both parties to the suit thought they had good grounds on which to fight through the courts.

Among the witnesses called were Fire Chief T. O. Doane, Augustus L. C. Marsh, William R. Vanderveer, A. C. Rogers, Alfred Johnson and the plaintiff.

WARREN TWP. SCHOOL ELECTION WAS VOID

Charles J. Baxter, State superintendent of schools, has notified H. C Krebs, superintendent of schools in Somerset county, that the recent school election in Warren township was illegal according to the contention of Horace Coddington, who contested the election. However, the four men elected as trustees, Augustus Schumaker, Oliver Kline, Herman Meyers and Adam Betzold have been appointed for that purpose by the county superintendent and will serve for the appointed time.

Horace Coddington contended that the election was illegal because the polls were not kept open for one hour, that the secretary cast the ballot and that when he presented his ticket it was refused. These points were considered by both the county and State superintendent of schools.

UNION GOOD FRIDAY SERVICE ABANDONED

For the first time in more than ten years the usual Union Good Friday service will not be held this year. The matter was discussed last night, by a number of ministers and it was learned that as several pastors have planned to be out of the city on Good Friday that it would not be advisable to hold it this year.

It was originally planned to hold an appropriate musical service on the evening of Good Friday, but for the reason that Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue church, was obliged to leave the city this was given up, and then there was some talk of returning to the former plan of having the ministers speak on the "Seven Words from the Cross." Then it was ascertained that some ministers would be out of town and that was given up. The only other service appropriate to the occasion aside from those in the Episcopal churches, will be the musical Lenten service to be held at the First Baptist church, Thursday evening, April 13.

When Mr. Vincent entered upon the duties of his new position a few days ago he received a congratulatory telegram from the President.

ELKS GATHER HERE

PRESENT FOR EXALTED RULER.

Solid Silver Gavel Given Mr. Bellis By Somerville Lodge—District Deputy Grand Exalted Ruler Farmer Speaks.

Somerville and Jersey City vied with each other last night, in passing compliments to members of Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., and at the end Somerville came out on top when Past Exalted Ruler Pope, of Somerville, 1,068, presented Exalted Ruler Lewis A. Bellis with a solid ivory gavel, as a token of the esteem in which Mr. Bellis is held by the Somervillians. The occasion was the installation of officers for the ensuing year and after the ceremonies the two hundred Elks present enjoyed a feast prepared by Timbo. District Deputy Grand Exalted Ruler Farmer, of Jersey City, presided and at the close made a speech. Other speeches were made by Exalted Ruler Bellis, Exalted Ruler-elect Cawley, of Somerville and Brother Beekman, of the same lodge.

These are the new officers of Plainfield Lodge: Exalted Ruler, Lewis A. Bellis; esteemed leading knight, Thomas Hanna; esteemed loyal knight, William G. Smith; esteemed lecturing knight, Alfred A. Prudhon; secretary, William R. Townsend; treasurer, H. B. MacDonald; tiler, Edward C. Searing; trustee, S. P. T. Wilbur.

The new appointees for minor offices are: Esquire, F. G. Lynn; inner guard, Elmer D. Cutting; chaplain, Joseph Burd.

Brother Farmer in his address to the members of Plainfield Lodge, said that owing to illness he would be unable to talk at length, but that he could not refrain from the impulse to compliment the lodge upon its personnel, making complimentary reference to Secretary, Townsend.

Past Exalted Ruler Pope, of Somerville, followed in some interesting remarks, referring particularly to the newly elected Exalted Ruler Bellis and said that he had hopes some day of getting Mr. Bellis to join the Somerville lodge, so as to improve the already distinguished membership. When the magnificent turned gavel, white and glistening, was drawn from the capacious pocket of the speaker, a tumultuous cheer arose and did not cease until the gavel was safely in the hands of the new exalted ruler. Mr. Bellis tried to respond in fitting language, but was so overcome with emotion that he could only stammer his thanks.

MAYOR MOY SAYS COUNCIL BROKE FAITH

Discussing the fact that Plainfield is today without a corporation counsel, Mayor G. W. V. Moy took occasion to remark about what he considers the peculiar attitude of the Common Council in dealing with this question, and it is his opinion that the Council is to blame for the present condition.

The Mayor asserted today that several weeks ago a conference was held of councilmen to which he was invited to discuss among other things the appointment of a corporation counsel. Those present at the conference beside himself the Mayor says were Councilmen Buxton, Gloak, Mygatt, Taylor, Clay and Holt.

Mr. Moy declares that at that time it was agreed that the ordinance providing for the appointment of a corporation counsel and prescribing his duties, should be amended, and he was requested to draft a resolution covering the points. It was agreed, he asserts, that the salary of the corporation counsel should be $1,250 and that the appointment be made for one year instead of three.

The Mayor declares that the ordinance was amended as stated by Chairman Holt of the committee on laws and ordinances and was presented by him, and was then turned down at the session of the Common Council. Councilmen Taylor, Clay and Holt stood by the agreement of the conference, he says, and Councilmen Buxton, Gloak and Mygatt broke their agreement, he declares.

MARTINE DINES NEWSPAPERMEN

Senator James E. Martine had as his guest Tuesday night at the New Willard Hotel Washington, D. C., members of the New Jersey Democratic delegation in Congress, several of "the home folks" and newspaper men from the corps of Washington correspondent. The dinner was served in the private dining-room on the second floor, where a large circular table was set to accomodate fourteen.

The conversation was a mixture of reminiscences of New Jersey politics, national affairs and good stories. Senator Martine's guests were Congressmen Tuttle, of the Fifth District; Scully, of the Fourth; Townsend, of the Seventh; McCoy, of the Eighth and Kinkaid, of the Ninth; Thomas J. Pierson, of the Board of Freeholders, of Elizabeth; Jacob Bruhlacher, former member of the same board; Charles Rittenhouse, editor of the Hackettstown Gazette; W. W. St. John, Senator Martine's private secretary; George Edmunds, O. E. Case and Walter Measday, members of the New York World staff, and the Newark Evening News correspondent. Senator Martine is settled in his office in the Senate office building and has living apartments at The Hamilton.

FOR POLICE PROBE

Councilmanic Board to Investigate Silverware Mystery Wednesday Night.

MORE SALARY FOR CITY JUDGE.

Decide to Advertise for Applicants For Patrolmen—Fireworks and Trolley Service Are Discussed.

The Councilmanic police board at a special meeting last night decided to start an investigation of the silverware case and a meeting will be held at police headquarters Wednesday night, April 12, for that purpose. Those who are supposed to know anything at all about the case will be summoned to appear before the board and every possible light will be thrown on the subject.

The three pieces of silverware which belonged to Mrs. Gertrude Fenner, of Ravine road, was borrowed, she said, by a member of the police department, two years ago, and it was only recently that they were found and not until Mrs. Fenner made a complaint to Mayor Moy. The silverware was discovered in a desk at headquarters a few hours before a police board meeting.

City Judge William G. DeMeza appeared before the board and made a request for an increase in salary from $1,000 to $1,500, claiming that the duties were increasing to such an extent that he is now obliged to give a greater part of his time to the office. He cited the fact that Elizabeth pays $2,000 and gives a clerk $1,200, while Perth Amboy and New Brunswick each pay $1,600.

While no definite action was taken in the matter last night, the three members of the board present, Mayor Moy and Councilman C. C. Randolph and F. L. Holt expressed themselves favorably to the proposition and no doubt a recommendation will be made to the Council.

Bids for furnishing the police department with a sufficient number of bicycles up to the number of six were received as follows: Harry Drier, $32 each; Leo Zeisel, $37.50; Harry Lister, $35; Clarence Thorn, $35. As Mr. Dreier's bid was the lowest the bicycles will be purchased from him.

The board authorized Mayor Moy to place advertisements in the local newspapers calling for applications for members of the department. In this way it is hoped that suitable men may be secured for the force. The Mayor was also authorized to secure bids on three rubber mats for use at police headquarters. At present prisoners are obliged to sleep on iron cots.

There was a discussion of the recent attitude of the Common Council toward the fireworks and street railway ordinances, and those present thought it was quite remarkable. It was agreed that the street railway ordinance was especially needed, for it was realized that the Mayor is now helpless to correct faults in the local trolley service. Under the provisions of the new ordinance the Mayor would have the power to promptly order a flat wheel car off the line at once and could also secure quick relief from other violations.

ELECTRIC LIGHT POLES NEED ATTENTION OF P. S. C.

The attention of the Publis Service Electric Light Company has ben called to the dangerous condition of certain electric light poles, one especially on Central avenue, south of Ninth street. The pole at this point, the police allege, is tottering and threatens to fall at any time and is a menace to pedestrians.

Another thing which the police object to is the piling of coal on the sidewalks for the use of the steam roller. Such a pile was found last night by Patrolman Saunders at West Front and Albert streets, unlighted. It was dangerous to pedestrians as well as passing vehicles. The police placed warning lights on the pile.

City Court Note.

Complaint was made this morning in the City Court by George Olsen, a gardener, in the employ of H. Blatz, counsel for Manhattan, the case was put over for trial until April 15.

Feet Tired— So Tired?

TIZ Makes Sick Feet Well, No Matter What Ails Them.

TIZ acts at once and makes tired, aching, swollen feet remarkably fresh and sore proof.

It's the sure remedy, you know, for everything that gets the matter with your feet. It's for sore feet and for sweaty, bad-smelling feet, and for corns, callouses and bunions, too.

"For years I have been troubled with sore and tender feet; suffered intense pains. Have had the assistance of physicians without relief. I bought a box of TIZ, which worked a perfect cure, as it has with a great many of my friends. I would not be without it. All it requires is to be known to be universally used." A. F. Dreutzer, Chicago.

TIZ is not a powder. Powders and other fot remedies clog up the pores. TIZ draws out all poisonous exudations which bring on soreness of the feet, and is the only remedy that does. TIZ cleans out every pore and glorifies the feet—your feet.

You'll never limp again or draw up your face in pain, and you'll forget about your corns, bunions and callouses. You'll feel like a new person.

TIZ is for sale at all druggists, 25 cents per box, or it will be sent you direct, if you wish, from Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago, Ill.

Men Are Glad to Pay $12 for These Suits

They've never seen anything like their value anywhere else, and once a man buys one of these suits he shows it to his friends and finds it hard to convince them that he got it at such a little price.

So the news is traveling about these $12 Suits, and more men are coming every day for them. Some have seen samples of the cloth, and realizing the good quality have come to buy. Others have seen the suits; still others have just heard of them. So there is a constant stream of men saving money this season, being able to get good-looking, serviceable suits full of style and snap, at a price much less than they expected to pay—$12.

These $12 suits are made of excellent materials that are strictly all wool and embrace many handsome gray and brown mixtures, plain blue serges and attractive fancy striped serges, but they are tailored in a fashion that gives them a well-rounded-out appearance of the most carefully done custom work. The linings and trimmings are first class, made to do service along with the outer materials—well balanced garments in every sense, fine enough for dress, cheap enough for business.

We want every man in Newark to see our $15 Suits so that they may know exactly what we are offering; that they may make comparisons with suits offered them elsewhere at equally low price.

Suits made of strictly new Spring cloths, all wool, embracing gray and brown mixtures, plain and fancy serges, and are plainly tailored, handwork being put on them were most needed. The linings and trimmings are first class and insure a suit that will give long, satisfactory service. The sizes run to 44.

FEMININE FOIBLES.

Can you tell me why a woman,
As she hurries to the door,
Stops to put a little powder on her nose?
Oh, of course, it's only human—
I have heard that said before—
It explains the case entirely, I suppose!
But whatever is the reason,
Anywhere you chance to meet,
Whether in the mirrored parlor
Or upon the crowded street,
Even though she may be rushing
To the train with hurried feet,
She will stop
To put some powder
On her nose!

You may think she's interested
In the merchant's window show,
But she's only putting powder on her nose!
All these windows are invested
With a mirror back, you know,
For the merchant wots where his persimmon grows:
At the afternoon reception you will see each woman try
To preempt one set position; if you follow up her eye
You will see a mirror near her, and you know the reason why
When she puts
A little powder
On her nose!

That is all—for I am married, and I dare not criticise,
Or make light of women's weals or women's woes;
I'm a husband, worried, harried, worn to half my normal size,
And I'm trembling now from blanching cheeks to toes!
Yet I dare to call attention to the Universal She,
Who before the Powder Puff is bending supplicating knee;
And I think that you who read this will unflinchingly agree
That she needs
A little powder
On her nose!

SPORTS

News and Notes

GOLF.

Although the Yale golf team will lose four of its best players through graduation in June, it cannot be said that the Blue has given up hope of regaining its supremacy in intercollegiate circles. Those who will be among the missing when the collegians gather for the annual tournament at Baltusrol in September include Robert Legg, the trans-Mississippi title holder; B. P. Merriman, twice champion of Connecticut, and Karl K. Mosser.

On the other hand, Robert Gardner, the 1909 national champion, is still available. He is the Yale captain now and will be able to call upon such good players as C. G. Waldo, Jr., Stanley, Dunlap and Steiner. Waldo, who belongs to the Brooklyn Country Club, is one of the most promising of the new men. He made an excellent showing in the Connecticut tournament last summer.

Yale has matches scheduled with Harvard, Princeton, Williams and the New Haven Country Club, this spring. Class contests will soon be in order. The Yale golfers also expect to derive inspiration as well as instruction from Robert Andrew, the Prestwick man, who will soon take up his duties as professional at the New Haven Country Club. As an amateur on the other side Andrew has for several years been ranked among the best.

According to James Maldon, the Nassau Country Club professional, who recently returned from Bellair, Fla., where he was helping Alec Smith, the game is more popular than ever in the South. Malden reports that golf along the west coast has been unusually brisk. Changes at the Bellaire links will take the form of adding nine holes to the present second nine, and the giving over of the present first nine as an auxiliary course for practice and for the use of the women players. By next winter it is possible that a tournament at Bellaire may be added to the Southern schedule.

Plainfield, N. J., April 6, 1911.

The second miracle in the life of "the farmer-orator" has occurred. Dispatch from Washington states that the Senator agrees to support a Republican President's policy.

When the gong sounded at the New Providence township school meeting Jeffery was hanging on the ropes while Johnson was still on his feet. And yet it is said "they never come back."

Fifteen hundred dollars a year is none too much ot be paid a city judge for his services. Particularly is this true when his duties are satisfactorily discharged. It is not a matter of an hour or so each morning that the incumbent must dispense justice for that is only a part of his work. Almost every hour in the day, Sundays included he is called upon to devote his attention to the city's business. Consequently his private law practise suffers to no small extent. William G. DeMeza, although in office but three months has shown himself splendidly qualified for the trust resposed in him by the voters last November. There should be no hesitation on the part of the Common Council in granting his request for a salary of $125 a month.

WILL SELL CLEVELAND'S BIRTHPLACE FOR $18,000.

The annual meeting of the Caldwell Presbyterian church at Caldwell, was held Tuesday night, when the trustees were given the power to sell the parsonage to the Cleveland Memorial Association for $18,000.

George Andrews and Edward H. Baldwin were elected trustees for three years. William N. Hasler was made clerk. An auditing committee composed of James A. Speer, Hubert N. Benham and Herman Hasler was appointed to report at the annual meeting, the first Monday in April, 1912.

Attractive for Women.

The Westfield Golf Club intends to make the coming season particularly attractive to the women. There will be teas and hops, tennis and golf competitions and Saturday afternoon bridge parties. DRY CLEANING TALK

Number 3

THE IMITATORS

Many little pressing tailor shops claim to do Dry Cleaning. These are the magicians. These the people who simply take in your clothes, brush out the dust, remove such spots as they can, pressing fairly well. Your clothing is then sent home and after a few days the spots reappear. You naturally condemn Dry Cleaning, when in truth your garments have only been sponged and pressed.

You should send your clothes here. We dust them properly, having the right equipment. Then we put your garments in just the right bath for their special needs, depending upon condition, texture, etc. Drying and airing after cleaning is accomplished here under the most sanitary and perfect conditions.

Send your next work to us—if you appreciate quality.

ENDEAVOR SOCIETY GIVES ENTERTAINMENT

The members of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church gave a delightful dramatic and musical entertainment in the church parlors last night. The affair was largely attended despite the inclement weather and a neat sum was realized to meet the society's pledges.

A one-act farce, "Her Busy Day," was the feature of the program. The young people took their parts admirably and there was almost a laugh a minute. Those in the cast were the following: The Misses Eva Rogers, Isabelle Randolph, Mildred Green, Ethel Titsworth and Helen Rogers; Roland Davis, John Cottrell, Jr., Roy Titsworth, Raymond Burdick, Frank Kellogg and Frank Langworthy. They were coached by Miss Ruth Maxson, while Mrs. Frank Kellogg acted as prompter.

Previous to the farce, a duet was sung by John Cottrell, Jr., and Miss Celia Cottrell, at its conclusion Charles Titsworth rendered a pleasing solo, accompanied by Mrs. F. J. Hubbard and Mrs. Violet Truell-Johnson and Mr. Schultze gave a violin duet accompanied by Miss Mabel Maxson. Home-made candy was sold by Miss Evalois St. John and Miss Frances Mosher, while refreshments were served by a committee in charge of Mrs. Raymond Burdick.

Veteran Officials' Pensions.

Assemblyman Egan introduced in the House at Trenton yesterday, a bill to permit the retirement on pension of public office employes in cities after thirty years service. They are to receive half pay and must ask to be pensioned and also submit to a physical examination. A bill with similar intent but lacking some of the present provisions had met with opposition.

Legislature Ends April 21.

The outlook is that the present session of the Legislature will end week after next, probably Friday, April 21. This will make the length of the session fifteen weeks. President Ackerman ,of the Senate, said yesterday afternoon that Speaker Kenney of the Assembly and himself were doing all they could by co-operation to end the session next week.

GERAN MEASURE TO BE REPORTED INTACT

Although the measure will likely be stubbornly fought when brought out on the floor, it was stated yesterday at Trenton by Senator Bradley, Republican, chairman of the Senate Committee on Elections, that there is no disposition on the part of the committee to change the essential provisions of the Geran Election Reform bill, which is advocated by Governor Wilson. He declared that several minor changes had been made and that committee men still had considerable work before them in reviewing the measure. He asserted that it probably would not be reported this week, but that such action would surely be taken early next week.

Mr. Egan, of Hudson, father of the measure, already approved by the House, offered the resolution in the Assembly and it was unanimously adopted. It was not passed in the Senate, however, until it had been bitterly fought, on the ground that such action was not in order until the Senate's substitute bill had been put to vote in the lower branch. It was the prevailing opinion, though, that the resolution should be adopted to facilitate progress of this necessary legislation, and for that reason it was passed.

WILSON SIGNS LIABILITY BILL; EFFECTIVE JULY 4.

As was predicted, following a conference of labor leaders in Newark Friday night, the Edge employers' liability law passed final reading in the House Monday night without a dissenting vote. On motion of Chairman Ford, of the Committee on Labor and Industries, and sponsor for two similar measures more acceptable to organized labor, the bill was ordered sent to the Governor immediately.

Yesterday the Governor signed the bill. The measure was taken to the executive chamber by Senator Edge and Assemblymen Walsh and Ford and W. B. Dickson. The pen with which the Governor signed the bill was presented to Mr. Ford as president of the State Federation of Labor.

The bill becomes effective on July 4, next.

It is said that nearly 5,500,000 pounds of chewing gum were consumed in the United States in 1909. This sum had hardly the sustaining value of gum which was chewed by Mexican soldiers at the time of the Spanish invasion, and is mentioned by early Spanish writers. A piece of gum in the mouth was enough food for a day's march. This gum was obtained from a native tree.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

"The Pink Lady," who is appearing nightly at the New Amsterdam theatre under the direction of Klaw & Erlanger, is a very charming, very amusing and very, very delightful person—a young lady who is certain to pay a long and profitable visit to Broadway. Ivan Caryll, the composer, has surpassed his previous compositions in the score and C. M. S. McLellan has adapted from the lively farce, "The Satyre," by Berr and Guillemand, a bright and entertaining book. Klaw and Erlanger have mounted the production in this firm's elaborate manner. The gowns, which herald the 1911 Spring and Summer styles, make as big a sensation among the women as the entertainment itself. Herbert Gresham staged the production and Julian Mitchell, the musical numbers.

Care of Fruit Jars.

It is a good plan to make it a rule whenever a fruit jar is emptied to scald the jar carefully, dry it perfectly and then screw on the top without a rubber. A quick sterilizing with boiling water is all that is necessary when the jar is next to be used. If the rubbers are left on the jars when not in use they are apt to impart an almost irremovable odor, which sometimes permeates the jar's contents.

Granting of Licenses.

Similar in its provisions to a bill introduced early in the session by Mr. McGowan, a measure has been submitted in the House at Trenton, by Mr. Donnelly, of Hudson, authorizing municipalities to grant liquor licenses. This would take from the Court of Common Pleas the right vested in it at present in passing upon licenses in the townships.

Reversible Cloaks.

A useful and attractive garment that can be made at home by any woman used to simple tailoring, is the reversible cloak, made semi-fitting, with kimono sleeves, and usually of broad cloth lined with soft satin. The broadcloth side is of some dark color or black, with plain light or white revers of satin; and it is used for afternoon wear. The satin side is in some light evening shade, with satin revers in slightly darker color, and makes a charming wrap for the theatre, etc. It is not nearly so hard to make as it sounds, and is extremely economical, being really two garments in one.

"Why," asks the inquisitive person, "do you enjoy having someone tell you that you are pretty, when you know you are not? Does it make you believe that you are?"

"No," she answered readily. "But it makes me believe htat he believes I am."—Judge.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

At the annual Sunday school meeting of the Presbyterian church last night, George Cameron was elected superintendent to succeed Theodore W. Day. No. 197, which provides for the legal commitment of wayward females to reformatory institutions.

No. 417, which authorizes county park commissioners to issue bonds for the purchase and development of parks.

No. 412, fixing salaries of license inspectors and clerks.

CHARLES FURY SUES ASSAILANT FOR $5,000.

As a result of the attack made upon Charles J. Fury, the proprietor of the Hotel Sterling, Trenton by Alfred W. Packer, the City District Court sergeant-at-arms, in that city yesterday morning on Chancery street, Mr. Fury has instituted suit for damages against Packer in the Mercer Supreme Court. Mr. Fury is well known in Plainfield.

John H. Backes represents Mr. Fury and $5,000 dmages are asked from Packer as a result of the abuse and force which he is said to have used in dealing with the plaintiff.

It is set forth in the declaration that Packer assaulted and insulted Mr. Fury. It is charged that he dealt him many severe blows, which inflicted painful bodily injuries. All this is said to have been done without the slightest provocation on the part of the plaintiff. Damages are asked for the mental and physical suffering caused.

Packer, who was recently in another encounter with a South Broad street merchant, was held in $300 bail by Justice Harris this morning for the assault on Mr. Fury.

Subsequently Packer went before Justice of the Peace Mills and had Fury held in $200 bail on a charge of resisting an officer.

May Apply to Borough.

State Senator E. R. Ackerman introduced a bill in the Senate last night regulating the assessment for sewers in cities containing a population of less than 12,000. As North Plainfield borough has less than 12,000 population it is presumed that the bill would apply to that municipality, although Mayor N. B. Smalley stated today that he had no knowledge of the bill.

FEATS OF ARTISTS

Some Notable Achievements In Eleventh Hour Work.

ONE OF LANDSEER'S SPURTS.

The Masterpiece the Great Painter Produced In a Few Hours—Remarkable Records Made by Some of the Famous Masters of Music.

Some astounding feats in eleventh hour work, especially in the musical and artistic branches, have been achieved by the great artists of the world.

Sir Edwin Landseer had promised a picture for the spring exhibition of the British institution in 1845, but on the day before the exhibition was to be opened all the hanging committee had received was an empty frame, which was duly hung in the position of honor.

As the prospect of receiving a picture for the frame seemed to the committee to be slight, a member thereof went to see the artist. He found Landseer standing in front of a bare canvas.

"That's the picture I promised," said the great man, pointing to the canvas. "I have not touched it yet, but I will send it to the institution tonight."

And he was as good as his word. A few hours later the completed picture was delivered and may be seen today in the National gallery. This wonderful work of half a dozen hours was none other than the universally admired "Cavalier's Pets."

Leander, the famous painter, is capable of remarkably rapid work. Upon seeing him leave his rooms early in the morning with a canvas on his back the neighbors of the great artist used to exclaim, "There goes Leander off to paint his daily picture." Although this may have been an exaggeration, it is a well known fact that on several occasions the academician produced a large picture within a few hours.

Leander has a formidable rival in the matter of hasty work in Solomon Solomon. This artist painted an admirable life size portrait of Israel Zangwill within the period of five hours.

In the realm of music there may be cited many instances of extraordinarily quick work. Oscar Hammerstein's record of a comic opera in one act, words and music, composed in one night, is an example.

One of the most remarkable bits of orchestration ever written, the overture to "Otello," was scored by Rossini in only twenty-four hours.

Sir Arthur Sullivan composed the brilliant epilogue of the "Golden Legend" in the same space of time. He sat down at 9 o'clock one evening to compose the overture to "Iolanthe" and did not rise from his desk until the last note was written at 7 on the following morning, while the overture to "The Yeoman of the Guard" occupied him no more than twelve hours both to compose and score.

It is told of Donizetti that he wrote the instrumentation of an entire opera within thirty hours. On the morning in which Rossini's "Gazza Ladra" was to be produced not a single note of the overture had been written, and the manager was in despair. He sought out the indolent composer, locked him in one of the rooms of La Scala and declared he should have neither food nor freedom until the overture was completed. Rossini set to work with a will and to such purpose that the music was written and rehearsed before the evening performance.

Mozart was another genius who frequently needed the spur of eleventh hour work. Though at 1 in the morning not a note of the overture to "Don Giovanni" had been set down, yet Mozart finished it before he went to the breakfast table at his usual hour. During the long hours consumed by this task it is said that the musican's wife kept him awake by reading fairy stories to him.

One of the fastest composers that ever lived was Trotere, the writer of songs. Some of the composer's feats verge on the marvelous. It is said, for example, that he actually wrote the score of "In Old Madrid" and had dropped it into the letter box within eight minutes of the time he had taken up his pen. This would be remarkable merely as showing his dexterity and agility, to say nothing of the labor of the composition itself.

One of Schubert's friends tells a story indicating that composer's rapidity of workmanship. He had left Schubert absorbed in Goethe's ballad "The Erl King." On his return in a few minutes he found the musician swiftly putting on paper the notes inspired by the poem, and within an hour there had been composed that great song the world has admired ever since.—Edwin Tarrisse in Chicago Tribune.

Deep, but Dry.

"Lincoln, himself a superb writer," said a college professor, "could not stand tedious writing in others. He once condemned for its tediousness a Greek history, whereupon a diplomat took him to task.

"The author of that history, Mr. President," said the diplomat, "is one of the profoundest scholars of the age. Indeed, it may be doubted whether any man of our generation has plunged more deeply in the sacred fount of learning."

"Yes, or come up drier," said Lincoln.

We cannot control the evil tongues of others, but a good life enables us to despise them.—Cato.

MIGHTY ARCTURUS.

If This Star Were Our Sun It Would Instantly Consume the Earth.

The parallax of a star is its angular displacement as seen from two opposite points on the earth's orbit. The base line employed in this gigantic species of surveying is 186,000,000 miles in length, but the calculation is reduced to the semidiameter of the orbit. The results are at the same time amazing and instructive.

Let us take the famous star Arcturus, often called the "star of Job" because in the Old Testament the Almighty is represented as saying to the unfortunate patriarch, who maintains a certain dignity in spite of his helplessness and his sufferings, "Canst thou call forth Arcturus and his sons?"

Many conflicting measures of the parallax of Arcturus have been made, but the latest made at Yale seem more probably correct than their predecessors. They fix the parallax at 0.066 seconds—i. e., sixty-six one-thousandth of a second of arc. From this it is easy to calculate the distance of the star. It comes out at nearly 290,000,000,000,000 miles (two hundred and ninety trillion miles). This is more than 3,000,000 times the distance of the earth from the sun.

Having this distance, we can calculate the actual amount of light shed by Arcturus, or, in other words, its actual brightness as compared with that of our sun, on the supposition that both were at the same distance from us. We thus find that Arcturus exceeds the sun as a light giver about 2,500 times! It is a sun 2,500 times brighter than ours.

Put the earth as near to Arcturus as it is to the sun and all life would disappear from its surface as if swept off by a blast of inconceivable heat. The summer temperature would rise to tens of thousands of degrees. The oceans would boil away. Vegetation would be burned up in a twinkling. The eyes of living beings would char in their sockets. The plains and mountains would burst into flame. Minerals would run in molten streams. There would be no comfort for a living world nearer to Arcturus than about 4,000,000,000 miles. If he has planets he must keep them at a respectful distance. And yet nearly 300,000,000,000,000 miles from him we can look into his blazing eye and see only a bright star.

Still, Dr. Alfred Russel Wallace maintains that this little earth, this tiny attendant of a tiny sun, is the only seat of intelligent life—outside of the misty midregion of disembodied spirits—that the universe contains, and Dr. Wallace is a learned man. But his learning is not that which astronomy offers.—Garrett P. Serviss in New York American.

Unavoidable Delay.

A woman went before the magistrate and modestly inquired:

"Your honor, can I have a warrant for the arrest of my husband? He boxed my ears yesterday."

"Certainly, ma'am," replied the judge. "I will make out a warrant on the ground of assault and personal injuries."

"Can I fetch the warrant in about a month?"

"In a month? Why won't you take it at once?"

"Please, your honor, when my husband slapped my face I took my rolling pin and hit him on the head so that he had to be removed to the hospital. The doctors say, however, that he will be on his legs again in a month."

Discrediting an Astrologer.

A certain king, says a tale from the Persian, asked an astrologer, "How many years of life remain to me?" The wise man replied, "Ten." The king became very despondent and betook himself, as one stricken with a sickness, to his bed. His vizier, who possessed great wisdom, sent for the seer and in the king's presence asked him, "How many years have you to live?" He replied, "Twenty." The vizier ordered that he should that very hour be executed in the king's presence. The king was satisfied and commended the sagacity of his minister and no longer attached any importance to the astrologer's saying.

Getting Into German.

In the use of legal terms the German lawyer's gain in a saving of number of words over our equivalent expressions seems to be lost in multiplication of syllables in the words used by him. For example, he says "Zuruckbehaltungsrecht" for "right of lien" and "gesammtgutsverbindlichkeiten" for "liabilities of common property." What an awful word he must have as an equivalent for our "imprescriptibility."—Docket.

Rung In an Actor.

"How did you enjoy the vaudeville performance?"

"It was good. They had performing cats, a baseball player, a champion pugilist, a trained cockatoo, and, I give you my word, they even had an actor doing a turn."—Louisville Courier Journal.

COLOR AND SOUND.

Hues That Are Unseen and Tones That Are Unheard.

The primary colors shown in the rainbow vary from red to blue and violet, and the vibrations or lengths of the light waves that give us violet grow shorter and shorter and at length give us red. These vibrations can be measured. One day, quite by chance, I came across the statement that there were innumerable light waves longer than those which give violet. At once the question sprang, Were these longer waves represented by colors which we don't see, colors for which we have no name, colors of which we can form no conception? And was the same thing true of the waves which, growing shorter and shorter, give us the sensation of red? There is room, of course, for myriads of colors beyond this other extremity of our vision. A little study convinced me that my guess was right, for all the colors which we see are represented to our sense of feeling in degrees of heat; that is, blue shows one reading on the thermometer and red a higher reading, and by means of this new standard I discovered that man's range of vision is not even placed in the middle of the register of heat, but occupies a little space far up toward the warmer extremity of it. There are thousands of degrees of cold lower than blue and hundreds of degrees of heat above red. All these gradations are doubtless represented by colors which no human eye can perceive, no human mind imagine. It is with sight as with sound. We know now that there are noises louder than thunder which we cannot hear, the roar that lies on the other side of silence. We men are poor restless prisoners, hemmed in by our senses as by the walls of a cell, hearing only a part of nature's orchestra and that part imperfectly; seeing only a thousandth part of the color marvels about us and seeing that infinitesimal part incorrectly and partially.—Forum.

THE DEATH OF A CZAR.

Dramatic Story of the Way Nicholas I. Committed Suicide.

There are various stories of the death of the Czar Nicholas I. Here is one which the great singer Mario heard from a doctor of the court and which is told in "The Romance of a Great Singer:"

"When the Russian army was meeting with reverse after reverse in the Crimean war the czar sent for his doctor and demanded to know which was the quickest and most painless poison that he knew of, bluntly telling the startled physician that he had resolved to commit suicide. He further warned the doctor in the stern manner which was his characteristic that if he were not obeyed the doctor's life would be worthless. He sharply silenced the man's nervous remonstrances and commanded him to bring the poison. The doctor did not dare to refuse and a few minutes later brought a small vial containing the poison, which he assured the czar would deprive any one of existence in a few minutes. To be sure that he had been obeyed and that the doctor was speaking the truth the czar obliged him to remain in the room warning him that if the poison failed his life should answer for it. The czar took the poison without the least tremor or the movement of a muscle, and, although twice told by the doctor, who held his watch in his hand, that there was time to save him by an antidote should he alter his mind, the czar refused, answering the second entreaty by simply waving the man away, he by that time being unable to speak. It was given out that the czar had died from the effects of a severe chill, but those who knew the facts also knew that he had committed suicide rather than face the defeat of his army."

Carlyle an Intemperate Smoker.

For about seventy of his eighty-six years Carlyle smoked and made most of his contemporaries smoke. The trouble with him was that he was too fond of smoking a rank pipe on an empty stomach. That gave him pains and his contemporaries particular pains, for "puir auld Carlyle" was as savage as a meat house dog all the time. He cared for but two men in the world, Tennyson and Dickens. All the rest were "puir, feckless, reckless, intemperate bladders and gas bags," and all because Tom did not know how to clean his pipe and keep it clean and would smoke before breakfast.—Tobacco Leaves.

Breaking the Sabbath.

Two Scots, one old and the other young, set out one bright winter Sunday morning to walk ten miles to kirk. The sun shone gloriously. The frozen road rang under their feet. The cold, pure air was as exhilarating as wine. The younger Scot looked up at the glittering blue sky and said:

"It's a fine day."

The older man frowned and answered:

"Aye, it is a fine day, but As this a day to be talking about days?"

Doubtful Vocalism.

"There is only one trouble about a Chinese cook," said the man from the west.

"What is that?"

"You can never tell whether he is singing at his work or whether he has burnt himself and is moaning with pain."—Washington Star.

A huge emotion had got hold of him. She saw the red flush rise suddenly above his collar, and then sink back before it reached his cheeks, and all at once he was very pale. But not a muscle of his face moved, not a line was drawn; only his sandy eyelashes quivered a little. His hands were thrust deep into the pockets of his jacket, but the fingers were motionless.

Margaret remembered how he had told her more than once that she was the only woman the world held for him, and she had thought it was nonsense, rather vulgarly and clumsily expressed by a man who was not much better than an animal where women were concerned.

It flashed upon her at last that what he had said was literally true, that she had misjudged an extraordinary man altogether, as many people did, and that she was indeed the only woman in the whole world who could master and dominate one whom many feared and hated, and whom she had herself once detested beyond words.

While these thoughts were disturbing her a little, Mr. Van Torp recovered himself; his features relaxed, his hands came out of his pockets, and he slowly turned towards her.

"I hope you don't think me rude," he said awkwardly. "I feel things a good deal sometimes, though people mightn't believe it."

They were still standing near together, and not far from the door through which Margaret had entered.

"It's never rude to be grateful, even for small things," she answered gently.

Her handsome head was a little bent, and her eyes were turned to the floor as she passed him going to the door.

"I'm going to see the manager of the hotel," she said. "I'll be back directly."

"No, no! Please let me—"

But she was gone, the door was shut again, and Mr. Van Torp was left to his own very happy reflections for a while.

Not for long, however. He was still standing before the table staring at the corn-flowers and poppies without consciously seeing them when he was aware of the imposing presence of Mrs. Rushmore, who had entered softly during his reverie and was almost at his elbow.

"This is Mr. Van Torp, I presume," she said gravely, inclining her head. "I am Mrs. Rushmore. You have perhaps heard Miss Donne speak of me."

"I'm very pleased to meet you, Mrs. Rushmore," said the American, bowing low. "I've often heard Miss Donne speak of you with the greatest gratitude and affection."

"That's nice," Mrs. Rushmore answered with gravity, and as she established herself on the sofa she indicated a chair not far from her.

It was only proper that Margaret should always speak of her with affection and gratitude. Mr. Van Torp sat down on the chair to which she had directed rather than invited him; and he prepared to be bored to the full extent of the bearable.

"I had the pleasure of knowing Mr. Rushmore," he said in the proper tone of mournfully retrospective admiration. "He was sincerely lamented by all our business men."

"He was," assented the widow, as she would have said amen in church, in the right place, and with much the same solemn intonation.

There was a moment's pause, during which the millionaire was trying to think of something else she might like to hear, for she was Margaret's friend, and he wished to make a good impression. He was therefore not prepared to hear her speak again before he did, and much less for the subject of conversation she introduced at once.

"You know our friend, Mons. Logotheti, I believe?" she inquired suddenly.

"Why, certainly," answered Van Torp, brightening at once at the mention of his rival, and at once also putting on his moral armor of caution. "I know him quite well."

"Indeed? Have you known many Greeks, may I ask?"

"I've met one or two in business, Mrs. Rushmore, but I can't say I've known any as well as Mr. Logotheti."

"You may think it strange that I should ask you about him at our first meeting," said the good lady, "but I'm an American, and I cannot help feeling that a fellow-countryman's opinion of a foreigner is very valuable. You are, I understand, an old friend of Miss Donne's, though I have not had the pleasure of meeting you before, and you have probably heard that she has made up her mind to marry Mons. Logotheti. I am bound to confess, as her dear mother's oldest friend, that I am very apprehensive of the consequences. I have the gravest apprehensions, Mr. Van Torp."

"Have you, really?" asked the millionaire, with caution, but sympathetically. "I wonder why!"

"A Greek!" said Mrs. Rushmore, sadly. "Think of a Greek!"

Mr. Van Torp, who was not without a sense of humor, was inclined to answer that, in fact, he was thinking of a Greek at that very moment. But he abstained.

"There are Greeks and Greeks, Mrs. Rushmore," he answered wisely.

"That is true," answered the lady, "but I should like your opinion, as one of our most prominent men of business—as one who, if I may say so, has of late triumphantly established his claim to respect." Mr. Van Torp bowed and waved his hand in acknowledgment of this high praise. "I should like your opinion about this—er—this Greek gentleman whom my young friend insists upon marrying."

"Really, Mrs. Rushmore—"

"Because if I thought there was unhappiness in store for her I would save her, if I had to marry the man myself!"

Mr. Van Torp wondered how she would accomplish such a feat.

"Indeed?" he said very gravely.

"I mean it," answered Mrs. Rushmore.

There was a moment's silence, during which Mr. Van Torp revolved something in his always active brain, while Mrs. Rushmore looked at him as if she expected that he would doubt her determination to drag Logotheti to the matrimonial altar and marry him by sheer strength, rather than let Margaret be his unhappy bride. But Mr. Van Torp said something quite different.

"May I speak quite frankly, though we hardly know each other?" he asked.

"We are both Americans," answered the good lady, with a grand national air. "I should not expect anything but perfect frankness of you."

"The truth is, Mrs. Rushmore, that ever since I had the pleasure of knowing Miss Donne, I have wanted to marry her myself."

"You!" cried the lady, surprised beyond measure, but greatly pleased.

"Yes," said Mr. Van Torp quietly, "and therefore, in my position, I can't give you an unbiased opinion about Mr. Logotheti, I really can't."

"Well," said Mrs. Rushmore, "I am surprised!"

While she was still surprised Mr. Van Torp tried to make some running, and asked an important question.

"May I ask whether, as Miss Donne's oldest friend, you would look favorably on my proposal, supposing she were free?"

Before Mrs. Rushmore could answer, the door opened suddenly, and she could only answer by an energetic nod and a look which meant that she wished Mr. Van Torp success with all her excellent heart.

"It's quite settled!" Margaret cried as she entered. "I've brought the director to his senses, and you are to have the rooms they were keeping for a Russian prince who has not turned up!"

CHAPTER VI.

Margaret took Van Torp with her to the performance the next day, after impressing upon him that he was not to speak, not to whisper, not to applaud, not to make any sound, from the moment he entered the theater till he left it for the dinner interval. He was far too happy with her to question anything she said, and obeyed her most scrupulously. Twenty-four hours earlier she would have laughed at the idea that his presence beside her at such a time could be not only bearable, but sympathetic, yet that seemed natural now. The diva and the ex-cowboy, the accomplished musician and the Californian miner, the sensitive, gifted, capricious woman and the iron-jawed money-wolf had found that they had something in common. Wagner's last music affected them in the same way.

Such things are not to be explained, and could not be believed if they did not happen again and again before the eyes of those who know how to see, which is quite a different thing from merely seeing. Margaret's sudden liking for the man she had once so thoroughly disliked had begun when he had whistled to her. It grew while he sat beside her in the darkened theater. She was absorbed by the music, the action, and the scene, and at this second hearing she could follow the noble poem itself; but she was subconscious of what her neighbor felt. He was not so motionless merely because she had told him that he must sit still; he was not so intent on what he heard and saw, merely to please her; it was not mere interest that held him, still less was it curiosity. The spell was upon him; he was entranced, and Margaret knew it.

Even when they left the theater and drove back to the hotel, he was silent, and she was the first to speak. Margaret hated the noise and confusion of the restaurant near the Festival theater.

"You have enjoyed it," she said. "I'm glad I brought you."

"I've felt something I don't understand," Van Torp answered gravely.

She liked the reply for its simplicity. She had perhaps expected that he would summon up his most picturesque language to tell her how much pleasure the music had given him, or that he would perhaps laugh at himself for having been moved; but instead, he only told her that he did not understand what he had felt; and they walked on without another word.

"Go and get something to eat," she said when they reached the hotel, "and I'll meet you here in half an hour. I don't care to talk either."

He only nodded, and lifted his hat as she went up the steps; but instead of going to eat, he sat down on a bench outside, and waited for her there, reflecting on the nature of his new experience.

Like most successful men, he looked on all theories as trash, good enough to amuse clever idlers, but never to be taken into consideration in real life. He never asked about the principle on which any invention was founded; his first and only question was: "Will it work?"

Considering himself as the raw material, and the theater he had just left as the mill, he was forced to admit that "Parsifal" "worked."

Presently Margaret came out of the hotel, expecting to find him waiting for her within the hall, and prepared to be annoyed with him for taking so long over a meal. She stood on the step and looked about, and saw him sitting on the bench at a little distance. He raised his eyes as she came towards him and then rose quickly.

"Is it time?" he asked.

"Yes," she said. "Did you get anything decent to eat?"

"Yes," he answered vaguely. "That is, now I think of it, I forgot about dinner. It doesn't matter."

She looked at his hard face curiously and saw a dead blank, the blank that had sometimes frightened her by its possibilities, when the eyes alone came suddenly to life.

"Won't you go in and get a biscuit, or a sandwich?" she asked after a moment.

"Oh, no, thanks. I'm used to skipping meals when I'm interested in things. Let's go, if you're ready."

"I believe you are one of nature's Wagnerites," Margaret said, as they drove up the hill again, and she smiled at the idea.

"Well," he answered slowly, "there's one thing, if you don't mind my telling you. It's rather personal. Perhaps I'd better not."

She Was Aware of His Slight Change of Position Without Turning Her Eyes.

The prima donna was silent for a few moments, and did not look at him.

"Tell me," she said suddenly.

"It's this. I don't know how long the performance lasted, but while it was going on I forgot you were close beside me. You might just as well not have been there. It's the first time since I ever knew you that I've been near you without thinking about you all the time, and I hadn't realized it till I was sitting there by myself. I hope you don't mind my telling you?"

"It only makes me more glad that I brought you," Margaret said quietly.

"Thank you," he answered; but he was quite sure that the same thing could not happen again during the second part.

Nevertheless, it happened. For a little while, they were man and woman, sitting side by side and very near, two in a silent multitude of other men and women; but before long he was quite motionless, his eyes were fixed again and he had forgotten her. She saw it and wondered, for she knew how her presence moved him, and as his hands lay folded on his knee, a mischievous girlish impulse almost made her, the great artist, forget that she was listening to the greatest music in the world and nearly made her lay her hand on his, just to see what he would do. She was ashamed of it, and a little disgusted with herself. The part of her that was Margaret Donne felt the disgust; the part that was Cordova felt the shame, and each side of her nature was restrained at a critical moment. Yet when the "Good Friday" music began, she was thinking of Van Torp and he was unconscious of her presence.

It could not last, and soon she, too, was taken up into the artificial paradise of the master-musician and borne along in the gale of golden wings, and there was no passing of time till the very end; and the people rose in silence and went out under the summer stars; and all those whom nature had gifted to hear rightly, took with them memories that years would scarcely dim.

The two walked slowly back to the town as the crowd scattered on foot and in carriages. It was warm, and there was no moon, and one could smell the dust, for many people were moving in the same direction, though some stopped at almost every house and went it, and most of them were beginning to talk in quiet tones.

Margaret stepped aside from the road and entered a narrow lane, and Van Torp followed her in silence.

"This leads out to the fields," she said. "I must breath the fresh air. Do you mind?"

"On the contrary."

He said nothing more, and she did not speak, but walked on without haste, dilating her nostrils to the sweet smell of grass that reached her already. In a little while they had left the houses behind them, and they came to a gate that led into a field.

Van Torp was going to undo the fastening, for there was no lock.

"No," she said, "we won't go through. I love to lean on a gate."

She rested her crossed arms on the upper rail and Van Torp did the same, careful that his elbow should not touch hers, and they both stared into the dim, sweet-scented meadow. He felt her presence now and it almost hurt him; he could hear his slow pulse in his ears, hard and regular. She did not speak, but the night was so still that he could hear her breathing, and at last he could not bear the warm silence any longer.

"What were you thinking about?" he asked, trying to speak lightly.

She waited, or hesitated, before she answered him.

"You," she said, after a time.

He moved involuntarily, and then drew a little further away from her, as he might have withdrawn a foot from the edge of a precipice, out of common caution. She was aware of his slight change of position without turning her eyes.

"What made you say what you did to Mrs. Rushmore yesterday afternoon?" she asked.

"About you?"

"Yes."

"She asked me, point-blank, what I thought of Logotheti," Van Torp answered. "I told her that I couldn't give her an unbiased opinion of the man you meant to marry, because I had always hoped to marry you myself."

"Oh—was that the way it happened?"

"Mrs. Rushmore could hardly have misunderstood me," said Van Torp, gathering the reins of himself, so to say, for anything that might happen.

"No. But it sounds differently when you say it yourself."

"That was just what I said, anyhow," answered Van Torp. "I didn't think she'd go and tell you right away, but since she has, I don't regret having said that much."

"It was straightforward, at all events—if it was all true!" There was the faintest laugh in her tone as she spoke the last words.

"It's true, right enough, though I didn't expect that I should be talking to you about this sort of thing tonight."

"The effect on Mrs. Rushmore was extraordinary, positively fulminating," Margaret said more lightly. "She says I ought to break off my engagement at once, and marry you! Fancy!"

"That's very kind of her, I'm sure," observed Mr. Van Torp.

"I don't think so. I like it less and less, the more I think of it."

"Well, I'm sorry, but I suppose it's natural, since you've concluded to marry him, and it can't be helped. I wasn't going to say anything against him, and I wouldn't say anything for him, so there was nothing to do but to explain, which I did. I'm sorry you think I did wrong, but I should give the same answer again."

"Mrs. Rushmore thinks that Konstantin is a designing foreigner because he's a Greek man of business, and that you are perfection because you are an American business man."

"If I'm perfection, that's not the real reason," said Van Torp, snatching at his first chance to steer out of the serious current; but Margaret did not laugh.

DEMOCRATS SPEAK

"No citizen of New Jersey was more happy than I when the news came of the splendid victory of Gov. Wilson at the polls," he said. "He had raised the expectations of the Nation as well as the State, by his campaign promises. As a candidate, he made specific promises as perconal pledges, and events show how as an executive he has set about to fulfill every pledge.

"Our hopes in the West are raised by Gov. Wilson's record. I am glad to stand on this platform with him, and of his constituents here, there is none more anxious to do him honor than I.

"I think one of the best things he has done was to send Martine to Washington as your Senator.

"As I understand it, we should not have had Martine, if we did not have Wilson. We are weak at Washington only in the Senate, but of the Senators gained in the new Congress, nearly all the Democrats are of the right type.

"New Jersey sent a lifelong reformer, and New York, more strange to say, has just sent us a progressive Senator. We want them all like Martine, who stands like a rock against any combination of Democrats that seeks to league with standpat Republicans and thwart progressive legislation.

"From a Democratic standpoint the last fifteen years have been dark. But I come to give you promise of the dawn. I am an optimist. I have been compelled to go through the shadow of the valley of political death so often that I can distinguish the dawn when I see it."

Senator Martine in a brief address evoked great applause when slightly turning toward Gov. Wilson, he said:

"I will come back here next year, if spared, to plead the cause and candidacy of a fellow Jerseyman for the Presidency of the United States."

Senator Martine said the Democrats would revise the tariff so that the tax on the necessities of life would be reduced.

HELD UP FUNERAL FOR TWENTY CENT BILL

Bill collectors who use ordinary drastic measures to bring about the payment of a debt have been "gone one better" by a Mount Bethel woman whose name is withheld for various reasons. For the munificent sum of twenty cents, owed her for a telephone call to Plainfield, she held up a funeral procession making its way past her home to the Mount Bethel cemetery, making the request of the undertaker that the amount be handed over. It is needless to say that she got it.

The bill was contracted in the following manner: The family of a North Plainfield woman who had passed away, wished to make arrangements for burial in the Mount Bethel cemetery. The caretaker had no telephone so the nearest neighbor who possesses an instrument was called up. The latter took the Plainfield number and agreed to have the caretaker call back when he could be located. This was done during the day but after the cemetery man had completed his conversation over the wire, he discovered he had no money to pay the 'phone charge. He left saying he would see that the undertaker in the case or the family of the deceased would settle.

The woman of the house evidently made up her mind she was going to have that twenty cents and wasn't going to wait a year or so for it, either. Accordingly, when the line of mourners' carriages hove in sight a couple of days later, she sallied out. The funeral director was leading the procession, unconscious of the debt that had been incurred and was accordingly somewhat surprised when an excited woman rushed out of a door yard, calling for him to stop. The cortege came to a halt, while the whole story was told and the bill presented. It was paid without a murmur, but the request was made of the creditor that she make out a receipt and mail it to Plainfield. It hasn't reached here yet and the impression prevails that she is waiting for a stamp to be sent her.

MARTINE SUPPORTS POLICY OF PRESIDENT

Senator Martine, of New Jersey, assured President Taft yesterday that he was in favor of the passage of the Canadian reciprocity argeement by Congress and that he would vote for it when it came up for consideration in the upper chamber of Congress. Senator Martine told the President that he considered the proposed reciprocity agreement as a step in the direction of easier and more advantageous trade relations with Canada, and this policy accorded with his views. The New Jersey Senator, however, suggested to the President that the reciprocal relations might be properly extended to cover a number of articles of commerce which are not now provided for.

Mr. Martine visited the White House in company of Senator Briggs, the senior member from New Jersey. The greeting between the President and the new Dmocratic Senator was very hearty. They indulged in pleasantries for a few minutes and then Mr. Taft asked how Mr. Martine stood with reference to the reciprocity subject. The latter promptly told him of his purpose to support the bill.

Senators Martine and Briggs, together with all the New Jersey members of the House of Representatives are being deluged with petitions from New Jersey Granges protesting against the passage of the reciprocity bill.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

"Best People on Earth" is the title of a new serio comic play with music that that very popular comedian John E. Henshaw is starring in this season, aided by a company of rare excellence and a scenic equipment that covers every artistic requirement. This attraction comes to the Plainfield theatre Saturday, April 15, matinee and night, and there's every indication of it playing to a crowded house.

F. R. Stevens and family, of Cescent avenue, have taken up their residence at their summer home on Johnston's drive.

PRINCETON TRUSTEES FAIL TO SELECT HEAD

The committee of Princeton trustees appointed to recommend to the full board the name of a president to succeed Woodrow Wilson, met in Princeton, yesterday. One of them, John L. Caldwalader, gave out this statement before the meeting: "There is nothing in the reports in the newspapers nor is there any reasonable expectation that a president of Princeton University will be elected in any very short time. The whole metter is still open."

On the committee, besides Mr. Cadwalader, are Messrs Taylor Pyne and Cleveland H. Dodge, of New York; Cyrus H. McCormick, of Chicago; the Rev. Malarchton W. Jacobus, of Hartford, and the Rev. Dr. John Dixon, of Trenton.

Mr. Dodge said yesterday, that Princeton was no nearer the selection of a president than it was six months ago. The trustees are to meet at Princeton on April 13.

JERSEY CENTRAL R.R. TO BUILD NEW SHOPS

From the office of the president of the Central Railroad in New York, it was announced to a reporter yesterday that the car shops in Front street, Elizabeth, recently burned, would be rebuilt adjacent to the new lomocotive shops near the Elizabethport station.

The new car shops will be made permanent and will be erected this coming summer so that they can be put in use at the beginning of winter. Railroad engineers and architects are now engaged in arranging plans and drawings for the structures, and the physical work on their construction will probably be begun within a few weeks.

Although no definite information has been given by the railroad officials to that effect, it is said, that the new shops will be much larger and more commodious that the former structure in Front street, and that more men will be employed. It is probable that the site in Front street will be abandoned by the railroad for repair and manufacturing purpose.

The selection of the site for the new shops, adjoining the present locomotive shops, is in line with the advanced system of railroading now being adopted by all of the large railroad companies. The joining of the two shops, it is said, will not only curtail expenses, but increase the output of work.

BILL RAISES DENTAL EDUCATIONAL STANDARD.

Needing apparently only the tribute paid to it by Minority Leader McCran in the House Tuesday, Senate bill 161, by Mr. Prince, requiring a higher educational standard for dentists, was passed unanimously.

Mr. McCran declared that there was nothing in the measure except what tended to the benefit of everybody and said that he had reason to realize the importance of it.

The bill requires that all applicants for a license to practise dentistry must furnish a certificate from the State superintendent of instruction showing that before entering a dental college they had obtained a four years' course in an approved high school or its equivalent.

Other bills that were passed without comment were:

House 393, Mr. Newman, authorizes the construction of an inland waterway connecting Barnegat Bay with Manasquan Inlet and appropriates $150,000 for the same.

House 436, Mr. Ford, provides that employers in all factories shall give all employes a half-hour for midday meal.

House 104, Mr. Thompson (with Senate amendments), establishes the office of comptroller for towns.

Mr. Zenser, the new editor, is well known among the Germans of Trenton, and is a son-in-law of William Hildebrecht, of North Warren street, that city.

FIRST AID IN FAINTING.

Lower the Head to Let the Blood Back to the Brain.

Fainting is a loss of consciousness due to the diminution of blood supply to the brain. It occurs most frequently in weak, sensitive women, but may occur also to men as well. It usually occurs in crowds or in crowded halls, theaters and churches, where the atmosphere is close and the air foul.

Fainting usually lasts only a few minutes, and the person recovers immediately when taken out into the fresh air, but there are cases in which it lasts much longer, sometimes for an hour or more. The first aid treatment of fainting is usually very simple. Take the person out into the fresh air and lay him flat on the back, with the head lower than the feet.

This can be done by grasping the feet and holding the body so that the head hangs down, or take an ordinary straight back chair, turn it over so that the back forms an angle with the floor and place the person on the back of the chair with the head hanging down. This position with the head hanging down favors the flow of the blood back to the brain.

All tight clothing about the neck and waist should be loosened. Smelling salts or aromatic spirits of ammonia applied to the nostrils and cold water sprinkled on the face, chest and hands help to restore consciousness.—National Magazine.

THE SILVER DOLLAR.

Many Changes In Its Design Since It Was First Issued.

The silver dollar has undergone a great many changes since it was put in circulation in 1794. On the face of the first dollar there was stamped the head of a young woman turned to the right and with hair flowing, as if she was in a gale of wind. But in 1796 congress came to her relief and ordered her hair to be tied up with a bit of ribbon. The fifteen stars which appeared on the first dollar were after this reduced to the original thirteen in recognition of the number of states.

In 1836 the design was again changed, and the dollar bore the figure of a woman dressed in a flowing garment. The designer forgot, however, to put in the thirteen stars, and the coin was soon called in, the new design having the woman surrounded by stars. Her air was defiant and stiff looking, and in 1838 dollars were issued which were more artistic in treatment. The first dollars bearing the motto, "In God We Trust," were coined in April, 1864, and in 1873 the era of the trade dollar began, lasting just five years.

The Liberty dollar made its appearance in 1878. Miss Anna W. Williams, a public school teacher of Philadelphia, sat for the portrait.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Sure of a Raise.

An enterprising woman who rents several apartments in a new building and sublets them furnished, room by room, has profited at the rate of several hundred dollars a year by woman's propensity for telling everything she knows. To each applicant for a room she named an exorbitant price to start with.

"Now, understand, this is a concession to you alone and must be regarded as strictly confidential. If you tell a soul in the house that I have made a reduction in your favor I shall have to charge the original price."

Within two weeks rents had gone up.

"Mrs. Smith tells me," said the astute landlady to each gossiping tenant, "that you told her you pay only $6 for your room instead of $7." And as no one was in a position to plead not guilty the additional rental was exacted.—New York Times.

The Retort Courteous.

James Russell Lowell was once a guest at a banquet in London where he was expected to reply to a toast. The speaker who preceded Mr. Lowell said many contemptuous things about the people of the United States, avowing and repeating again and again that they were all braggarts. As American minister at the court of St. James Lowell could hardly overlook this speech, so as he rose he said smilingly: "I heartily agree with the gentleman who has just spoken. Americans do brag a great deal, and I don't know where they got the habit, do you?"

Big Mouthfuls.

"Yes," whispered the man who knows everybody, "the big chap over there at the third table is a great gormand. He's a mountain in the financial world, you know."

"H'm!" commented the quiet observer. "Instead of a mountain he looks to me like a great gorge."—Chicago News.

Boiling Alive.

The last instance of boiling to death took place in Persia in 1890. The offender was guilty of stealing state revenues and was put into a large caldron of cold water, which was slowly heated to the boiling point. His bones were distributed as a warning among the provincial tax collectors.

Incorrigible.

"Nobody wants to play bridge with Mrs. Bean. She talks all the time."

"I suppose she's quiet when she's dummy?"

"Quiet! She talks twice as much."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Silence Is Safety.

After forty years of married life I've made up me mind it don't matter how often a man an' his wife disagrees as long as he don't let her know it.—Harper's Bazar.

The Vagabond Actor.

Moliere raised the status of the actor to a hireling clown who must amuse his king. Sir Henry Irving was even knighted by Queen Victoria, who recognized his magnificent services to dramatic art. But in all the years when Sir Henry was breaking his neck to run back and forth between Victoria's royal residences and the cities where he was playing, to set up his scenes and act for the old queen's amusement and the entertainment of her guests, he was never once officially received by her at court. He had many private audiences, which were much the same for him as to have a chat with any other old lady; but, although he was the possessor of a royal title, a favorite with the royal family and the greatest actor of his age, he never was invited or "commanded," as it is called, to Buckingham palace. The status of vagabondia clung to his garments, and he was classed with crooked nobles and other undesirables.—Archie Bell in Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Courage and the Flea.

Courage is resistance to fear, mastery of fear, not absence of fear. Except a creature be part coward, it is not a compliment to say it is brave; it is merely a loose misapplication of the word. Consider the flea—incomparably the bravest of all the creatures of God if ignorance of fear were courage. Whether you are asleep or awake, he will attack you, caring nothing for the fact that in bulk and strength you are to him as are the massed armies of the earth to a sucking child. He lives both day and night and all days and nights in the very lap of peril and the immediate presence of death and yet is no more afraid than is the man who walks the streets of a city that was threatened by an earthquake ten centuries before. When we speak of Clive, Nelson and Putnam as men who "didn't know what fear was" we ought always to add the flea—and put him at the head of the procession.—Mark Twain.

The Original Paul Pry.

Thomas Hill, familiarly called Tommy Hill, was, says Dr. Brewer, the original Paul Pry. It was from him also that Theodore Hook drew his character of Gilbert Gurney. Planche in his "Recollections" says of Hill: "His specialty was the accurate information he could impart on all the petty details of the domestic economy of his friends, the contents of their wardrobes, their pantries, the number of pots of preserves in their store closets and of the table napkins in their linen presses, the dates of their births and marriages, the amounts of their tradesmen's bills and whether paid weekly or quarterly. He had been on the press and was connected with the Morning Chronicle. He used to drive Matthews crazy by ferreting out his whereabouts when he left London and popping the information in some paper."

Names In Electricity.

Electricity is the one branch of science that honors the great names in its fundamental terminology. Andre Marie Ampere was the French physicist who first measured the current and for whom the unit is named. The ohm bears the name of George S. Ohm, a German man of science who discovered the law on which the unit of electrical resistance is based. The volt is named for the Italian Volta, the greatest electrical authority of the eighteenth century, who was the first man to construct a rude electric battery. The farad, the unit of electrical capacity, is named in honor of the English physicist Faraday; the colomb, the unit of quantity, for the French physicist Coulomb, and the watt, the unit of power, for James Watt, the Scotch inventor who improved the steam engine.

Herbert Spencer Was Human.

Herbert Spencer in the attitude of superintending his household affairs was practical and amusing. At one time the poulterer had not been giving satisfaction, so Mr. Spencer called his housekeeper and gave her directions to transfer his custom to another tradesman whose shop faced the delinquent's. "And, Miss Smith," said the author of "Synthetic Philosophy," "be particular that the first poulterer sees you giving your orders to the second poulterer!"

Always Lucky.

McConnell—Sure, isn't Larry always th' lucky b'y? Murphy—Lucky, do ye call him, whin it was only yesterday that he fell, breakin' his leg an' his aarm? McConnell—Faith, an' wasn't he lucky on that occasion, wid th' accident takin' place within twinty fate of th' hospital?—Chicago News.

On the Other Hand.

"On the one hand," said the teacher, pointing a long finger to the map on the classroom wall, "we have the far stretching country of Russia. On the other hand—what do I see on the other hand, Tommy?"

"Warts!" hazarded Tommy, hopeless with fright.

Superstitious.

"What! Did you let the examinations go by again, Carl?"

"I'll tell you, father. On the way to the college I met an old woman, and then I turned back again."—Fliegende Blatter.

The Usual Course.

Haughty Lady (who has purchased a stamp)—Must I put it on myself?

Clerk (very politely)—Not necessarily, ma'am. It will probably be better if you put it on the letter.

He has not learned the lesson of life who does not every day surmount a fear.—Emerson.

Diana of Philadelphia.

At the mint in Philadelphia are a number of coins far more precious than any which find their way into circulation. They are a collection of curios, and many of them date from times of great antiquity. Perhaps the most interesting among them is a handsome coin bearing on its face the profile of a woman which has a striking resemblance to the goddess of Liberty of our own currency. Underneath is the single word "Demos," which is the Greek for people. On the reverse of the coin is a beautiful figure of the goddess Diana arching her bow, and the inscription translated into English reads, "Diana, Friend of the Philadelphians."

The coin was minted more than 2,000 years ago at the city of Philadelphia, in Asia Minor, where there grew up in later years one of the seven churches of which St. John writes. The prize was discovered some years ago in Europe by a citizen of our own Philadelphia, himself an authority on coins. By him it was appropriately presented to the mint in Philadelphia.—New York Press.

Carlyle's Sneer at Gladstone.

J. E. Boehm, the sculptor, once met Gladstone at a country house and was immensely impressed by the extent and diversity of the statesman's knowledge as revealed in his conversation. Boehm was still full of the subject when the morning arrived for Carlyle's sitting for a bust, and to the philosopher the sculptor poured forth his admiration for Gladstone's intimate acquaintance with subjects so far apart as gardening and Greek. Carlyle listened for a time in scornful silence; then he said, "And what did he say about your work?" "Oh, nothing," said Boehm. "He doesn't know anything about sculpture." "Of course," growled Carlyle, "of course, and he showed his knowledge about things that you didn't understand. No doubt if you asked Blackie he'd say that Gladstone knew nothing about Greek, and the gardener would tell you that he knew nothing whatever of gardening."

How Sheridan Paid a Debt.

No one knew better the power possessed by a really polished compliment than Sheridan, and on innumerable occasions during that rather stormy theatrical management of his did he extricate himself from a difficulty by means of one. A good instance is the following: An English nobleman who had married a beautiful actress once applied with much dignity in the greenroom to Mr. Sheridan for the arrears of her salary and vowed that he would not stir till they were paid.

"My dear lord," said the impecunious manager, "this is too bad. You have taken from us the brightest jewel in the world, and you now quarrel with us for the little dust she has left behind her."

The nobleman immediately burst out laughing, and the debt was canceled.—London Standard.

Graveyard Marriages.

A strange custom prevails among a certain tribe in the Caucasus. When a single young man dies some one calls upon a bereaved parent who has carried to the grave a marriageable daughter in the course of a year and says: "Your son is sure to want a wife. I'll give you my daughter, and you shall deliver to me the marriage portion in return." A friendly offer of this description is never rejected, and the two parties soon come to terms as to the amount of the dowry, which varies according to the advantages possessed by the girl in her lifetime. Cases have been known where the young man's father has given as much as thirty cows to secure a dead wife for his dead son.

Lightning Rods.

There were no lightning rods in ancient times. The first one that the world ever saw was set up by our own illustrious countryman Benjamin Franklin shortly after the year 1752. He had just had his celebrated experiment with the kite, in which he demonstrated the identity of lightning with electricity, and was therefore prepared for the construction of the rods for which the world had waited so long. It is not generally known that Franklin was as distinguished in science as he was in statesmanship and diplomacy.—Exchange.

As It Really Was.

On the morning after his first appearance on the stage the confident but untalented youth met a friend who had witnessed his first performance. "What do you think of my acting?" asked the would be Hamlet.

"That wasn't acting," replied the friend. "That was misbehavior."

Men's Clothes.

Since 1825 the clothing of men has grown simpler and simpler, and if the course of evolution has taken away from the picturesqueness of the crowd it has added to the dignity of the man.—Men's Wear.

Unreasonable.

"I say, old man, you've never returned that umbrella I lent you last week."

"Hang it all, old man, be reasonable. It's been raining ever since."—London Punch.

A Faith Cure.

Towne—Do I understand you to say that Spender's case was really a faith cure? Brown—Yes. You see, the doctor and the druggist both trusted him.—Medford Drum.

Have a heart that never hardens, and a temper that never tires, and a touch that never hurts.—Charles Dickens.

CAMELS OF THE ARABS.

Various Ways the Desert Nomads Use the Animals' Milk.

Nearly 90,000 camels are used in the vilayet of Bagdad as beasts of burden, and with donkeys they form the only means of carrying goods to inland points. For a common burden camel $30 is a fair price, though the trotters, or swift messenger camels, are worth more. A young camel can sometimes be had about Bagdad for as little as $3 or $4.

Besides its use for riding and carrying purposes, the Mesopotamian Arabs depend on the camel for milk. Shoes are made from its tough, calloused hide, and in times of famine its brittle, strong tasting flesh is eaten. Condensed milk, made by boiling fresh camel milk until evaporation leaves only a hard, chalky substance, is prized among the desert nomads. By rubbing this substance between the hands it reduces to powder, and when mixed with warm water it makes a refreshing drink, highly esteemed among the desert folk. "Mereesy," as it is called, will keep in good condition for two years. When made from buttermilk it tastes sour and is prized among Arabs who have eaten much of sweet dates. Fresh, warm camel milk is also the food of many valuable horses owned by desert sheiks.

Camel calves are weaned in their eleventh or twelfth month. When a camel caravan is on the march the very young camels are often tied upon the backs of the mother animal, since they cannot endure the fatigue of a long march. Valuable dogs and Arab desert hounds, called "slugeys," also ride in the same way.—Chicago Record-Herald.

VIENNA DEATH NOTICES.

They Read Like an Extract From a Family History.

"Don't die in Vienna. You'll be sorry if you do," writes an American on his first visit to that city, "not because of the usual objections, but on account of the death notices in the papers. They appear flanked by all sorts of ads. and range in size according to the desire for notice on the part of the family of the late lamented. Every possible title is mentioned, and the name of every member of the family goes to make up the notice. A death announcement black bordered and covering half a page of the paper is nothing unusual. Here is a sample:

"'Bruno Weiss, purveyor of lubricating oil to his imperial and royal majesty, and his wife, Amalie—born Horsitzky—in their own and in the names of their children—Hans, Otto, Minna, Laura and Hilde—and their sons-in-law, Military Surgeon Dr. Lois Krobinsky and Architect Oskar Jellinek; their daughters-in-law, Louise, born Lederman, and Marie, born Anspacker, as also in the names of their grandchildren'—here follows a long string of names—'and their mother and mother-in-law, Frau Ernestine Winkler, relict of Commercial Councilor Anton Winkler, announce to their friends the entrance into eternal rest, after a long and severe illness, of their dearly beloved son, Arthur, in the twenty-sixth year of his age.'

He Was Just Thinking.

"Mary," said a man to his spouse, who was gifted with a rapidly moving tongue, "did you ever hear the story of the precious gems?"

"No," she replied. "What is it?"

"It's a fairy legend that my grandmother told me when I was a boy," the husband continued. "It was about a woman from whose lips fell a diamond or a ruby at every word she spoke."

"Well?" said his wife as he pause.

"That's all there is of it, my dear," he replied. "But I was just thinking if such things happened nowadays I could make my fortune as a jeweler."

Love of Trees.

We find our most soothing companionship in trees among which we have lived, some of which we ourselves may have planted. We lean against them, and they never betray our trust, they shield us from the sun and from the rain, their spring welcome is a new birth which never loses its freshness, they lay their beautiful robes at our feet in autumn; in winter they stand and wait, emblems of patience and of truth, for they hide nothing, not even the little leaf buds which hint to us of hope, the last element in their triple symbolism.—Dr. O. W. Holmes.

Until 1870 it was against the law and sacred custom for any subject to look at the emperor of Japan. His political advisers and attendants saw only his back. When he first left the palace the shutters of all the houses had to be drawn, and no one was permitted in the streets. Even today, when the emperor has the privilege of driving through the streets like one of his subjects, it is not considered quite proper to cast a glance at him.

Experience.

"Experience is the best teacher," quoted the wise guy.

"I heard he was in bad odor with her family. Is that true?"

"Draw your own conclusions. It was a centless marriage."—Baltimore American.

Health lies in labor, and there is no earthly royal road to it but through toil.—Wendell Phillips.

A Cartographic Curiosity.

Catherine de Medici once entertained the ambition of acquiring both North and South America as appendages to her crown, and with that object in view she dispatched a couple of her representatives to the scene of operations. The northern section of the enterprise was committed to the charge of the queen's favorite, Troilus de Mesgonez, who was adorned with the title of viceroy of France and sailed from Havre with a large fleet, only to be wrecked in the Atlantic. Another favorite, Strozzi, was commissioned to capture South America, but he was no more fortunate than Mesgonez, for he was killed at the Azores. These happenings, however, took a long time to reach the ears of Queen Catherine, and in the meantime she nursed her dreams and prepared a map on which "the new world of the north" and "the new world of the south" figured as colonies of France. This cartographic curiosity is among the map treasures of the National library in Paris.

Sweetness That Never Palls.

During a sleepless night the Vizier Mujjeduddin Kumija dispatched his slave, Bedruddin Ejas, to bring him sweets. The slave procured a copper kettle heaped with many kinds of fruits and sweets, and Mujjeduddin began to eat.

"You relish them, my master?" asked the slave.

The vizier shrugged his shoulders. "These fruits are sweet—for the moment," he said, "but show me a fruit the sweetness of which will endure even unto the judgment day."

"Such fruits there are, my master," cried the slave and hastened toward the Mesched Husa, where he awoke the starving orphans in the house of Aliwin and led them forth into the room of his master. Overjoyed, the famished children devoured the fruits.

"Look, oh, my master," said the slave. "Here you see fruits the sweetness of which endures unto the judgment day."

Two Little Bills.

Robert was in the habit of expecting reward for every little service. At the end of the week he made out a "bill" to his mother and carefully laid it where her eyes would fall upon it. The items were as follows:

"Mother Owes to Robert.

"Five cents for running errands.

"Five cents for being good."

That evening there appeared beside Robert's plate a paper upon which was written:

"Robert owes mother, for years of happiness, nothing; for nursing him through long illnesses, nothing; for doing good to him, nothing."

Thoroughly ashamed of himself, Robert ran to mother, threw his arms around her and sobbed:

"Mother, I will do everything I can for you after this, and I'll never ask you to give me anything but just love."—Omaha World-Herald.

Easy to Please.

"So," said his girl's papa furiously, "you think you could make my little girl Arethusa happy?"

The young man considered his prospective pa-in-law, who had gout and a face like a fire engine and an eighty horsepower temper.

"She's been happy with you, sir, hasn't she?" the young man asked.

"I think so, my boy—I think so," replied his girl's papa. "I certainly think so. I think so certainly. I'm certain I think so."

"Well," chimed in the young man sweetly, "if she's been happy with you I certainly think I can make her happy. I think so. I think so certainly. I'm certain I think so."

Sleepwalking.

Somnambulism has been a mystery and a matter of discussion to the medical profession since the days of the ancients. They knew as well as we all now know that there is such a thing as somnambulism, or walking in the sleep. They attempted to explain it just as modern medical science has been endeavoring to explain it ever since. But as it was then so it is now. There are so many explanations that even the physician is puzzled to decide which to accept.

A Break.

The elevator was waiting for passengers on the ground floor of the sky scraper when an excited woman fluttered over to the man running it.

"Does this car go up?" she inquired, breathless.

"No, madam," said the elevator man, unperturbed, "this is a crosstown car."—New York Times.

The One Place.

"That Mrs. Gossip seems to be at home wherever she may be."

"Well, I saw her in a place yesterday where she seemed decidedly restless and uneasy."

"You don't say? Where was that?"

"At home."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Awkwardly Expressed.

Pretty Bad.

"Was the play bad?"

"Well, I should say. Why, even the lights went out at the close of the second act."

The Vacant Literary Throne.

There is, we must admit, today no monarch in any tongue upon the literary throne, no sovereign world name in poetry or prose, in whom, as has happened before now, not so many generations ago, in royal succession to Scott, Byron, Goethe, Hugo, Tolstoy, all the civilized world—Teuton, Latin, Celt, Slav, oriental—is interested, for whose new works it looks or where it seeks the gospel of the day. Nabochish, to use an Irish word that became a favorite with Sir Walter Scott, it does not matter. Do not let us nurse the humor of the despondent editor who mournfully told his readers, "No new epic this month."

Nobody can tell how the wonders of language are performed nor how a book comes into the world. Genius is genius. The lamp that today some may think burns low will be replenished. New orbs will bring light. Literature may be trusted to take care of itself, for it is the transcript of the drama of life, with all its actors, moods and strange flashing fortunes. The curiosity that it meets is perpetual and insatiable, and the impulses that inspire it can never be extinguished.—John Morley.

Thrifty Harry Lauder.

There are many stories told of the wonderful thrift of Harry Lauder, the Scotch comedian. Once when Lauder was in New York he was in a wine buying party at the Astor. Everybody but the Scot bought wine. When it came his turn to buy he sighed.

"Well, boys," he said, "it's my turn to treat. Come along with me. I've got a fine bottle of old Scotch up in my room. I brought it over with me."

On another occasion he was with a drinking party and instead of liquor he took cigars, for which those who treated him paid 50 cents apiece. Harry put all but one in his pocket. He spent two hours smoking that one. After the drinking was over the little comedian went to the cigar counter and said to the man in charge, "I say, man, wud ye mind givin' me ten cent cigars for these fafty cent ones?" The exchange was made, and Harry went to his room with five times as many cigars as he had at the start.

Thought It Was Serious.

The burning of the famous Greyfriars church in Edinburgh occurred one Sunday morning, and the young people of a house which backed upon the churchyard were among the first, as they were preparing to start for church, to observe the flames. It was the housemaid's Sunday out, and old Kitty, the cook, was that day responsible for her duties. Hearing unwonted commotion and excited outcries upstairs, she came panting and bobbling up from her basement kitchen, crying anxiously at each stair:

"Oh, what is't? What is't?"

"Oh, Kitty, look here!" cried one of the girls from a window. "Greyfriars church is burning up."

Kitty dropped limply on a settee.

"Is that a', miss?" she grumbled between gasps. "What a fright ye geed me! I thicht ye said the parlor fire was out"—Youth's Companion.

Blending the Odors.

It has been proved that two odors which do not seem to have anything in common, that of putrefied cheese and that of pineapple, are so closely allied from the chemical standpoint that it takes but a few minutes to transform an intense stench into a sweet fragrance. This curious experiment is easily made and requires but a small amount of three chemicals—valerianic acid, sulphuric acid and amylic alcohol. Care must be taken not to spill over the fingers or dress any drop of the first two named liquids. Sulphuric acid is exceedingly caustic and the stench of valerianic acid, besides being unendurable, is very difficult to get rid of.—London Family Herald.

The Caddie's Advice.

A famous woman golfer was talking about the St. Andrews links.

"And as wonderful as the links," she said, "are the caddies. The Scotch caddie is the quaintest of mortals. For instance: "I had skied a lot of balls one morning, much to my caddie's disgust. Finally he teed a ball for me and then, handing me my driver, remarked:

"'Noo, leddy, let's see a guid shot, and nae mair o' yer glory hallelujahs.'"

The Outdoor Nation.

No nation loves nature so much as the German. The Italian travels to get somewhere, the German to travel. The country walk for its own sake is a German discovery. The Englishman's ideal is a park, the German's a wood, and the Frenchman loves his boulevard.—Hamburger Zeitung.

She Admitted It.

A Mrs. Malaprop said to Clara Novello, the noted English prima donna, "You will admit that there is a great deal of evil life in the theater."

"True, indeed," replied Clara, "but on which side of the curtain?"

An Economist.

"You should ride a horse."

"Can't afford it," said the apprehensive person.

"But it will give you an appetite."

"Perhaps. But it will do the same for the horse."—Washington Star.

A Big Gun.

"Professor Smart is a man of large mental caliber, is he not?"

"He certainly is a big bore."—University of Minnesota Minnehaha.

CHILDREN OF UAP.

They Don't Have to Worry About Food, Clothes or Shelter.

In describing Uap, one of the Caroline islands, Dr. W. H. Furness says that children become more or less public property on that island as soon as they are able to run about from house to house.

They cannot without extraordinary exertion fall off the island, and, like little guinea pigs, can find food anywhere. Their clothing grows by every roadside, and any shelter or no shelter is good enough for the night. They cannot starve. There are no wild beasts or snakes to harm them. What matters it if they sleep under the high, star powdered ceiling of their foster mother's nursery or curl up on mats beneath their father's thatch?

There is no implication here that parents are not fond of their children. On the contrary, they love them so much that they see their own children in all children. It is the ease of life and its surroundings which have atrophied the emotion of parental love.

When a father has merely to say to his wife and children, "Go out and shake your breakfast off the trees," or, "Go to the thicket and gather your clothes," to him the struggle for existence is meaningless, and without a struggle the prizes of life are held in light esteem.

Somebody's children are always about the houses and to the fore in all excitements, and never did I see them roughly handled or harshly treated.

MASTERING A TEMPER.

The Method by Which Marion Crawford Controlled His Anger.

Mrs. Hugh Fraser, sister of the late F. Marion Crawford, tells some interesting stories of him in her book, "A Diplomatist's Wife In Many Lands." It was at the Villa Negroni, Rome, that Crawford was born, an event which so delighted his father that, as Mrs. Fraser says, "my father was beside himself with joy and showered presents on all of us to make us understand and share it."

When young Francis was about ten years old it dawned upon him that he had a violent and uncontrollable temper, and with the simplicity which marked all his character he decided to get it in hand.

"One member of the family constantly irritated him to the verge of frenzy, and he invented a form of self discipline which very few children would have thought of imposing on themselves. My mother entered his room one day and found him walking round and round it, carrying on his back a heavy wooden shutter which he had lifted off its hinges at the window.

"'My dear child,' she exclaimed, 'what are you doing?'

"'Getting over a rage,' he replied doggedly, continuing the exercise. 'When I am so angry that I want to kill somebody I come in here and carry the shutter three times round the room before I answer them. It is the only way.'"

Women and Tea In Japan.

No Japanese society woman has completed her education unless she can tell just what grade of tea is being served to her—Uji, Mikado or a hundred others—and at least be able to distinguish by taste at least a dozen "blends" in a brand that has that many or more. Such accomplishments are partly a matter of inheritance and environment, for Japan is a country where tea has been raised and used for centuries. With tea plantations five centuries old and tea plants 200 years of age there is no need for tea commissions to fix customs standards. As for the household standards, the Japanese housewife decides them herself.

The Cock Lane Ghost.

St. John's, Clerkenwell, is a mean structure architecturally, but possesses two interesting historical associations, one romantic and the other ludicrous. It is the headquarters of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, part of the choir of whose ancient priory can still be seen in the early English crypt. This crypt was the haunt of the "Cock lane ghost," which excited all London in February, 1762, and attracted Johnson, Goldsmith and Horace Walpole. The "ghost" proved, as Dr. Johnson surmised, to be the mischievous little daughter of a parish clerk.—Westminster Gazette.

A Regular Attendant.

As the new minister of the village was on his way to evening service he met a rising young man of the place whom he was anxious to have become a member of his church.

"Good evening, my young friend," he said solemnly. "Do you ever attend a place of worship?"

"Yes, indeed, sir, regularly every Sunday night," replied the young fellow with a smile. "I'm on my way to see her now."—Metropolitan Magazine.

His Complete Triumph.

"Uncle Rastus, I thought they had sent you to jail again on the usual charge."

"No, suh; I's vindicated dis time. De jedge couldn't quite make up his mind, an' he turned me loose an' said I mustn't do it again."—Chicago Tribune.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

CHAPTER I.

SECTION 1.

Purpose of Code.

The Building Code.—The following provisions shall constitute the Building Code of the City of Plainfield, and shall affect and relate to the construction, alteration, demolition or removal of buildings or structures erected or to be erected in said City.

CHAPTER II.

Powers, Duties, Penalties, etc.

SECTION 2.

(1) Powers and Duties of the Inspector of Buildings.—The Inspector of Buildings shall have power, and it shall be his duty, subject to the provisions of this Code, to issue notices of violation, certificates, permits and notices of unsafe conditions and notices of unsafe materials, ways, works and means in and about the same as may be necessary to remove the danger, and may, when public safety requires, temporarily close the public highways adjacent thereto and require the assistance of the police or other Departments of the City of Plainfield.

(17) Falling Buildings, Aid to the Injured; Search for the Dead and Missing.—Should a building fall, or in the opinion of the Inspector of Buildings, persons be entrapped, he shall, with the aid and assistance of the Fire and Police Departments, or any other Department of the City called upon by him, immediately examine the building, take such steps as may be necessary to assist and aid the injured, and search for the dead and missing. He shall immediately take all necessary steps to prevent any further injury to life, limb or property, until further action, pursuant to the provisions of this Code. For such purpose he may temporarily hire the persons and temporarily hire or purchase the necessary materials, ways, works and means, called for by this Section.

CHAPTER III.

Applications, Plans and Drawings; Ordinary Repairs Without Notice; Demolishing Buildings.

SECTION 3.

Applications, Plans and Drawings.

(1) Approval Thereof.—No building or structure shall be erected, altered or removed except in conformity with the provisions of this Code, and after written approval of the Inspector of Buildings of the applications, plans and detail drawings, or the issuance of a written permit, and the work of erection, alteration or removal shall strictly conform to such applications, plans and detail drawings, or to such permit, provided that if in the judgment of the Inspector of Buildings the erection of any proposed building or other structure or the proposed alteration of any existing building or other structure would be prejudicial to the interests of the City, he shall in such case, report thereon to the Common Council, and take such action thereon as the Common Council shall direct, and in the meantime shall suspend his ruling upon the application for such permit.

(2) Applications; filing.—Before the erection or alterations of any building is begun, there shall be submitted to the Inspector of Buildings a verified application in duplicate on appropriate blanks to be furnished by said Inspector of Buildings, containing a detailed statement of the specifications and a full and complete copy of the plans of such proposed work, its intended cost, and such detailed structural drawings thereof as the Inspector of Buildings may require. The application shall state the full name, residence and business address (by street and number, whenever possible) of the owner of the building and of the owner of the real estate upon which the building is to be erected, altered, removed, or demolished, describing the location thereof, and setting forth his authority to erect, alter or remove the same. In case adequate plans and statements are presented, the Inspector of Buildings may, at his discretion, issue an approval and permit for the construction before any part of the building before the approval of applications and plans of the complete structure.

(3) Amendments Thereto.—Applications to amend original applications, plans and detail drawings may be made in the same manner as required for original applications, and the Inspector of Buildings shall approve them, provided the application, plans and detail drawings, when so amended shall be in conformity with the provisions of this Code, and requirements of the Inspector of Buildings; and provided further, that if in the judgment of the Inspector of Buildings the allowing of the proposed amendments would be prejudicial to the interests of the City, he shall report thereon to the Common Council, and take such action thereon as the Common Council shall direct, and, in the meantime, shall suspend his action upon the application for such amendments.

(4) Revocation of Approval.—The Inspector of Buildings shall have power to revoke said approval in case of any intentional departure from the approved application, plans and detail drawings, or in case there shall be found in any application or any paper referred to therein any false statement or representation as to a material fact relating to the erection, alteration or removal of the building.

Ordinary Repairs Without Notice.

Ordinary repairs only may be made to a building without notice to the Inspector of Buildings, but such repairs shall not be construed to include the cutting away of any constructional support, whether wall, pier, column, girder or beams, or the removal, change or closing of any staircase or exit, or the erection, construction or placing of any furnace, heater, or heating system in any building.

SECTION 5.

Demolishing Buildings.

(1) Application.—Before the demolition or removal of any building is begun a verified application, on appropriate blanks to be furnished by the Inspector of Buildings, containing a statement of the facts in relation thereto, and as to the ownership and location thereof, shall be filed with the Inspector of Buildings, and a written permit obtained from him. Such permit shall expire by limitation two months from the date of its issue. The Inspector of Buildings shall be given not less than twenty-four hours notice before the demolition of any building is begun.

(2) Demolishing the Building.—In demolishing any building, story after story shall be completely removed. No material shall be left upon a floor of any building in the course of demolition, but the bricks, timbers and other parts of each story shall be lowered to the ground immediately upon displacement. The material to be removed shall be properly wet to lay the dust incident to its removal.

(3) Removal to Other Site.—Permits for removal shall specify the time within which the removal shall be made. The removal of any wooden building or structure from without to within the fire limits is absolutely prohibited. No building that is not fireproof shall be removed from any point in the city limits to any point within or without the city without the permission of the Common Council first obtained, and no building shall be removed through the public streets of the city without the permission of the Common Council first obtained. Every application for permission to remove any building shall specifically state the place from and the place to which it is proposed to remove said building, and the street or streets, if any, through which it is proposed to carry the same.

(4) No frame building within the fire limits shall be removed except to lot without the fire limits.

CHAPTER IV.

Classification of Buildings and Construction.

SECTION 6.

Classification of Buildings.

(1) For the purposes of this ordinance all buildings within the city limits coming under its provisions shall be divided into three general classes, to be known as Public Buildings, Residence Buildings and Business Buildings. These general classes shall in turn be sub-divided into six classes, as designated in this section. Unless special exception is made, every provision of this ordinance applying to the erection of any building of a class shall apply to all buildings of that class, either when the general class or class designated alphabetically is referred to. In case any building is not specifically provided for or there is any doubt as to its classification, the Inspector of Buildings shall decide the class to which it belongs, the classification to be made according to the character of the building and the purposes for which it is intended. Whenever the purpose or use of a building is such that in part it would come under one class and in part under another class, it shall be constructed in its various parts so as to comply with all the provisions relating to each respective class. In case there is a conflict of provisions the provision securing the greater safety shall apply.

Public Buildings.

(2) Public Buildings shall be construed to mean and include all structures to which the general public has access, or in which there may be congregation of people for civic, political, educational, religious or amusement purposes, and shall include the following:

Class A.—Municipal Buildings, Court Houses, Armories, Police Stations, Jails, Fire Houses, Schools, Colleges, Libraries, Museums, Theatres, Hospitals, Asylums. All buildings of this class hereafter erected shall be of fireproof construction.

Class B.—Churches, Amusement Halls, Public Halls, Lodge Rooms, Exhibition Buildings. All buildings of this class hereafter erected over thirty-six feet six inches in height shall be of fireproof construction. When under thirty-six feet six inches in height the first floor shall be of fireproof construction.

Residence Buildings.

(3) Shall be construed to mean and include all structures in which sleeping accommodations are provided and shall include the following:

Class C.—Hotels, Lodging Houses, Dormitories. All buildings of this class hereafter erected over thirty-six feet inches in height shall be of fireproof construction. When under thirty-six feet six inches in height the first floor shall be of fireproof construction.

When over three stories in height, if the floor beams are of wood, all plaster on ceilings and stud partitions below the first and second tiers of said beams shall be on metal lath or approved plaster board ⅜ inch thick, strongly secured.

(4) All other residences within the City limits to be constructed as required by the general conditions of this Code.

Business Buildings.

(5) Shall be construed to mean and include all structures used for, or adapted to, the transaction of business, the operation of machinery, the manufacture or storage of machinery or materials, the housing of horses or live stock, or for any other industrial purpose, and shall include the following:

Class E.—Office Buildings, Post Offices, Warehouses, Restaurants, Stables, Factories, Work Shops and Printing Houses. All buildings of this class hereafter erected over fifty-nine feet in height shall be of fireproof construction.

Class F.—Light and Power Plants, Car Barns, Garages, Laboratories, Foundries. All buildings of this class hereafter erected shall be of fireproof construction.

SECTION 7.

Classification of Construction.

For the purposes of this Code the various types of construction shall be classified and defined as Frame, Mill, Non-Fireproof, Reinforced Concrete and Fireproof Construction, viz:

(A) Frame Building.—For requirements as to Frame Buildings, see Chapters 26, 27 and 28.

(B) Non-Fireproof Construction—The term Non-Fireproof Construction shall apply to all buildings or structures of which the exterior walls shall be of stone brick, concrete or other approved masonry of the thickness provided in this Code for varying conditions in height and area and in which the floors and roof, interior supports and other interior construction, may be wholly or in part of wood or other combustible materials, or of iron or steel that is not protected in the manner approved by this Code for fireproof construction.

(C) Mill Construction.—The term "Mill Construction," shall apply to buildings without hollow or concealed spaces, having brick walls not less than twelve inches in thickness for the top story, gradually increasing in thickness according to section 46 of this Code. Roofs shall be of three-inch splined planking spiked directly to roof timbers not less than six inches in the least dimensions, covered with metal or other approved standard incombustible roof covering. Floors shall be solid without ceilings, constructed of not less than three-inch splined planking covered with one inch top flooring laid crosswise or diagonally, properly nailed. Between the top flooring and the planking shall be placed not less than two thicknesses of waterproof material carefully laid to break joints and flashed at least three inches around all walls, posts, columns and openings, with mouldings or mopboards. Size and spacing of floor timbers shall be suitable for the load to be carried, but the timbers shall in no case be less than eight inches in the least dimension, and shall rest on top of girders or on iron or steel plates in the wall. Girders shall rest on iron or steel plates in the walls and on iron or steel caps on columns, so arranged as to be self-releasing. All columns and posts shall rest on pintles, and the size and spacing thereof shall be suitable for the load to be carried, but no column or post for the top story shall be less than six inches in the least dimension or eight inches for all other stories. Columns, girders and beams, if of wood, shall be of solid material, and if of iron or steel shall be protected as called for in regular fireproof construction. All elevators, stairs, belts, pipes, shaftings and vents piercing floors shall be enclosed in towers having brick walls not less than eight inches in thickness, or reinforced concrete walls not less than six inches in thickness, and all openings therein shall be protected by standard automatic self-closing fire doors.

(D) Reinforced Concrete Construction—For description of reinforced concrete construction see sections 22 and 104.

(E) Fireproof Construction.—For description of fireproof construction see chapters 23 and 24 of this Code.

CHAPTER V.

Limits of Area—Light and Ventilation.

SECTION 8.

(1) No building hereafter erected shall occupy a larger area of the building lot than the following: No buildings in Class A, B, C, D and E shall occupy more than ninety per centum of the lot area above the second tier of beams, where built on corner lots.

(2) No buildings in said classes shall occupy more than ninety-five per centum of the lot area above the second tier of beams where built on corner lots where the area of the lot does not exceed two thousand five hundred square feet.

(3) For buildings on corner lots of area exceeding two thousand five hundred square feet, the area in excess of two thousand five hundred square feet shall be governed by Clause One covering interior lots.

(4) All buildings occupying corner lots, fronting on three or more streets, where the maximum width does not exceed seventy-five feet, may occupy the entire lot area.

(5) For buildings covering an entire block not more than seventy-five feet wide no court shall be required.

(3) The open floor area between fire walls at least twelve inches in thickness of all fireproof buildings occupied as stores, when provided with a standard equipment of automatic sprinklers, shall not exceed above or below first story the general limits of area as herein provided for fireproof buildings. The area of the first story may, however, be increased, but shall not exceed fifty thousand square feet between fire walls. All interior openings in fire walls of such buildings shall not exceed eighty square feet in area and shall not be placed nearer than forty feet on centres.

SECTION 10.

CHAPTER VI.

Fire Limits.

(1) Fire Limits.—No frame building or construction except as provided in Sections 112 and 113 of this Code, shall be built hereafter, in the City of Plainfield within the following limits hereinafter referred to as the fire limits of said city.

CHAPTER VII.

Explosives—Combustibles—Storage of, Etc.

Within the City Limits.

SECTION 11.

(1) Chemicals, Explosives, Etc.—For the purpose of ascertaining all neglect and violations of ordinances designed for the more effectual prevention of fires, it shall be lawful for the Inspector of Buildings or his deputy to enter into or upon any lands or buildings for the examination of receptacles for ashes, ovens, boilers, heaters and chemical apparatus, which may be dangerous as tending to cause or promote fires; and it shall be his duty to direct any owner or occupant of any defective apparatus or building, by notice signed by said Inspector, to alter the same in such manner and within such reasonable time as he may deem necessary. He shall also examine, at reasonable hours in the daytime, and it shall be lawful for him for such purpose, to enter into and upon, all buildings and places where any oils, chemicals, gunpowder, saltpetre, hemp, flax, tow, hay, rushes, firewood, boards, shingles, shavings, or other combustible materials may be lodged; and whenever he shall discover any neglect or violation of any such ordinances, or anything that is detrimental to public safety he shall notify in writing the owner or occupants of the building wherein such unlawful or unsafe conditions exist to immediately cause the same to be corrected, and it shall be the duty of the person so notified to comply with such notice. And in case of the delay or refusal of the owner or occupant of such building, or the possessor of such combustible materials to correct said unlawful or unsafe conditions and to alter, remove or secure the same within the time and in the manner directed in said notice, the person offending shall be served with a notice of violation and be liable for the penalties therefore as per Section Two of this Code.

(2) Storage of Rags and Waste Paper—It shall be unlawful to store rags or waste paper in any building inside of the fire limits, except that such a building is used exclusively for the storage of rags or waste paper, and before any such rags or waste paper can be stored in any building a permit in writing for such storage shall be obtained from the Inspector of Buildings. The violation of this section shall cause the building to be vacated, and subject the owner, tenant or lessee, or both, to a fine of one hundred dollars, or imprisonment for thirty days, or both.

(3) Lumber, Boxes, Etc.—When lumber, boxes, second-hand building material or other combustible material are located or piled in such a manner as in the opinion of the Inspector of Buildings is dangerous to life, limb or property, then the Inspector of Buildings has authority to regulate and remove the same.

CHAPTER VIII.

Floor Loads—Weights of Materials.

SECTION 12.

Floor Loads.

(1) The dead loads in all buildings shall consist of the actual weight of walls, framing, floors, roofs and all permanent construction except partitions not over four inches in thickness, exclusive of plaster.

(2) The live loads shall include all forms of loading, other than the weight of the material entering into the construction of the building.

(3) Every floor shall be of sufficient strength to bear safely the weight to be imposed thereon in addition to the weight of the materials of which the floor is composed. Each floor of every building of the following classes shall be of sufficient strength in all its parts to bear safely upon each and every superficial foot of its surface a minimum of not less than the live loads specified in the following table:

Class of Building.	Ground and Lower Floors, Pounds Per Square Foot.	Upper Floors, Pounds Per Square Foot.
A	100	100
B	100	100
C	90	50
D	75	50
Office Buildings	100	75
Lofts, Stores, Markets, Stables, Factories, Workshops, Libraries, Museums	125	125
Warehouses, Printing Houses	200	200
Restaurants	100	60
Foundries	200	200
Garages	125	125

(4) The roofs of all buildings having a pitch of less than twenty degrees shall be proportioned to bear safely forty pounds upon every superficial foot of their surface in addition to the weight of materials composing same. If the pitch be more than twenty degrees the live load shall be assumed at thirty pounds upon every superficial foot measured on a horizontal plane.

(5) For sidewalks in vaults between the curb and area lines live loads shall be taken at three hundred pounds upon every square foot.

(6) Every column, post or other vertical support shall be of sufficient strength to bear safely the weight of the portion of each and every floor depending upon it for support in addition to the weight required as before stated to be supported safely upon said portion of said floors.

(7) No safe shall be placed in any building on a stair-landing or in a stair-hall, nor shall its weight be carried by any beam which also carries the floor of any landing or stair-hall.

SECTION 13.

Loads on Floors to be Distributed.

The weight placed on any of the floors of any building shall be safely distributed thereon. The Inspector of Buildings may require the owner or occupants of any building, or of any portion thereof, to redistribute the load on any floor, or to lighten such load where he deems it to be necessary, and on failure to comply with such request the Inspector shall cause the floor or building to be vacated as unsafe.

SECTION 14.

Strength of Existing Floors to be Calculated.

In all buildings of Classes A, E and F, now existing or hereafter to be erected, the weight that each floor will safely sustain upon each superficial foot thereof, or upon each varying part of such floor, shall be estimated by the owner or occupant, or by a competent person employed by the owner or occupant. Such estimate shall be reduced to writing on printed forms furnished by the Inspector of Buildings, stating the material, size, distance apart, and span of beams and girders, posts or columns to support floors and correctness shall be sworn to by the person making the same, and it shall thereupon be filed in the office of the Inspector of Buildings. But if the Inspector of Buildings shall have cause to doubt the correctness of said estimate, he is empowered to revise and correct the same, and for the purpose of such revision the Inspector of Buildings may enter any building and remove so much of the floor or other portion thereof as may be required to make necessary measurements and examinations. When the correct estimate of the weight that the floors in any such building will safely sustain has been ascertained as herein provided, the Inspector of Buildings shall approve the same and thereupon the owner or occupant of said building, or of any portion thereof, shall post a copy of such approved estimate in a conspicuous place on each story, or varying parts of each story, of the building to which it relates. Before any building hereafter erected is occupied and used, in whole or in part, for any of the purposes aforesaid, and before any building erected prior to the passage of this Code, but not at such time occupied for any of the aforesaid purposes, is occupied or used, in whole or in part, for any of said purposes, the weight that each floor will safely sustain upon each superficial foot thereof shall be ascertained and posted in a conspicuous place on each story, or varying parts of each story, of the building to which it relates. No person shall place, or cause or permit to be placed on any floor of any building any greater load than the safe load thereof, as correctly estimated and ascertained as herein provided. Any expense necessarily incurred in removing any floor or other portion of any building for the purpose of making any examination herein provided for shall be paid by the person or persons on whose behalf said estimate was made.

SECTION 15.

Weights of Certain Materials.

In computing the weights of materials:—

(1) A cubic foot of common brickwork shall be deemed to weight one hundred and twenty pounds; pressed brick, one hundred and thirty-five pounds.

(2) Sandstone, white marble, granite, and other kinds of building stone shall be deemed to weight one hundred and seventy pounds per cubic foot.

(3) A cubic foot of stone concrete shall be deemed to weigh one hundred and forty-four pounds.

(4) A cubic foot of cinder concrete mixed in the proportions specified in Section 22, when rammed, shall be deemed to weight ninety-six pounds; when not rammed, eighty-four pounds. A cubic foot of cinder concrete fill, when not rammed, shall be deemed to weigh sixty pounds.

CHAPTER IX.

Quality of Materials.

SECTION 16.

Brick.

(1) The brick used in all buildings shall be good, hard, well burnt brick, and thoroughly dampened before being used, except in freezing weather, when they shall be laid dry. Not more than five per centum shall be bats or broken brick.

(2) When old brick are used in the construction of any wall they shall be thoroughly cleaned and dampened before being used, and they shall be whole and good, hard, well burnt brick of uniform size.

SECTION 17.

Hollow Building Blocks.

(1) Moulded or cast hollow building blocks, of concrete, cement, terra cotta, or other hard, incombustible material may be used for walls of any building not more than thirty-six feet in height, provided the materials are not stressed beyond the safe limits fixed in this section.

(2) No such blocks shall be used until complete and satisfactory tests have been made by the manufacturer under the direction of the Inspector of Buildings, in accordance with the requirements of Section 25, of this Code, and until an approval for the use of such blocks has been obtained.

(3) No blocks shall be approved that do not at the age of twenty-eight days or less develop a compressive strength of at least one thousand five hundred pounds per square inch of net section.

(4) In no cases shall the hollow spaces of a block exceed thirty-three and one-third per centum of the cross section of the block.

(5) The thickness of the walls or webs of such blocks shall be not less than one-fourth of the height of the blocks, but in no case less than one inch thick.

(6) All such walls shall be laid in Portland cement mortar.

(7) Buildings of hollow terra cotta blocks, or hollow cement blocks, laid in cement mortar, shall be classed as frame construction when floors and roofs are of wood. The blocks shall not be less than six inches thick for a one-story building; eight inches for the first story and six inches for the second story in a two-story building; eight inches for the first and second stories and six inches for the third story in a three story building. If the walls are exposed to the weather the blocks shall be of dense material, vitrified in burning, or they may be of semi-porous material covered on the exposed side with at least one inch of cement plaster. Semi-porous terra cotta blocks shall be well scored, grooved or roughened to retain this coating.

(8) Whenever girders or joists rest upon walls so that there is a concentrated load of over two tons, the blocks supporting the girders or joists shall be made solid by filling at least two contiguous blocks with cement concrete, mixed in proportion of one part cement, two parts sand and four parts broken stone or gravel. Wherever walls are decreased in thickness, the top course of the thicker wall shall be made solid in the same manner.

(9) No semi-porous hollow blocks shall be loaded in excess of one hundred pounds per square inch of net end section in compression or one hundred pounds per square inch if laid on the side, and if dense tiles are used they shall not be loaded in excess of two hundred pounds per square inch if set on end, or one hundred and fifty pounds per square inch if on the side. All piers and buttresses that support loads in excess of five tons shall be filled solid with cement concrete. Lintels spanning openings of six inches in the clear shall rest on blocks filled solid with concrete, or an equivalent in iron support.

(10) When used for curtain walls between supporting piers not over twenty feet apart on centres not more than twelve feet in height between girders, hard burned clay standard blocks not less than eight inches in thickness, set in cement may be used, re-inforcing by concrete filling to the extent necessary and directed by the Inspector.

(11) For foundations not over ten feet in height, of frame buildings and of buildings as per clause seven of this section, hard burned clay blocks, set and if necessary, re-inforced as above, not less than twelve inches thick may be used.

For small houses or light constructions blocks eight inches thick may be used in lengths not exceeding twenty lineal feet between masonry cross walls or buttress piers of dimensions approved by the Inspector.

SECTION 18.

Sand.

All sand shall be sharp, clean, coarse, siliceous sand, free from clay, loam or other foreign material. It shall all pass a one-quarter inch screen and be uniformly graded down in fineness. Not more than six per centum shall pass a sieve having one hundred meshes per linear inch. The percentage of voids shall not exceed thirty-eight.

SECTION 19.

Lime Mortar.

Lime mortar shall be made of one part of unslaked lime and not more than four parts of sand. All lime used for mortar shall be thoroughly burnt, of good quality and properly slaked before it is mixed with the sand. If hydrated lime is used it shall be used in such proportions as will give the same per centum of lime to sand as specified above.

SECTION 20.

Cement and Cement Mortar.

(1) Portland Cement.—The term Portland cement shall be applied to the finely pulverized product resulting from the calcination by heating or calcining up to incipient fusion of intimate mixtures properly proportioned, either natural or artificial, of argillaceous with calcareous substances, and to which no addition greater than three per centum has been made subsequent to calcination.

(2) Natural Cement.—This term shall be applied to the finely pulverized product resulting from the calcination of an argillaceous limestone at a temperature only sufficient to drive off the carbonic acid gas.

(3) Tests of cement used in building operations shall be made as required by and under the supervision of the Inspector of Buildings, in accordance with standards prescribed by the Testing Committee of the American Society of Civil Engineers. All Portland or natural cements meeting these requirements shall be approved by the Inspector of Buildings. No brand of cement, which has not been tested under the provisions of this section, or which has not met the requirements thereof, shall be used in building operations.

(4) Cement Mortar.—Cement mortar shall be made of Portland or natural cement and sand in the proportion of one part of cement and not more than three parts of sand by volume and shall be used immediately after mixing. The cement and sand are to be measured and thoroughly mixed before adding water.

SECTION 21.

Cement and Lime Mortar.

Cement and lime mortar shall be made of one part of unslaked lime, one part of cement, and not more than three parts of sand by volume. All materials shall be measured and shall be used immediately after being made, the cement and sand to be measured and thoroughly mixed before adding water.

SECTION 22.

Concrete.

(1) All concrete for footings of buildings in classes A, B, E and F shall be made of at least one part Portland cement and not more than three parts sand and five parts broken stone or gravel. Footings in buildings of classes C and D may be of one part natural cement, three parts sand and not more than five parts of broken slag, brick or tile of specified sizes.

(2) All other concrete shall be made of at least one part Portland cement and not more than two parts sand and five parts broken stone or gravel. Except as per section 101.

(3) The cement and sand shall be of a quality already described.

(4) The crushed stone shall be granite, trap rock or other hard stone approved by the Inspector of Buildings and shall consist of the run of the crusher graded from the larger size down to that retained on the one-quarter inch screen. Where gravel is used it shall be thoroughly clean, free from loam and dust, and evenly graded from the larger permissible size down to that retained on the one-quarter inch screen.

(5) For foundations, where the concrete is to be used in mass, the stone or gravel shall be of such size as will pass a two inch ring.

(6) For reinforced concrete construction, the stone or gravel shall all pass through a three-quarter inch ring.

(7) The water shall be clean and free from acid or strong alkalies.

(8) All materials shall be measured; three and seven-tenths cubic feet shall be considered as the contents of a barrel and four bags of cement of ninety-five pounds each shall be considered one barrel.

(9) The ingredients of concrete shall be so thoroughly mixed that the cement shall be uniformly distributed through the mass and that the resulting concrete shall be homogeneous.

(10) The concrete shall be mixed as wet as possible without causing a separation of the cement mortar from the mixture, and shall be deposited in the work in such a manner as not to cause a separation of the mortar from the stone or gravel.

(11) The concrete shall be placed in the forms as soon as practical after mixing, and in no case shall concrete be used that has partially set or if more than one-half hour has elapsed since the addition of the water.

(12) It shall be deposited in horizontal layers not to exceed eight inches in thickness and thoroughly tamped.

(13) All forms and centering shall be built plumb and to true lines in a substantial manner and with joints sufficiently tight to prevent the leakage of the cement mortar. They shall be properly supported and braced in such a manner as to safely stand both the dead load and the load that may be placed upon them during construction. Before placing the concrete the forms shall be thoroughly cleaned of all chips, shavings and other debris.

(14) Before the placing of concrete is suspended, the joint to be formed shall be made in such a manner as will not injure the strength of the completed structure.

(15) The time at which centering may be safely removed from under floors or roofs shall vary with the condition of the weather, but in no case shall they be removed until the hardening of the concrete has reached a point where they may be removed with safety.

(16) During extreme hot, dry weather special precautions shall be taken to prevent premature drying by keeping the concrete moist until it has attained its initial set, or at least during the first twenty-four hours.

SECTION 23.

(1) All timber shall be cut from sound stock and sawed standard size, close grained, free from rot, ring shakes, decay and unsound knots, or other defects that will impair its strength and durability, and shall be of such size and carrying capacity as to support the loads for which the building is intended.

(2) Standard Size of Sawed Timbers.—Rough timbers when sawed to standard size shall mean that they shall not be over one-quarter inch scant from actual size specified. For instance, a twelve-inch by twelve-inch shall measure not less than eleven and three-quarters inches by eleven and three-quarters inches.

(3) Definitive description of structural defects in timber stock or timber and definition of defects may be consulted, if desired, in the office of Inspector of Buildings.

SECTION 24.

Structural Material.

(1) Rivet Steel.—Shall have an ultimate strength of from fifty thousand to sixty thousand pounds per square inch, an elastic limit of not less than fifty per centum of the ultimate strength, an elongation of not less than twenty-eight per centum in eight inches, and a reduction of area of not less than fifty per centum. A rivet rod must be capable of being bent and cold-hammered down on itself without any fracture.

(2) All other structural steel shall show an ultimate strength of from sixty thousand to seventy thousand pounds per square inch, an elastic limit of not less than fifty per centum of the ultimate strength. It shall have an elongation of not less than twenty-five per centum in eight inches, and fifty per centum reduction of area.

(3) No cast iron beams or channels shall be used in any structure.

(4) No second-hand steel shapes shall be used in any structure without the written permission of the Bureau of Buildings, and not then, if they have unnecessary holes in them or holes that have been plugged.

(5) Steel castings shall be made from open hearth steel, and shall be practically free from blow-holes, with a reasonably clear skin and sharpness to pattern. The steel shall contain over eight one-hundredths of one per-centum of phosphorus. Steel castings shall be tested for strength and ductility from runners cast with pieces and annealed with the castings, if the work is ordered annealed. Such runners shall be turned down to not less than one-half square inch cross-section for a length of about six inches, and exhibit in the testing machine an ultimate strength of sixty thousand to seventy thousand pounds per square inch, an elastic limit of not less than fifty per centum of the ultimate and an elongation of twenty per centum in two inches. It shall bend cold at right angles on a round corner to a radius of the diameter of the test piece.

(6) Cast Iron.—Shall be of good foundry mixture, producing a clean, tough, gray iron. Sample bars five feet long, one inch square, cast in sand molds, placed on supports four feet six inches apart, shall bear a central load of four hundred and fifty pounds before breaking. Castings shall be free of serious blow-holes, cinder spots and cold shuts. Ultimate tensile strength shall be not less than sixteen thousand pounds per square inch when tested in small specimens.

CHAPTER X.

Tests.

SECTION 25.

Tests of Materials.

(1) The regulations contained in this section shall apply to all such materials especially new materials as are used in building construction, in the same manner and for the same purposes as natural stones, brick and concrete are authorized by this Building Code, whenever said materials depart from the general shape, dimensions and compositions of ordinary building brick.

(2) Before any such material is used in buildings, an application for its use and for test of the same shall be filed with the Inspector of Buildings. A description of the material and a brief outline of its manufacture shall be embodied in the application.

(3) The material shall be subjected to the following tests: Transverse, Compression, Freezing and Fire, and to also determine weight per cubic foot of material, and percentage of absorption. All test samples shall represent the ordinary commercial product, certified to be not older than sixty days after manufacture when test is made.

(4) Additional tests may be called for when, in the judgment of the Inspector, the same may be necessary. All such tests shall be made at some laboratory of recognized standing, under the supervision of the Inspector of Buildings or his representative. The tests shall be made at the expense of the applicant, and the results be placed on file in the Bureau of Buildings.

(5) When Tests May Be Dispensed With.—Such tests may be dispensed with only by filing a certified copy of previous test and approved, with proof if required, of identical material and quality, such dispensation to be approved in writing by the Inspector.

(6) No materials, methods or appliances, except those which shall pass satisfactory tests or dispensations, and be approved by the Inspector of Buildings, shall be furnished, erected and installed in buildings. The materials, methods or appliances so approved shall be installed in the completed condition in which they were approved.

SECTION 32.

Columns Eccentrically Loaded.

(1) Any column eccentrically loaded shall have the stresses caused by such eccentricity computed, and the combined stresses resulting from such eccentricity at any part of the column added to all other stresses at that part shall in no case exceed the working stresses stated in this Code.

(2) The eccentric load of a column shall be considered to be distributed equally over the entire area of that column at the next point below at which the column is securely braced laterally in the direction of the eccentricity.

(3) Tie plates and lattice bars shall not be used on columns eccentrically loaded, unless approved by the Inspector of Buildings, otherwise plates extending the full length of the column only shall be used.

SECTION 33.

Strengths of Temporary Supports

Every temporary support placed under any structure, wall, girder or beam, during the erection, alteration, demolition, or repairing of any building or structure, or any part thereof, shall be of sufficient strength to safely carry the load to be placed thereon.

CHAPTER XIII.

Excavations, Footings and Foundations.

SECTION 34.

Excavations.

(1) The person causing any excavation for a building to be made shall have the same properly guarded and protected. Wherever necessary he shall properly sheath pile and, if for his independent use, or unless otherwise agreed with adjoining owner shall at his own cost erect sufficient retaining wall to permanently support the adjoining earth. Such retaining wall shall be carried to the level of the adjoining earth and shall be properly coped.

(2) Whenever an excavation is not intended to be or shall not be carried to a depth of more than eight feet below the curb level, the owner of every adjoining or contiguous wall or structure shall protect the same so that it shall be and remain as safe as before such excavation was begun. Such owner shall be permitted to enter upon the premises where the excavating is being made when necessary for this purpose.

(3) Whenever an excavation is intended to be or shall be carried to a depth of more than eight feet below the curb level, the person causing such excavation shall at all times from the beginning until the completion of the excavations, foundations, retaining walls or other structures to be built in such excavation, protect at his own expense every adjoining or contiguous wall or structure, and support the same by proper means. For this purpose he shall be afforded the necessary access to the adjoining premises. If access be denied by any owner of adjoining property it shall be the duty of the person causing such excavation to notify the Inspector of Buildings in writing to this effect. Thereafter it shall be the duty of the owner who has refused access to his premises, to make safe such adjoining wall or structure upon his premises and to protect and support it by proper means so that the excavation may be made; and for this purpose he shall, when necessary, be permitted to enter upon the premises where the excavation is being made.

Adjoining Party Walls.

(1) In case an adjoining party wall is intended to be used by the person causing the excavation to be made, and the footings and foundations, of such party wall are in good condition and sufficient for the uses of both the existing building and the new one adjoining, then and in such case the person causing the excavation to be made shall, at his own expense, preserve such party wall from injury and support the same by proper means, so that said party wall shall be and remain as safe as before the excavation was begun.

(2) In case the footings and foundations of any such party wall are not in good condition or not sufficient for the uses of both the existing building and the new one adjoining, then it shall be the duty of the person causing such excavation to be made to extend such defective or insufficient footing or foundation, or to replace same with a new footing or foundation. Such extended or new footing shall extend on each side of the party line such a distance as to bring the centre of the footing under the centre of the wall, so that the total load upon the wall may be uniformly distributed over the area of the footing. In order that this may be done, the person causing the excavation to be made shall be allowed access to the adjoining premises.

(3) In case any excavation, or the removal of any existing building, shows any adjoining wall or walls or structure to be unsafe at the time the excavation was begun, then it shall be the duty of the person causing the excavation to be made, or the building to be removed, to forthwith report the fact, in writing, to the Inspector of Buildings. The Inspector of Buildings shall, upon the receipt of such notice from any person causing any excavation to be made, or any building to be removed, forthwith cause an inspection of such adjoining premises to be made, and if such inspection prove the aforesaid wall or walls or structure to be unsafe, then it shall be the duty of the Inspector of Buildings, acting under the provisions of Section 2 of this Code, to declare such wall or walls, or structure or structures, to be unsafe and cause the same to be repaired as therein provided.

(4) If the person whose duty it shall be to preserve or protect from injury any wall or walls, structure or structures, shall neglect or fail so to do within twenty-four hours after the receipt of a notice so to do from the Inspector of Buildings, then the Inspector of Buildings shall enter upon the premises and employ such labor and furnish such materials and take such steps as, in his judgment, may be necessary to make the premises safe and secure, or to prevent the same from becoming unsafe or dangerous, at the cost and expense of the person whose duty it is to keep the same safe and secure. Payment of such expenses shall be collected in the manner set forth in Section 2 of this Code.

Bearing Capacity of Soil.

(1) Applications filed in the Office of Inspector of Buildings shall contain a statement of the character of the soil at the level of the footings. The Inspector of Buildings shall be notified before any test is made of the sustaining power of the soil, so that he may be present or represented thereat. When doubt arises as to the safe sustaining power of the soil upon which a building is to be erected, the Inspector of Buildings may order borings to be made, or he may order tests to be made of the sustaining power of the soil by and at the expense of the owner of the proposed building.

(2) In tests of the sustaining power of the soil the ultimate test load shall be one and one-half times the load which the soil is to actually bear when the building is completed. Measurements of the settlement shall begin as soon as one-tenth of the ultimate test load has been applied and shall be continued until a period of twenty-four hours shall have elapsed without increase of settlement under the ultimate load. On no soil shall the total allowable settlement after the application of one-tenth of the ultimate test load exceed one inch.

(3) In the absence of a test the area of the bearing footing shall be so proportioned that the load per square foot upon the respective character of soil shall not exceed those set forth in the following table:

Soil Under Footings.	Load in Tons.
Soft clay	1
Clay, sand or clay and sand together or in layers, wet and springy	2

Coarse sand, gravel, or sand and gravel	4

Classification of Soils.

(A) Mud, Peat, Bog, Silt—Any soil containing more than a trace of vegetable matter, or which on drying shrinks more than five per cent. of its volume shall be classed as mud, peat, bog, or silt and shall be deemed unsuitable material on which the foundations of a building shall be directly supported.

(B) Filled in Material—Any material which has been removed or deposited by any agency of man, as by filling, dumping, dredging or otherwise, shall be classed as "filled in" material and shall be deemed unsuitable material on which the foundations of a building shall be directly supported.

(C) Clay—Any natural soil containing such ingredients as to render it capable of being worked when wet into a plastic state shall be called a clay.

(D) Sand—Any soil or natural material composed of quartz or other rock particles shall be classed as fine sand when fifty per cent. or over by weight passes a fifty mesh sieve, and as coarse sand when fifty per cent. or over is retained on a fifty mesh sieve.

(E) Gravel—Any soil or natural material composed of rock particles where fifty per cent. or over of the particles forming the mass shall be one-quarter of an inch in diameter or over, shall be classed as gravel.

(F) No footing of a building shall be directly supported upon filled in material, mud, peat, bog, silt or similar material.

SECTION 37.

(3) What Built Of.—All footing or base courses shall be of stone, concrete, or concrete steel construction.

(4) Loads on Footings.—All footings shall be so designed that the stresses in the materials employed conform in all respects to the requirements of this Code, and the loads they sustain per unit or area shall be as nearly uniform as possible, and also so that a line drawn from the outer edge of the wall or pier, at the bottom, to the outer edge of the footing, at the bottom, shall make an angle of not more than sixty degrees with a horizontal plane and shall lie within the masonry throughout its length, except when tensile stresses are properly taken care of.

(5) The dead loads carried by the footings shall include the actual weight of the superstructure and foundations down to the bottom of the footing. All tanks or other receptacles for liquids shall be figured as being full. All vaults or similar built-in structures shall be considered as forming a part of the building.

(6) In warehouses, stores and buildings, used for light manufacturing, in which the live load on the floors is not over one hundred and fifty pounds per square foot, and in churches, school houses and places of public amusement or assembly, the live load carried by the foundation shall not be less than seventy-five per centum of the total live load upon the floors contributing thereto.

(7) In office buildings, hotels, dwellings, apartment houses, lodging houses, tenement houses and stables, the live load carried by the foundation shall not be less than sixty per centum of the total live load on the floors contributing thereto.

(8) The live load carried by the foundations of all other buildings shall not be less than that required to be carried by the lowest tier of columns or by the foundation walls.

(9) Stone Footings.—Under walls their thickness shall not be less than one-third of their width, and in no case shall it be less than five inches; under piers, columns or posts the thickness of footing stones shall not be less than eight inches. The footing shall project a minimum distance of three inches beyond each side of any foundation wall, and six inches beyond each side of any pier. Footing stones shall be laid on their natural bed, crosswise, edge to edge and well bedded, and filled up, solid and level.

(10) Concrete Footings.—Concrete footings shall not be less than six inches thick and shall project beyond each side of any foundation wall and eight inches beyond each side of any pier.

Such beams shall be fastened by bolts and separators and the grillage filled solid with concrete. All metal which forms part of any footing or foundation shall be thoroughly protected from rust by concrete or by the use of other approved coating.

SECTION 38.

Foundations.

(1) Every building, (except sheds), shall have good and sufficient foundations of brick, stone, concrete, reinforced concrete, or hollow blocks. When the building is erected upon solid ground the foundations shall extend not less than three feet below the surface of the earth, footings inclusive. When neither solid earth nor rock is found, piles, of wood or concrete, shall be used, as per requirements of the Inspector and the latest rules of engineering practice relating thereto.

(2) If built of rubble stone they shall be, for a depth of twelve feet below the curb level, at least eight inches thicker than the wall which rests upon them. If built of brick or concrete they shall be for a depth of twelve feet below the curb level at least four inches thicker than the wall which rests upon them.

(3) Headers.—All stone walls to have at least one header extending through the wall in every three feet each way, of good flat stones.

(4) All stone to be laid on its natural bed, every stone to extend into the wall at least six inches, to be built flush and true, firmly bedded in mortar with all spaces and joints thoroughly filled.

(5) Only cement mortar shall be used in the construction of the footings and foundations of any fire-proof building. No lime whatever shall be used under any conditions.

CHAPTER XIV.

Masonry.

SECTION 39.

Walls.

(1) The walls of all buildings, other than frame buildings, shall be constructed of stone, brick, iron, steel, cement concrete (in bulk, blocks or reinforced concrete), or other approved hard, solid and incombustible material.

(2) All buildings shall be enclosed on all vertical sides with independent or party walls.

(3) The walls and piers of all buildings of brick or stone shall be properly and solidly bonded, with close joints filled with mortar. They shall be built to a line and carried up plumb and level.

(4) No brick, stone, concrete or masonry work of any description shall be built when the temperature is below twenty-eight degrees Fahrenheit at the point where the work is in progress. No frozen materials shall be built upon.

(5) No wall or walls of any building shall be carried up more than two stories higher in advance of any portion of the walls of said building, except that in the case of wall bearing buildings the exterior walls may be carried up so that the iron or steel work shall not be, at any time, more than five stories in advance of the walls, but this provision shall not apply to buildings in which the walls are carried independently by girders at each floor. The front, rear, side and party walls shall be properly bonded together.

(6) When not carried up at the same time the perpendicular joint between the walls shall be made with four-inch offsets at every heading course, and have also iron or steel anchors at least every three feet in height. These anchors shall not be less than two-inch by one-quarter-inch metal, and shall be either bent up at the ends or have a cross-pin to form the anchorage.

Anchors inserted for the purpose of connecting front and rear walls with side or party walls shall extend not less than eight inches into the side party wall and not less than twelve inches into the front and rear walls, when these walls are not built and bonded together, in themselves.

(7) The walls and beams of every building during the erection or alteration thereof shall be strongly braced from the beams of each adjacent story, and when required shall also be braced from the outside until the building is enclosed.

(8) In all brick walls every sixth course shall be a heading course, except where walls are faced with brick in flemish or running bond, in which latter case every sixth course shall be bonded into the backing by cutting the course of the face brick and putting in diagonal headers behind the same, or by splitting the face brick in half and backing the same with a continuous row of headers. Where face brick is used of a different thickness from the brick used for backing, the course of the exterior and interior brickwork shall be brought to a level bed at intervals of not more than ten courses in height of the face brick, and the face brick shall be properly tied to the backing by a heading course of the face brick.

(9) All bearing walls faced with brick laid in running bond shall be four inches thicker than the walls are required to be under any other section of this Code. In running bond approved metal wall ties may be used in place of the diagonal headers if placed not over four courses apart vertically and twenty inches horizontally.

(10) Face brick shall be laid at the same time as the backing, and shall in no case be laid after the backing is in place.

SECTION 40.

Piers.

(1) Piers shall be built of dimension stone, stone concrete, hollow blocks or good, hard, well-burned brick. Stone block or brick piers shall be laid in cement mortar. Every exterior pier shall be securely anchored to the beams or girders at the level of each tier. The height of any isolated pier shall not be greater than ten times the least horizontal dimension of the pier.

(2) Every pier of less than nine square feet in cross-section which supports any beam, girder, arch or column upon which a wall rests, or a lintel spanning an opening over ten feet wide on which a wall rests, shall have built into it, at vertical intervals of not less than thirty inches, steel plates five-sixteenths inch thick, or stone bonders not less than four inches thick.

Every steel plate shall have the same horizontal dimensions as the piers into which it is built.

(3) Every pier which supports a column or girder shall have immediately below the column or girder a suitable cast iron or steel plate to distribute the load over a sufficient area to comply with the permissable stress for the material supporting it as determined in sections 28 and 29 of this Code.

SECTION 41.

Stone Walls Above Grade.

(1) All stone walls to be built and bonded as already prescribed in section 39, except that above grade they may be laid in lime mortar, or lime and cement mortar as per sections 19 and 21 of this Code.

Where walls are built of stones with dressed level beds and vertical joints, the Inspector of Buildings may permit such walls to be of the same thickness as specified for brick walls. In no case shall stone walls be of less thickness than specified for brick walls, and in no case shall the pressure per unit of area exceed that provided for in the sections of this Code governing the strength of materials.

SECTION 42.

Ashlar.

(1) Stone used for the facing of any building, and known as ashlar, shall be not less than four inches thick.

(2) Stone ashlar shall be anchored to the backing, and the backing shall be of such thickness as to make the walls, independent of the ashlar, conform as to thickness with the requirements of the sections of this Code, unless every alternate course be at least eight inches thick and bonded into the backing, and then four inches of it may be counted as part of the thickness of the wall. However, no wall faced with ashlar shall be less than twelve inches thick in any case.

(3) Where terra cotta or other approved artificial material is used instead of stone ashlar, it shall not be less than four inches thick. It shall be properly and securely anchored to the backing, and not counted as part of the thickness of the wall.

SECTION 43.

Brick Wall Thicknesses.

(1) The minimum thickness of all bearing walls shall be in accordance with the schedule below. In determining the thickness by means of these schedules, the height of the walls shall be measured to the point of complete support whether this be a foundation, a beam or a girder.

For Buildings of Classes A, B, E and F.

Increased Thickness of Walls.

(2) When the height of any wall exceeds one hundred feet, it shall be increased in thickness in general accordance with the above schedule as shall be approved by the Inspector of Buildings.

(3) When the clear span is greater than twenty-five feet, the thickness of bearing walls shall be increased four inches over that set forth in the above schedules for every twelve and one-half feet or fraction thereof that the said span exceeds twenty-five feet; or shall have in lieu of this increase of thickness such piers or buttresses as the Inspector of Buildings may direct. In all walls the same amount of materials herein required for walls, may be in part used in piers or buttresses, provided the walls or bays between shall be of a thickness approved by the Inspector.

(4) Every bearing wall faced with brick laid in running bond shall be four inches thicker than specified in the foregoing schedules.

(5) If any horizontal section through any part of any bearing wall shows more than thirty per centum area of flues and openings, such wall shall be increased in thickness by four inches for every fifteen per centum, or fraction thereof, by which the total area of flues and openings exceeds thirty per centum.

(6) In all buildings, walls over one hundred and five feet in length shall be four inches thicker throughout than is required by this Code, unless they are properly braced by cross walls, piers, buttresses or similar means.

Reduced Thickness of Non-Bearing Walls and Interior Walls.

(7) The thickness of non-bearing walls may be four inches less than that of bearing walls, provided that no non-bearing wall is less than twelve inches thick, nor extends for more than fifty feet in height without an increase of thickness.

(8) When bearing walls are less than twenty-five feet apart, or are intersected by cross walls, or strengthened by piers of sufficient size, the Inspector may permit the reduction of thickness of interior walls in just proportion to such added strength, except on walls less than forty feet in height.

SECTION 44.

Enclosure Walls for Skeleton Structures.

In skeleton structures not over seventy-five feet in height, walls between columns or posts and supported by girders, shall be of brick, stone, concrete or hard hollow clay blocks thoroughly anchored to enclosing columns, posts and girders, and be of a thickness for brick and stone required for non-bearing walls, for concrete not less than six inches, and for clay blocks set in cement mortar not less than eight inches in thickness, provided that the supporting columns or posts are not over twenty feet apart on centres, nor the vertical distance between supporting girders greater than twelve feet.

SECTION 45.

Existing Walls.

(1) Existing Party Walls.—Walls heretofore built for or used as party walls, the thickness of which was at the time of their erection in accordance with the requirements of the existing laws, which are in good condition but are not in accordance with the requirements of this Code, may be used at the discretion of the Inspector of Buildings for the ordinary uses of party walls provided the height of the same be not increased. No existing wall shall be used for party wall or other different purposes without his written permit.

(2) Lining Existing Walls.—Should it be desired to increase the height of existing party or independent walls, which are less in thickness than required under this Code, this shall be done by lining with brickwork to form a combined thickness with the old wall of not less than four inches more than the thickness required for a new wall corresponding with the total height of the wall when so increased in height. The said lining shall be supported on proper foundations and carried up to such height as the Inspector of Buildings may require. No lining shall be less than eight inches in thickness, and all linings shall be laid up in cement mortar and thoroughly anchored to the old brick walls with suitable wrought iron anchors, placed two feet apart and properly fastened or driven into the old walls in rows alternating vertically and horizontally with each other, the old walls being first cleaned of plaster or other coatings where any lining is to be built against the same. No rubble wall shall be lined until it has been approved by the Inspector of Buildings.

Arches and Lintels.

(1) Openings for doors and windows in all masonry buildings, shall have good and sufficient arches of stone, brick or terra cotta, well built and keyed with good and sufficient abutments, or lintels of stone, iron or steel of sufficient strength, which shall have a bearing at each end of not less than four inches on the wall. On the inside of all openings in non-fireproof buildings in which lintels shall be less than the thickness of the wall to be supported, there may be timber lintels, which shall rest at each end not more than three inches on any wall, which shall be chamfered at each end and be cut to true arch shapes on top. A suitable rowlock or keyed arch shall be turned over the timber lintel. Or the inside lintel may be of cast iron or steel, and in such case stone blocks or cast-iron plates shall not be required at the ends where the lintel rests on the walls, provided the opening is not more than six feet in width.

(2) All masonry arches shall be capable of sustaining the weight or thrust which they are designed to carry, and the stress at any point shall not exceed the working stress for the material used, as given in section 29 of this Code. Tie rods shall be used where necessary to ensure stability.

Parapet Walls.

All exterior and division or party walls over fifteen feet high, excepting where the front walls are to be finished with cornices, gutters or crown mouldings, shall have parapet walls not less than eight inches in thickness and carried two feet above the roof, but for warehouses, factories, stores and other buildings used for commercial and manufacturing purposes the parapet walls shall be not less than twelve inches in thickness and carried two feet above the roof, all such walls shall be coped with stone, terra cotta or cast iron.

SECTION 48.

Hollow Walls.

(1) In all walls that are built hollow the same net horizontal section of brick or concrete shall be used in their construction as if they were built solid, as in this Code provided, and no hollow wall shall be built unless the parts of same are connected by proper ties, either or brick, stone, iron or other suitable metal, placed not over twenty-four inches apart, horizontally, and vertically. No such hollow space shall exceed four inches in width.

SECTION 49.

Furred Walls and Studded-Off Spaces.

(1) The inside four inches of all walls may be built of hard burned hollow brick, the dimensions of ordinary brick, properly tied and bonded into the walls. Where hollow tile or porous terra-cotta blocks are used as lining or furring the walls, they shall not be included in the measurement of the thickness of such walls. In fire-proof skeleton buildings, however, hard burned hollow brick of standard size may be used to form the entire backing, provided that in no case shall the load imposed thereon exceed ten tons per square foot.

(2) In all walls furred with wood the masonry between the ends of wood beams shall project the thickness of the furring beyond the inner face of the wall for the full depth of the beams. In cases where the beams are parallel to a wall furred with wood, there shall be a space of not less than two and one-half inches between such wall and the nearest beam. This space shall be filled in solidly with brickwork or concrete for the full depth of the floor beams.

Studded-Off Spaces.

(3) Where walls are studded off, unless fire-stops are provided as called for in this section, the space between the inside face of the wall and the studding at the floor level shall be fire-stopped with approved fire-proof material. The beams directly over the studded-off space shall be deafened with not less than four inches of such material, which shall be laid on boards cut in between the beams. The under side of such beams shall be protected by a covering of metal lath, or other approved fire-proof materials, and plaster. Dry cinders or sand shall not be permitted for fire stopping.

SECTION 50.

Recesses for stairways or elevators may be left in the foundation or cellar walls of all buildings, but in no case shall the walls be less in thickness than the walls of the top story, unless reinforced by additional piers with steel girders, or iron or steel columns and steel girders, securely anchored to and steel girders on each side. Recesses for alcoves and similar purposes shall have not less than eight inches of brickwork at the back of such recesses, and such recesses shall not be more than eight feet in width, and shall be arched over or spanned with iron or steel lintels, and not carried up higher than eighteen inches below the bottom of the beams of the floor next above. No chase for water or other pipes shall be made in any wall more than one-third of its thickness. No horizontal recess or chase which exceeds four feet in length shall be allowed in any wall. The aggregate area of recesses and chases in any wall shall not exceed one-fourth of the whole area of the face of the wall on any story, nor shall any such recess be made within a distance of six feet from any other recess in the same wall. There shall be no chase in any pier.

SECTION 51.

Walls of Brick Buildings Raised, Lowered or Altered.

(1) Within the fire limits no brick dwelling house with eight inch walls, already erected, that has a peaked roof, shall be raised for the purpose of making a flat roof thereon, unless the same be raised with the same kind of material as the building, and unless such new roof be covered with fire-proof material. The building, when so raised, shall not exceed thirty-six feet six inches in height.

(2) No brick building within the fire limits shall be enlarged or built upon unless the exterior walls of the addition be of approved incombustible materials. Such building shall be raised, lowered or altered in the manner provided for in this section.

No rolled steel column shall have an unsupported length of more than forty times its least lateral dimensions or diameter except as modified by section 31 of this Code.

(2) The ends of all columns shall be faced to a plane surface at right angles to the axis of the columns, and the connections between them shall be made with splice plates.

When the section of the columns to be spliced are such that splice plates cannot be used, a connection formed of plates and angles may be used, designed to properly distribute the stress.

(3) No material (whether in the body of the column or used as lattice-bar or stay-plate) shall be used in any steel column of less thickness than one-thirty-second of its unsupported width measured between centres of rivets transversely, or one-sixteenth the distance between centres of rivets in the direction of the stress.

(4) Stay-plates are to have not less than four rivets, and are to be spaced so that the ratio of length to the least radius of gyration of the parts connected shall not exceed forty; the distance between nearest rivets of two stay-plates shall in this case be considered as length.

(5) Steel columns shall be made in one, two or three-story lengths, and the materials shall be rolled in one length wherever practicable to avoid intermediate splices.

(6) Where any part of the section of a column projects beyond that of the column above, the differences shall be made up by filling plates secured to column by the proper number of rivets.

(7) Shoes of iron or steel, as described for cast iron columns or built shoes of plates and shapes may be used.

SECTION 87.

If the column is round or many sided, the top flange shall project not less than three inches at its least projection from the outer surface of the column, and be square or rectangular in shape, and the bottom flange of the column immediately above the same shall be of the same shape and dimensions as the top flange of the column below. Each flange shall be reinforced with brackets cast centrally on the column, and with fillets on both the bracket and flange. In case the column is placed on the lot line, the flanges on that side only may be omitted, if approved by the Inspector of Buildings.

(6) Between the joints of cast-iron columns placed vertically over each other there shall be a solid steel plate not less than one-half inch in thickness, of the same dimensions as the flanges of the columns, and true on both sides. The columns shall be bolted together with bolts not less than three-quarters of an inch in diameter, passing through the two flanges and the intermediate plate, the bolts being of sufficient length to allow the nuts to be screwed up tightly, and as each column is placed in position the bolts shall also be placed in position and the nuts shall be tightly screwed up. One bolt shall be placed at each corner of the plate and flanges, and the number of bolts shall be never less than four. The holes for these bolts shall be drilled to a template.

The threads shall be full and clean, the nut shall be truly concentric with the bolt, and the thread shall be of sufficient length to allow the nut to be screwed up tightly.

(2) When bolts go through bevel flanges, bevel washers to match shall be used so that head and nut of bolt are parallel.

(3) When bolts are used for suspenders, the working stresses shall be reduced for steel to twelve thousand pounds per square inch of net area, and the load shall be transmitted to the head or nut by washers, distributing the pressure evenly over the entire surface of the same.

(1) For tension members the actual net area only, after deducting rivet holes, one-eighth inch larger than the rivets, shall be considered as resisting the stress.

(2) The number of rivets shall be determined as prescribed in Sections 27 and 93 of this code.

(3) If the axes of two adjoining members do not intersect within the line of chords, sufficient area shall be added to the chords to take up the bending stresses, or the web members shall be connected by plates so arranged that the axes of the web members prolonged will intersect on the centre of gravity of the chord.

(4) No bolts shall be used in the connection of riveted trusses, excepting when riveting is impracticable, and then the holes shall be drilled or reamed.

SECTION 97.

Steel Pin-Connected Trusses.

(1) All compression members in pin-connected trusses shall be proportioned, using seventy-five per centum of the permissible working stress for columns. The heads of all eye-bars shall be made by upsetting or forging. No weld will be allowed in the body of the bar. Steel eye-bars shall be annealed. Bars shall be straight before boring.

(2) All pin-holes shall be bored true and at right angles to the axis of the members, and must fit the pin within one-thirty-second of an inch. CHAPTER XXIV.

Reinforced Concrete Construction, and Tests of Fire Proofing.

SECTION 104.

Reinforced Concrete.

(1) The term reinforced concrete shall mean an approved concrete mixture reinforced by steel of any suitable shape. The concrete is to be considered only for compression and shearing stresses, and is not to be figured for tension.

The steel is to be considered for tension and also to assist the concrete in shear and compression where necessary.

(2) Concrete to be reinforced shall consist of one part of Portland cement, two parts of sand, and five parts of broken stone or gravel, materials to be measured, and shall be what is usually known as a "wet" mixture.

(3) All sand used shall be as per section 18, and all cement used shall be Portland cement as per section 20, the manner of working and handling, the construction of forms and centering and the removal of same as per section 22, all steel as per section 27, and all floors as per section 101 of this code.

(4) Buildings of reinforced concrete, when designed and built in accordance with the requirements of this section shall be deemed to be fire proof construction.

SECTION 105.

Working Stresses and Requirements.

(1) Reinforced concrete shall be so designed that the stresses in the concrete and the steel shall not exceed the following limits:

	Pounds
Extreme fibre stress on concrete in compression, per square inch	700
Shearing stress in concrete, per square inch	75
Concrete in direct compression, per square inch	500
Tensile strength in steel, per square inch	16,000
Shearing stress in steel, per square inch, mild steel	10,000
Hard steel	12,000

(2) The ration of the moduli of elasticity of concrete and steel shall be taken as one to fifteen.

(3) The following assumptions shall guide in the determination of the bending moments due to the external forces. Beams and girders can be figured as continuous to the extent of WL-10 in the middle, if the negative moment be taken care of by steel. This applies only to cases where the rods can be continued into the adjacent beams or girders far enough beyond the point of maximum negative moment to properly distribute the stresses to the concrete. Floor slabs, when constructed continuously and when provided with reinforcement at top of plate over the supports, may be treated as continuous beams, the bending moment for uniformly distributed loads being taken at not less than WL-10 the bending moment may be taken at WL-24 in the case of rectangular floor slabs which are reinforced in both directions and supported on all sides, where the sides are not over sixteen feet average and do not differ more than fifty per cent. in length, this moment can be considered as existing in the middle third. Proper reduction can be made elsewhere.

(4) The moment of resistance of any reinforced concrete construction under transverse loads shall be determined by formulae based on the following assumptions:

(a) The bond between the concrete and steel is sufficient to make the two materials act together as a homogeneous solid.

(b) The stress in any fibre is directly proportionate to the distance of that fibre from the neutral axis.

(c) The modulus of elasticity of the concrete remains constant within the limits of the working stresses fixed in this section.

(5) No allowance shall be made for the tensile strength of concrete.

(6) When the shearing stresses developed in any part of a reinforced concrete construction exceed the safe working strength of concrete, as fixed in this section, a sufficient amount of steel shall be introduced in such a position that the deficiency in the resistance to sheer is overcome. In any case shearing bars must be provided with a maximum spacing equal to the working depth of the beam or girder.

(7) When the safe limit of adhesion between the concrete and steel is exceeded, provision must be made for transmitting the stresses from the one material to the other.

(8) All reinforcement in beams, girders and columns shall be so secured that there can be no displacement of the same in the concrete.

(9) Where girders or beams are connected with columns, the reinforcement of the girder shall penetrate the column and be secured to it.

(10) All reinforcement shall be completely encased in concrete. The thickness of concrete outside of the reinforcement shall not be less than three-quarters of an inch in floor slabs, partitions or walls, not less than one and one-half inches for all beams, girders and columns, and not less than three inches in footings.

(11) Reinforced concrete may be used for columns in which the ratio of length to least side or diameter does not exceed fifteen; but in no case shall the effective cross section of the column be less than sixty-four square inches.

(12) All reinforced concrete columns shall have longitudinal reinforcements of a total cross sectional area equal to at least one per cent. of the effective cross sectional area of the concrete; provided, however, that the total sectional area of the reinforcing steel shall not be less than one square inch, and that no rod or bar be of less diameter or smaller dimensions than one-half inch. Flat steel may be used if of equivalent area and spacing. All longitudinal reinforcement rods shall be tied together by wire at least one-quarter of an inch in diameter at intervals not exceeding the diameter of columns. All vertical reinforcing rods or bars shall extend upward and downward into the column above or below, lapping the reinforcement of the column above or below to the extent of at least thirty diameters of the rod or bar of the larger section. Rods for compression only to have suitable sleeves at joints.

(13) Reinforced concrete columns may be stressed to five hundred pounds per square inch of the effective area.

(14) Vertically reinforced columns must not exceed an average stress of 800 pounds per square inch on the cross section.

(15) Spandrel walls supported entirely on reinforced concrete or steel girders shall have a minimum thickness of six inches, and shall be reinforced with not less than one half pound of steel per square foot of wall.

SECTION 106.

Tests of Fire Proofing.

(1) Whenever required by the Inspector of Buildings, the contractor, at his own expense, shall make load or other tests to determine the efficiency of the fireproof construction. The floors shall, in all cases, develop a strength in thirty days equal to five times the live load for which the supporting steel work is designed. The loads shall consist of such materials and be so placed as to form a uniformly distributed load over the entire area to be tested and without arching and transmitting the loads to the supports, and in case sand or similar material is to be used for loading, it shall be in bulk and loose and not in sacks or packages of any kind. The section to be tested shall be not less than a square, one side of which is equal to the distance between the beams; the test section shall be cut apart from the rest of the flooring before the load is applied. Fireproof floors failing to develop the strength herein required shall be condemned by the Inspector of Buildings and shall be replaced by the contractor by floors of the required strength.

(2) On all reinforced construction the contractor shall be prepared whenever required by the Inspector of Buildings, to make load tests, at his own expense, on any portion of a reinforced concrete construction within thirty days after completion of that portion. The test shall show that the construction will sustain a load twice the live load for which it was designed without a deflection of more than one-thirtieth of an inch per foot of span. Tested portions failing to develop the strength herein required shall be replaced by members of the required strength.

(3) In case it is desired to use other or new materials, or employ same in a different manner than herein provided for fireproof construction, the manufacturer or representative thereof shall, at his own expense, make a comparative fire and water test under the direction of the Inspector of Buildings, side by side with one of the approved methods herein described, or obtain dispensation as per section 25 of this code.

CHAPTER XXV.

(5) Bevel Ends for Wood Beams.—The ends of all wood floor and roof beams, where they rest on brick walls, shall be cut to a bevel of three inches in their depth.

(6) Ends of Beams Not to Rest on Stud Partitions.—In no case shall either end of a floor or roof beam be supported on non-continuous stud partitions, except in frame buildings.

(7) Cross Bridging for Beams.—All wood floor and wood roof beams shall be properly bridged with cross bridging, and the distance between bridging or between bridging and wall shall not exceed eight feet.

(8) Beams Near Flues.—All wood beams shall be trimmed away from all flues and chimneys whether the same be a smoke, air or any other flue or chimney. The trimmer beam shall be not less than eight inches from the inside face of a flue and four inches from the outside of a chimney breast, and the header beam not less than two inches from the outside face of the brick or stone work of the same.

(9) The header beam, carrying the tail beams of a floor and supporting the trimmer arch in front of a fireplace shall be not less than twenty inches from face of the chimney breast.

(10) The safe carrying capacity of timber beams shall be determined by their resistance to bending and shear in accordance with the unit stresses fixed by section 30 of this code.

(11) If outside sheathing is omitted on any wood frame construction, provision must be made for safe proportional increase of timber sizes and bracing to the satisfaction of the Inspector of Buildings.

SECTION 108.

If at the street level, the hatch doors when open shall be protected by chains or bars, and when inside the building, the unprotected sides of the hatch shall be protected by a solid or slat inclosure at least seven feet high, with lifting gates at the loading sides; these gates shall be operated by the action of the car.

(8) Every power-driven sidewalk elevator shall have at the street level a removable railing. The car shall also be provided with a substantial guard or bow to open the sidewalk doors far enough in advance of the car to prevent catching anyone between the elevator car and the sidewalk doors.

(9) At the top and bottom of all elevator shafts there shall be placed over and under the strongest parts of the elevator car approved buffer springs and rubber buffers.

A clear space not less than four feet in depth and the full-size of the shaft, shall be provided between the bottom of the shaft and the lowest point of the underside of the car when the car is at the limit of its descent. The distance between the underside of the platform or grating at the top of the elevator shaft, and the top of the crosshead of the car when at the limit of its ascent, shall not be less than four feet.

(12) Every existing freight elevator shall have the hatches on every floor protected by vertical gates and inclosures. The fixed inclosures shall be not less than six feet in height, and the gates as nearly six feet in height as the conditions at the building shall warrant. Wooden gates and inclosures shall be made of vertical strips with space not wider than two inches. Should the stories be so low that the gates cannot be at least five feet in height, with a space under the same of eighteen inches, vertical collapsing gates shall be installed.

(13) Wherever carriage or automobile hoists are installed, hatchways on all floors except the lower one shall be inclosed on the unprotected sides by slat work or solid inclosures of wood at least six feet high, and at the loading ends the approaches shall be protected by a balanced drop bar.

Overhead Construction.

(14) All overhead beams, sheaves and supports shall be of steel or iron, and all overhead beams shall be supported at both ends on brick walls or on steel construction, or steel construction resting on masonry.

(15) All overhead machinery shall be supported on a substantial wrought-iron or steel frame of beams, and where it is necessary to hang bearings underneath the supporting beams, these bearings shall be supported by wrought-iron or steel straps bolted to and through the supporting frame or beam.

(16) At the top of the shaft, and under the suspension sheaves and beams of all elevators, there shall be built a substantial working platform or steel having not more than one and or grating or open construction of iron one-half inches space between any two members of said grating and made so as to sustain a load of one hundred and fifty pounds to the square foot; said platform or grating shall be securely supported, independent of the overhead construction carrying the sheaves and other overhead appliances.

(3) The height of a building is the perpendicular distance measured in a straight line from the top of the highest point of the roof beams in the case of flat roofs and from the average height of the gable in the case of roofs having a pitch of more than twenty degrees with a horizontal plane downward to the curb level. When a building does not adjoin the street, the measurements for height shall be taken to the average level of the ground adjoining such buildings.

(4) In measuring the height of a wall the height of the parapet wall down to the top of the roof beams shall not be included.

(5) The length of any building shall be its greatest horizontal dimension.

(6) The width of any building shall be its next greatest horizontal dimension.

(7) Wherever referred to, the width of the street shall be taken as being the distance between the street building lines on opposite sides of the street, measured at right angles to the centre line of the street at the middle of the lot.

(8) A story is that part of any building comprised between any floor and the floor or roof next above. In case any floor or the combined area of floors at any one level extends over less than twenty per cent. of the horizontal area included within the outside walls at that level the same shall not be considered as a floor for the purpose of determining story heights.

(9) A cellar is a story more than one-half below the level of the curb, but it shall not be considered as a story in determining the height of buildings.

(10) A basement is a story, partly, but not more than one-half below the level of the curb, but it shall not be considered as a story in determining the height of buildings unless more than one-half above the curb.

(11) A yard is an open and unoccupied space on the same lot with a building, between the extreme rear line of the building and the rear line of the lot.

(12) A court is an open and unoccupied space other than a yard on the same lot with a building. A court not extending to the street or yard, is an inner court; a court extending to the street or yard, is an outer court, if it extends to the street, it is a street court, if it extends to the yard it is a yard court.

(16) Bulkhead—A bulkhead is a structure erected on the roof of a building only for the purpose of enclosing staircases to roofs, elevator machinery, water tank, ventilating apparatus and exhaust chambers or any other necessary machinery required to be at that level. Bulkheads when used only for the above mentioned purposes and when they are only of sufficient height and area to properly enclose any of the above apparatus, equipment or stairs, may be erected on the roof of any building and need not be considered in determining the height of the building.

(17) Pent Houses—A pent house is a structure, other than a bulkhead, erected on the roof of a building and not exceeding ten feet in height nor more than twenty-five per centum of the area of the roof of the level at which it is built, said twenty-five per centum not to exceed in any case two thousand five hundred square feet. A pent house shall not be used for sleeping accommodations.

A pent house as defined above may be erected on the roof of any building and need not be considered in determining the height of a building. "An Ordinance relating to the erection and removal of buildings within certain Limits," approved November 29, 1881, and ordinances amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, and all other ordinances and parts of ordinances inconsistent herewith are to the extent of such inconsistency hereby repealed.

CHAPTER XXXV.

SECTION 122.

This Code is hereby declared to be remedial and is to be construed literally.

SCIENCE NOTES.

The conclusions of the international conference for the purpose of regulating the traffic of the air will not be announced for some time after the adjournment of the body, but one thing is pretty certain, and that is that regulations will be recommended and that of official inspection of machines and operator. For the purpose of enforcing the regulations airships will be divided into classes—private and government. Covernment airships will be exempt from inspection. All airships must be equipped with visible and audible signaling of their approach to orperators of other airships.

When you go to the washstand and carefully wash your hands with a generous application of soap and hard brush do not think for an instant that your hands are clean. The tenacious microbe refuses to be disturbed and clings to the flesh throughout the whole operation. There are some chemical compounds which will dislodge the busy bacilli to a certain extent, but not entirely. According to the investigations of a medical authority of the Prussian army, the best results in the direction of giving the hands a sanitary cleaning are accomplished by the use of alcohol. A bath of pure alcohol will remove about 99 per cent. of the germs. Where it is desired to clean the hands hygienically it is recommended that the hands be not first washed in water, for this will so adulterate the alcohol that it will not be enabled to accomplish its work as affectively as otherwise.

PHILADELPHIA RECORD LEADS IN QUAKER CITY.

Of all the great Philadelphia dailies there is none that stands as high in the estimation of out-of-town readers as The Philadelphia Record, which has built up an enormous circulation outside of Philadelphia as well as within strictly on its merits as a wholesome, wide-awake and fearlessly edited family newspaper.

The Record occupies a somewhat unique position as a Democratic paper published in the principal citadel of Republicanism and commanding a strong following even among the warmest supporters of opposing parties. The fact is that people of all political faiths, and of no political faith, want the news; they want it accurately presented in the most readable form, and they want it uncolored by partisanship. This they get in The Record, which confines its editorial opinions to its editorial columns, and chronicles the world's doing just as they happen.

Might Help Some.

Patient—I want you to give me something for these awful pains in my back.

His System of Self Defense.

"Have you ever studied the art of self defense?" said a young fellow to a man of magnificent physique and noble bearing.

The elder man looked at his questioner with a quiet smile and then answered thoughtfully:

"Yes, I have studied and practiced it."

"Ah!" said the other eagerly. "Whose system did you adopt?"

"Solomon's," was the reply.

Somewhat abashed, the youth stammered out: "Solomon's! What is the special point of his system of training?"

"Briefly this," replied the other: "'A soft answer turneth away wrath.'"

For the moment the young man felt an inclination to laugh and looked at his friend anxiously to see whether he was serious. But a glance at the accomplished athlete was enough, and soon a very different set of feelings came over the youth as his muscular companion added, with silent emphasis, "Try it."—Christian Endeavor World.

The "Green Flash" at Sunset.

A correspondent writes that during the course of a voyage when midway between Marseilles and the strait of Bonifacio a "green flash" was seen at sunset. The sky was perfectly clear after a cloudless day, with little wind. As the sun approached the horizon the line 'twixt sea and sky for about forty-five degrees each side of the sun became suffused with a rich dull rose pink, and the waves reflected a marvelous ruby shade on their surfaces facing the sunset, while the other faces were an opalescent blue or green from the upper sky. The two colors flashed and changed in a marvelous way. Such intensity of coloring had never been seen by those on board. The sun set clean into the sea, and about ten (or less) seconds after it had disappeared a bright green single flash, just like a railway signal lamp, but brighter far, met our view and rewarded our watching for it.—Symons' Meteorological Magazine.

A Good Creed.

To be able to look every man squarely in the eyes; to make friends and hold them; to keep clean of mind and body; to smile at ill fortune; to laugh at my mistakes; to frown when temptation comes avisiting; to be ready with a word of cheer when that word will help; to strive to develop to the utmost the heart, head and hand qualities endowed by the Ruler over all; to hold all women in respect and to love one; to weave the thread of eternal optimism into the lives of all with whom I may come in contact; to worship nature and the Great Spirit that conceived it all—in a word, to play the game of life with a steady hand and a qualmless conscience and a real desire to be of service—that is my religion. And, say, if I can live up to the mark, don't you think I've corralled about all the creed that is necessary?—Backbone Monthly.

A Stream of Water.

A high pressure jet of water will bowl over a man as easily as a box of matches and leave him half stunned. It will even turn a bullet from its path. Experiments have shown that a jet of water can be produced at such a high pressure that it becomes practically a bar of iron. Swords have been blunted in attempting to cut through these extra high pressure jets. Some years ago an armed thief attempted to hold up a high official of the Bank of England in his private office. The official managed to get out of the room unharmed and locked the door. A resourceful attendant brought the fire hose. He opened the door sufficiently to insert the nozzle. In a few minutes the would be thief was picked up senseless.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Lion and the Lamb.

He was a gentleman of the old school—never mind his wrinkled brown skin and wrinkled brown clothes—and it was with the most distinguished politeness that he gave his order to the butcher man:

"De madam say please to cut her two lam' chops fum de lion, suh."

The butcher man jerked a loin from a hook, and his customer watched him cut into it. And a waiting woman said to herself:

"Addition forty-eleven to the literature of the lion and the lamb."—Washington Star.

His Denomination.

A man was asked to what religious denomination he belonged.

He thought it over.

"Why," he presently replied, "I believe it is the Episcopal church I stay away from."—Cleveland Plain Dealer

A Misinterpreted Question.

A young Canadian visited Washington one winter to spend the holidays with a pretty cousin and her family. As he was motoring with his pretty cousin one afternoon she said to him:

"Do you have reindeer in Canada?"

"No, darling," he answered quickly "At this season it always snows."

He Wasn't Afraid.

When Bishop Phillips Brooks was "commanded," as the phrase goes, to speak before the queen some one asked if he was afraid. "No," he replied smiling; "I have preached before my mother."

Not Serious.

"Husband, I found a lock of hair among your old papers. I never gave it to you."

"You needn't worry. I don't remember who did."—Louisville Courier Journal.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning April 9, 1911.

The states need to be painted white. Some of them have been. We give thanks for that. From that we take courage. The good people in some of these commonwealths of ours have seen the terrible evils of the liquor traffic. They have banded themselves together. They have worked and they have prayed. They have risen up in their might and they have declared, "We will have no more of this accursed thing within our borders." And no black spots are left anywhere within them. What these states have done other states can do and ought to do and, we believe, will do. For what moral right has any state to suffer such a traffic as this? It is a curse and nothing but a curse. It curses man, body, brain and soul. It wrecks thousands upon thousands of homes. It fills our almshouses and asylums, our penitentiaries and our prisons. It inspires to all manner of crime. It is always and everywhere the enemy of everything sacred to God and to man.

Because it is all this, and much more than this, the liquor traffic is doomed. It was never nearer death's door than it is today. It is dying hard, but die it must. Do you smile as you read this? Can you not discern the signs of the times? What else does it mean, this battle which is raging all along the line, this campaign of education? Are not millions of our boys and girls being taught the evil effects of alcohol upon the human system? Are not ministers preaching against it? Are not societies working against it? Are not thousands upon thousands beseeching God day and night to deliver us from it? What does it all mean that 72 per cent of our agriculturists discriminate against the man who uses liquor and that 79 per cent of our manufacturers, 88 per cent of our tradesmen and 90 per cent of our railroad officials are doing the same thing? We are not shallow optimists, but we firmly believe that the death-knell of the liquor traffic is already sounding. It would have sounded long ago if men, instead of listening to the voices of ignorance and prejudice, of appetite and greed, had listened to the voices of reason and of conscience, of religion and of God.

No one ought to be in any doubt as to where we stand on this liquor question. Where does Christ stand—Christ, the friend of the poor, Christ, the lover of men? Where Christ stands there also stands the true Christian. It is not enough for us to say, "I am opposed to the liquor traffic." In no way, shape or manner ought we to countenance it. We ought to pray against it. We ought to work against it. We ought to use all our influence against it. We ought to band ourselves with those who are actively engaged in working for its suppression, help with our money in the fight that they are making and do all in our power to hasten the day of victory.

BIBLE READINGS.

Prov. xx, 1; xxiii, 20, 21, 29-32; Isa. xxviii, 7 and 8; Rom. xiv, 13; I Cor. viii, 13; Eph. v, 18.

Some Bible Work.

When our Junior meetings closed for the summer we gave each Junior a booklet made of pink paper and prettily decorated with pictures of flowers birds and children, cut out of postcards and picture cards and pasted on the different pages.

The outside cover bore the name of the Junior, and the first page was inscribed, "Junior C. E. Bible Work For the Summer of 1910," and on the other pages were references given, one for each week, to be memorized during the summer.

These were the references: Matt. vi, 28-30, 33; Ps. lxvii, and the Beatitudes. Each Junior who could recite these verses from memory in the fall was presented with a Junior badge.

They were also given pretty cards with an envelope pasted on the back in which to put their offerings for missions during the vacation.

Both the booklets and the cards were prepared by the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor and presented to the Juniors.—Anna E. Pierce.

The Field Secretary For Kansas.

It has been the dream and the ambition of Kansas for several years to have a field secretary. Now at length this dream has been realized in the appointment of W. I. Jones of Emporia, who has just begun his labors.

Mr. Jones is a graduate of Emporia college. He has been a successful teacher, and in order to accept the call of the Endeavorers of his state he has had to seek release from a school principalship for which he had contracted for the coming year.

The new field secretary is an earnest Christian young man who has attained his present position by dint of hard work. He has been a leading worker in the First Congregational society in his home city, as well as in his city union and district union. Besides he has regularly attended the state conventions and has taken part in them.

ENDEAVOR'S REWARD

We dream our dreams
And onward press
By firm endeavor.
On eddying streams,
Through tribulome stress,
We reach the harbor of success
And rest forever.

A SHIP IN A STORM.

The Peril When Wind and Water Rage In Opposite Directions.

In a storm at sea, with a gale blowing in one direction and the sea running in the opposite direction, it takes a stanch ship to stand the water pressure on one side and the contrary wind pressure on the other.

Stability is one of the greatest problems to the constructor of a steamship. Naturally the center of gravity should be low. The hull must be of such a form that when the vessel rolls to one side the center of buoyancy shall move sufficiently far to that same side for the forces of buoyance acting upward to right the vessel.

A badly designed ship is liable to many dangers. If light in the stern the screw may come out of the water, race and be snapped off. If too low in the stern when running before a storm breaking waves may fall on board and so tend to swamp the vessel. A ship may be topheavy; there comes a moment when the upward force of buoyancy no longer tends to right the ship, but instead exerts its force in pushing the ship still farther out of perpendicular, with the result that she capsizes.—New York World.

THE SILKWORM.

But For Man's Aid the Domesticated Insect Would Be Extinct.

A peculiar fact about the silkworm is that it is actually a domesticated insect. Neither the animals nor the fowls of the barnyard, remote as they are from the wild types, need so little restraint as this bombyx mori, which, prodigiously industrious though it be, has never been able to meet the world's demand for its spun product.

As a matter of fact, the silkworm has been so domesticated through the ages that it would become extinct now were it not for the aid of man. Born into slavery, the caterpillars crawl contentedly over the narrow territory of their feeding trays, and, though the moths have wings, they have lost all desire to fly. This slavery began in China more than 4,500 years ago.

Nevertheless all the world's silk does not come from the domesticated insect. Not a little of the supply is "wild silk." This is the product of various insects belonging to the larger family of saturnildae. Chief among them industrially is the Indian moth called Antheroea myllita, the source of tussah silk.—Harper's Weekly.

Felt Safer In the Mine.

In an article in the Atlantic Monthly Joseph Husband describes a thorough examination of a coal mine in the middle west. Work was discontinued for the time, and the miners were obliged to stay "on top" for a number of days. So great was the interest taken by the men in this work of examination that there was little complaining. One morning, however, as I walked back from the power house to the town I met Luke Davis, an old miner of about sixty, who came limping down the street toward the mine, and from him I heard the first complaint of the kind, and many like it followed, that I had yet encountered.

"The air on top ain't fit to live in," he said. "One day it's cold; next day it's hot. I've had rheumatism ever since the mine shut down. The only place a man keeps his health is underground." There were many others who shared his views.

Future of Lake Geneva.

The lake of Geneva, lying in the deep valley between the Alps and the Jura mountains, performs a remarkable work for the benefit of man. During the summer its waters store up a great quantity of heat, which is slowly radiated into the air in the course of the following autumn. Thus the freezing currents descending from the snow topped mountains around are warmed and tempered, and the atmosphere along the shores of the lake is maintained at a moderate temperature. But the remote descendants of the present inhabitants will experience quite a different state of affairs, for it is estimated that in 64,000 years the river Rhone will have turned the lake into a broad plain by means of the soil it is constantly carrying down from the mountains.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

The Templars.

The order of the Templars was organized about the year 1118 for the purpose of protecting pilgrims on their way to the Holy Land and back. The founder of the order is supposed to have been Baldwin II., king of Jerusalem. For a long time the Templars was the most highly honored organization in Europe, but jealousy on the part of the sovereigns, coupled with their desire to get hold of the great wealth of the Templars, caused the persecution of the order, which finally (about 1308) resulted in its practical extinction. The order was abolished in 1312.—New York American.

Real News.

"Why do you waste so much space on these interviews with politicians?" demanded the merchant.

"They are of interest to the people," answered the reporter.

"Shucks! If you interviewed me I could tell 'em where bargains are to be had."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Reckless.

Uncle—My dear boy, it's a fact that the bacilli on paper money have caused many a death before now. Nephew—Well, uncle, you might let me have a few notes. I'm very tired of life.—Fliegende Blatter.

The best thing for any one to say who has nothing to say is to say nothing and stick to it.

Explosives In Your Body.

The human body contains no fewer than four substances which are so inflammable that in a pure state they will "go off" by spontaneous combustion. For instance, there is phosphorus. The body of a person weighing 120 pounds contains twenty-two ounces of this substance, which, as everybody knows, readily takes fire of its own accord if exposed to the air. It is combined with lime to make the bones, taking the form of phosphate lime. The body of a human being weighing 120 pounds contains nearly one and a half ounces of magnesium, two ounces of sodium and nearly two and a half ounces of potassium. The first of these, a substance of silvery whiteness, is so readily and fiercely combustible that it has to be kept tightly corked in bottles to prevent it from igniting of its own accord. Sodium will take fire if thrown into water, and so likewise will potassium—the latter with great violence, finally exploding and throwing a shower of sparks into the air.—New York World.

Hospital Fighters.

Into a hospital came two men with battered faces.

"Street fight?" said the surgeon in charge.

It was. Under the doctor's directions orderlies moved beds and patients around until the newcomers were separated the length of the ward.

"In this case that precaution may not be necessary," he said, "but after a street brawl it very often is. Before we learned the peculiarities of those people it happened more than once that two men who were mortal enemies were brought in and laid out side by side. Each saw his advantage and was foxy enough to keep still until both were left alone in adjoining cots; then they sailed into each other tooth and nail, trying to finish the job that had been interrupted in the street. Once or twice they nearly succeeded. Now chance patients with pugilistic tendencies are placed so far apart that a neighborly interchange of uppercuts is out of the question.—New York Press.

The Word "Chap."

"Chap" is simply an abbreviation of chapman, the merchant of former days, and is derived from the Anglo-Saxon "ceap," a bargain. The word almost brings before us the loud voiced "cheap Jack" as he cries his wares in the cheaping or market. Chap seems to have come into common use at the end of the sixteenth century and is rarely mentioned in books before 1700. Johnson does not recognize it, though Steele uses it in 1712 in the Spectator ("If you want to sell, here is your chap"), and it is found in Bailey's Dictionary, 1731. Its original meaning of a buyer or seller still lingers in the dialects of many counties. Coupled with the adjectives old, young, little, poor, it was and is used in familiar language, as is its relative, a queer "customer." Todd, 1818, affirms that a good chap meant one to whom credit might be given, whereas not qualified by good it was a term of contempt.—London Standard.

A Mighty Appetite.

We eat, but we no longer stuff. The great stuffers of the past are dead. What of that seventeenth century Kentish man Nicholas Wood, for example, who would eat a whole hog at a sitting and follow it up the next day with thirty dozen pigeons? Withal this possessor of a "Kentish stomach" was a sportsman. As proof of this there is that record of his challenge to Taylor, the water poet, to "eat at one time as much black pudding as would reach across the Thames at any place to be fixed by Taylor himself between London and Richmond." Well might old Fuller moralize over that appetite of Wood's. "Let us raise our gratitude," he said, "to the goodness of God, especially when he giveth us appetite enough for our meat and yet meat too much for our appetite."—Westminster Gazette.

The Moss Troopers.

Moss troopers was the name given to the desperate plunderers and robbers who secreted themselves throughout the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries in the "mosses" on the borders of Scotland. These outlaws were largely made up of deserters and criminals from the armies of England and the continent, and their depredations and cruelties were the terror of the region infested by them. Many severe laws were passed against them, but they were not fairly extirpated until the eighteenth century.

His Frankness Won.

The late Senator Dolliver said that in politics it paid to be frank and honest with the people.

"My predecessor in the senate," he said, "was John H. Gear. On one occasion the prohibition spirit was running high, and a public meeting was held, with a well known Quaker as chairman. Gear was invited to the meeting. He accepted the invitation. The old Quaker called him to the platform and said:

"'We learn that thou dost not belong to any temperance society and also that thou dost drink liquor at thy discretion. Is this true?'

"'Every word of it is true,' replied Gear, 'but did you ever hear of my doing anything dishonorable?'

"'Nay, Mr. Gear,' replied the old Quaker chairman—'nay, we have never heard anything else to thy discredit. Thy frankness is more to be commended than thy habits. But thou hast not lied to us, and we will support thee.'

"And they did," said Senator Dolliver, "and elected him too."—Washington Star.

Her Bridge Prize.

A decided coldness between two women who had been friends for many years is the result of a mistake made by the maid of one of them who had had a four table bridge party one afternoon recently. In keeping with the custom, she had provided a prize for each table, to be brought to the card room just before tea was served and placed on the tables which bore the corresponding numbers. It was a "lovely party" in every respect, with never a hitch until the woman at No. 3 opened the parcel which was supposed to contain her trophy of victory over her three competitors, but which really contained a piece of perfumed soap. Unfortunately, the hostess was not in the group when the package was opened, and much had been said before she discovered that the wrong bundle had been brought downstairs.—New York Tribune.

The Seal's Marvelous Instinct.

The instinct of the seal is marvelous. It will leave its young on the ice in the morning and, going down through a hole, remain away all day swimming in search of food. Returning in the evening, it will locate its offspring in the same "patch" among hundreds of thousands of other baby seals notwithstanding that the ice may have wheeled or drifted fifty or sixty miles during the day from wind and tide and notwithstanding that the patch may extend thirty or forty miles from one end to the other. Whether this instinct is of the class that enables the bird without any mark or chart in a forest with millions of trees alike to find its way back with ease and precision to its nest I do not know, but it is one of those wonders in nature before which human knowledge is brought to a full stop.—Sir Edward Morris in Wide World Magazine.

The Jekyll and Hyde Idea.

"I was in Stevenson's company," says Charles Brookfield in "Random Reminiscences," "at the moment that he conceived the germ of the idea of 'Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.' He was inveighing against a man with whom he had done business and with whom he was dissatisfied. The man's name was Samuel Creggan, or something like it. 'He's a man who trades on the Samuel,' Stevenson declared. 'He receives you with Samuel's smile on his face, with the gesture of Samuel he invites you into a chair, with Samuel's eyes cast down in self depreciation he tells you how well satisfied his clients have always been with his dealings, but every now and again you catch a glimpse of the Creggan peeping out like a white ferret. Creggan's the real man; Samuel's only superficial.'"

The Louvre.

The Louvre dates away back to the reign of Dagobert in 628. In 1204 it was a prison and in 1364 was made into a library. The new building was begun by Francis I. in 1528 and enlarged and adorned by successive kings, principally by Louis XIV. But it was Napoleon I. who gave the Louvre its real glory. Turning it into a museum, Napoleon deposited in it the finest collection of paintings, statues and art treasures known in the world. The magnificent buildings of the new Louvre were begun by Napoleon I. and completed by Napoleon III. about 1857.

Not an Inviting Ideal.

"My son," said Harker as he pointed to the ivy in front of the cottage, "always be like the vine—climb."

CAIN STILL SURVIVES.

One Historic Villain Who Has Not Been Placed Upon a Pedestal.

It is the fashion now to pull down the idols of the past and set up new and hitherto comparatively unknown ones in their places, to rehabilitate the degraded and to reverse the decisions and the decrees of history. Speculation and criticism seek out dark spots and drag new heroes into light, while those who stand in the light of fame are scrutinized so closely that they seem but common things after all. If we go on at this rate much further we shall not have a villain left, nor a beauty, nor a hero.

Helen was an old hag past sixty at the beginning of the Trojan war. Judas is already on his feet. Nero is absolved from his murders. Henry VIII. has become a noble, free hearted spirit, and, as for his wives, the new version is, "Served them right." William Tell has vanished into the darkness of myths. Eugene Aram is a sentimentalist who could not help himself. No one but maniacs in their fits of madness is now guilty of murder.

SOUND WAVES.

They Can Be Focused With a Lens Just as Light Can.

Few people are aware that sound can be focussed just as light can. All are familiar with the burning glass or reading lens which, if placed in a beam of sunlight, will focus the rays into a small point which is so hot as to be able to set fire to a piece of paper. Light is a wave in the ether, but sound is a wave in a material medium, generally the air.

If we make a convex lens out of rubber or collodion and fill it with gas heavier than air, say carbon dioxid, we shall have a sound lens analogous in nearly all respects to a glass lens for light. It will be found that we can focus sound waves in the following manner:

Take a watch and place it some feet away from one side of the lens and put your ear on a line with the watch and the center of the lens, but on the other side, and move outward from the lens. While moving out you cannot hear the watch until you get to a certain point where the waves are focused, at which place you will hear it plainly. This is called the conjugate focus of the watch.—New York Tribune.

A Scolding Dress.

"Before I take off this dress," said the woman to the home dressmaker, who was fitting a party gown, "I want to go into the kitchen and read the riot act to Maria."

"Oh, not with this dress on," the dressmaker protested. "She is cooking and the grease might pop"—

"Can't help it," the woman interrupted. "Maria needs a lecture. She has been needing it for some time, but I didn't dare deliver it because I hadn't good enough clothes to make it effective. Maria is black and lately from the south. She judges people by the clothes they wear. If I had scolded in shirt waist and skirt or even in my old blue afternoon dress Maria would have scorned me, but with all this finery on I can speak my piece and Maria will be properly impressed and maybe she will reform."—New York Press.

Treasure Trove Law In England.

In England treasure trove belongs to the crown. According to the law, if any one finds hidden treasure and conceals it for his own use he is liable to fine and imprisonment. It used to be a hanging matter. However, it may be some encouragement to English treasure seekers, if any such there be in these enlightened days, to know that the laws of treasure trove only apply to such as is discovered by accident. Treasure discovered by systematic search would not come within this description; neither would finds discovered by astrological or cabalistic sciences or by the potent influence of the divining rod.—St. James' Gazette.

Completely Hypnotized.

The dentist had not advertised himself as a "painless dentist," says a writer in the Kansas City Times, but he pulled a patient's tooth so quickly and dexterously that the man said: "How do you manage to extract women's teeth without their screaming? You don't give gas always, of course?"

"But my office," the dentist replied, "is, as you see, opposite a department store millinery display. When the women get absorbed in looking at hats they're insensible to pain."

That Which Counts.

What is it that counts in the celestial city? Only that good which is done for the love of doing it. Only those plans in which the welfare of others is the master thought. The "Tea Leafer."

A good deal of the tea consumed by the working classes in the days when Arthur Young complained of the addiction to this luxury had never seen either India or China. In one of John Ashton's works on England he cites a case in which a boy charged with gambling stated that the money found in his possession had been made by picking tea leaves. This led to the discovery that many persons made a living by picking sloe leaves and whitethorn leaves in the fields near Camberwell and selling them to a local cowkeeper for a penny a pound. One man said he picked from fifty to sixty pounds a day and always found a market for them. The leaves were subsequently sold to a wholesale merchant, who obtained as much as 8 shillings a pound for them under the guise of tea. The merchant was prosecuted and fined, not for adulteration, but for defrauding the revenue. And the "tea leafer" is still the slang name for the petty thief.—London Standard.

Whims of Parrots.

"It is odd," said the bird store keeper, "but it is true, how people come into a bird store and expect to open up a conversation with a parrot offhand. They fail and then make up their mind that the parrot is worthless. This will apply to a majority of seekers after a talking parrot. They do not give the bird credit for the sense it actually possesses. There are parrots valued at anywhere from $50 to $500 that will not be coaxed into conversation with a stranger nor while he is present, although they are the very best of talkers. Parrots often refuse to perform when there are purchasers looking on, but once the store is clear of them they will chatter away through their whole vocabulary as if their very lives depended on their being heard. This obstinacy often spoils good sales. Most parrots will talk to a girl or woman much quicker and freer than to a boy or a man."—Browning's Monthly.

Ostriches and Their Eggs.

A singular thing about ostriches is the way they bring up their babies. To begin with, there are a good many eggs in the nest (dug out of the hot sand), but the eggs were laid by different mothers. Ostriches do not lay eggs every day, and, being far apart, they would not hatch together. When the nest is prepared, therefore, all the ladies in the neighborhood are invited to contribute an egg apiece, the hostess returning the favor in due time.

Ostrich eggs are delicious. One weighs three pounds, or is equal to a dozen of a hen's. They are very convenient, too, for the hunters in the desert. They not only furnish a delightful meal, but a dish to cook in. The shell is hard and thick, and the egg is set on the fire, a hole is broken in the top, it is stirred with a stick, and when it is done the saucepan serves as a dish as well.—New York Tribune.

The Name of Rio de Janeiro.

Rio de Janeiro owes her name to the accident of a date and the mistake of her discovery. When Alphonso de Souza, the Portuguese navigator, found himself in the spacious bay he imagined he had found the mouth of a noble river, and because the day happened to be the 1st of January, 1531, he named the supposed river after the first month of the year. The name was not applied to the city that grew up on the slopes of the hills till many years afterward, but San Sebastian, the original name, is now almost forgotten. Rio as a city purchases the beauty of her site at the cost of health, for the giant ridges that form the beautiful background to the town shut out the breezes that might blow tropical nuisances harmlessly to sea.—London Spectator.

Astrology and War.

It has been stated on what is said to be good authority that a representative of the Prussian government asked of a French astrologer the proper time to pick a quarrel with France. After carefully comparing horoscopes of high officials he answered that any hour in the afternoon as near as possible midway between the 9th and 14th of July, 1870. On the 11th of July William snubbed Benedetti, the French emissary, and on the 12th friendly relations ceased

Two Historic Drinks.

Sir Philip Sidney received his death wound before the walls of Zutphen on Sept. 22, 1586. Parched with thirst, he called for a drink. As he was putting the bottle to his mouth his eyes fell upon a desperately wounded soldier who as he was being carried past threw him longing glances, which Sir Philip perceiving took the bottle from his lips before he drank and delivered to the poor man with these words: 'Thy necessity is greater than mine.'"

At the battle of Ravenna in 1512, when the allied Spanish and papal forces were defeated by the renowned Gaston de Foix, Dumolard, one of his captains, played a conspicuous part. After a gallant charge, by which he had driven back the enemy, he determined to publicly drink the health of his enemy's brave ally, Jacob von Empser, the leader of the 5,000 German lasquenets. Wine was brought upon the field, and, having sat down, each hero filled his goblet. At that moment, while they were in the very act of pledging each other's health, a cannon ball from the enemy's lines killed them both.

Quick and Cheap Legal Work.

The French tribunal of commerce is presided over by a judge without a jury. The plaintiff's lawyer argues his own case before the judge, simply to show that he has a case and the nature of it. The defendant does not plead, but if he can disputes the facts. If the judge considers there is no case he dismisses the plaintiff. In the contrary case he appoints an assessor out of a dozen chosen yearly of the town's reputed merchants to decide upon it. The following day the assessor calls the parties to his room in the court. He hears each of them separately without any lawyers. Within fifteen minutes he gathers their documents and dismisses them. Two or three days later he communicates his judgment to the solicitors through the court, and the business is ended. The costs of lawyers and the court fees come to about £6 a side. The same case in England would take six months at least and cost no less than £150 for a claim of £50.—London Mail.

When Bismarck Went Dry.

Bismarck was not without superstition, and this always was noticeable on the eve of the new year. From 9 o'clock that night until after midnight he would not take water in any circumstances from a glass. It was an ancient tradition in the chancellor's family that any one who set the legend at defiance would pass through a serious illness. If another tradition is true the observance of the family legend must have been a sore trouble to the iron chancellor, for the Paris contemporary from which we take the foregoing says that Bismarck not only loved war, but beer and wines, especially French wines. He was not averse to punch and grog, but on New Year's eve grog was under the ban, for it contains water.—London Globe.

Gambling In Wood.

"To most people my business would seem to be devoid of chances," said a dealer in fine woods, "yet as a matter of fact I know of nothing that is more of a gamble. On every log of wood we buy we take a chance that the inside is as good as the outside. At a recent auction of fine woods in London my partner and I paid $9,000 for a mahogany log that looked all right so far as we could tell. If the inside was sound we stood to make a good profit, but worm holes or rotten spots at the core would mean a heavy loss. Not until we got the log to this country and got it opened up could we be certain. As a matter of fact this particular log was perfect, and we cleaned up $3,000 on the deal. But it was gambling pure and simple."—New York Sun.

Not From Politeness.

This was heard in an overcrowded Boston elevated train:

"Say, Dick," said the young man whose football tactics had won him a strap in the rush—"say, Dick, I've been riding in on the 'L' every morning except Sundays and holidays for two years, and I've never given up a seat to a lady yet."

"You're a polite one," sneered Dick.

"Nothing of the kind," retorted the young man. "I've never had a seat to give up."—Boston Post.

Sweet Sarcasm.

"Daddy, what makes your nose so dreadfully red?" asked a little boy of his father one day at dinner.

"The east wind, of course!" the father answered gruffly. "Pass that decanter and don't talk so much."

"Yes, Tommy," said the boy's mother sweetly, "pass your father the east wind and be careful not to spill any on the tablecloth!"—London Mail.

SOOTHED THE SPIRITS.

A Preliminary to House Building In the Shan States.

House building in the Shan States is not such an easy matter as it looks. Mrs. Leslie Milne, author of "Shans at Home" tells how she arranged for the building of a bamboo house at Namkham, and, though the materials arrived, no progress seemed to be made with the actual construction:

"When I first spoke of house building I had been asked what to me seemed an irrelevant question—namely, the day of the week on which I was born. When I answered that it was late on Saturday night or early on Sunday morning I did not know that my reply was of importance. As time went on and the bamboos lay untouched, looking like long green snakes in the grass, I complained of the delay only to be told that until I could tell them my birthday they were afraid to begin work, as the spirits would be angry if the offerings for the proper day were not made.

"I suggested that the building should begin, I braving the anger of the spirits, but they thought the work too dangerous, as the risk was not only for me, but for the workmen as well. On consulting a wise man a way was found out of the difficulty. He decreed that an extra large offering to content the spirits of both Saturday and Sunday should be made. This was done, and the building commenced next day."

SINGING SANDS.

Peculiar Properties of These Curious Freaks of Nature.

The most notable of those curious freaks of nature, "singing sands," are those of the Hawaiian island of Kauai. When a small quantity of this sand is clapped between the hands it is said to give forth a sound so shrill as actually to resemble a hoot. Put into a bag and violently shaken, the sand emits a noise strangely like the bark of a dog.

Similar sands also occur in the Colorado desert, where also are to be found those curious nonsedentary sands that continually travel hither and thither over the vast plain of clay. Their movements are induced by the winds, and when a strong breeze is blowing the particles of which they are composed give out an audible humming or singing.

Under the microscope these sands show an almost perfectly spherical form, so that they roll upon each other at the slightest impulse, a circumstance that also accounts for the rapidity with which the sands travel over the desert. One theory advanced with respect to the "singing" of these sands is that it is due to an exceedingly thin film of gas that covers the grains. Gathered and removed from the desert, the sands lose their vocal properties.—Exchange.

Spoiling the Tobacco.

Winchcombe St. Peter, in Gloucestershire, began the cultivation of tobacco in England toward the end of the sixteenth century, and the inhabitants are said to have derived considerable profit from it until the trade was placed under restrictions. An entry in Pepy's Diary on Sept. 19, 1667, concerning the coming of a cousin of his to town proceeds: "She tells me how the life guard which we thought a little while since was sent down into the country about some insurrection was sent to Winchcombe to spoil the tobacco there, which, it seems, the people there do plant contrary to law and have always done and still been under force and danger of having it spoiled, as it hath been oftentimes, and yet they will continue to plant it. The place, she says, is a miserable poor place."—London Globe.

Europe's Middle Classes.

In France is an organization called the Congress des Classes Moyennes. Translated, this means "Congress of the Middle Classes." The sharpness with which class lines are drawn in Europe continues to puzzle some Americans, although there are others who think we have class divisions without the names. The French middle classes correspond to the German "mittelstand" and comprise the middlemen of the towns and the country and also many contractors, master builders and clerks. The organization has an annual luncheon, at which the most distinguished men of France are accustomed to speak.

WHEN GREEK MEETS GREEK

By Abbie Fosdick Ransom

Bainbridge swung lightly upon the car he knew Miss Strathmore had boarded a dozen blocks further out, and easily made his way towards the seat she occupied. A woman had preempted the space beside her and conversation was out of the question, but the walk to the office still waited him and he overstepped his time limit for a full ten minutes.

"Don't forget," came her word of caution at parting. "Father will pretend he's glad to see you; he'll invite you to come again and spend the evening, but he will say that tonight he is far too busy to talk with you. Next time it will be the same, and you'll never get an opportunity to ask him, and—well, you know I can never marry without his consent; he's far too kind a father for that."

"I'll remember," he answered laughing, "and I'll be on hand promptly at eight."

"Just the man we're looking for," the junior partner in the firm sang out a few minutes later, as he hung overcoat and derby in his locker. "Late, aren't you?"

"Had a little business ot see to before coming in," Bainbridge responded, not considering it obligatory to state its character.

The other nodded genially, shoving a package of letters toward him. "There's a couple of inquiries from men in your territory that need looking after today," he observed, "but first I wish you'd take hold of a customer that we've all tried in vain to land—old Strathmore of Strathmore, Burns & Noble. Their trade is worth three thousand a year, and Strathmore is the man to see. Klien went after him yesterday and we thought sure he'd get him, but it was the same old failure."

"What's the trouble?" Bainbridge inquired, slipping into his coat again.

"No trouble at all, quite the reverse. You go there, Strathmore looks up, 'glad to see you, doesn't want you to miss him on your rounds, always glad to inspect goods, wants to keep posted in everything new on the market, but too busy this morning to give any attention, drop in again when in the neighborhood.' Every call it's the same old gag, and I think we've been there more than a score of times in the last three months."

Bainbridge heard, snapping his fingers to assure himself of wakefulness. "Strathmore, too busy, glad to see you, come again." He had heard the story earlier in the day, and smiled grimly at the prospect before him.

Yet it couldn't be possible that Strathmore, the millionaire, was Alice's father; it was probably a mere similarity in names. Klien, the crack salesman of the firm, looked up from his desk in the corner and solved the riddle.

"Strathmore's a character, Bainbridge. He's worth a million or more and yet he lets his daughter do shorthand for the Bigelow Trust. She's a mighty fine girl and I've heard old Strathmore declare that she'll never handle a cent of his money until she's saved a thousand or more from a ten dollar salary. Says she must learn business methods and the worth of money and that she shan't marry unless it's some one he's trained in his way of doing things. Get on the right side of him and you're all to the merry, but he's coated so thick with civility that you can't touch him for a dollar's worth."

"Suppose Miss Strathmore determined to marry according to her own desires and before the thousand was saved, what then?" queried the junior partner, grinning.

"It's worth something to know his way of turning a man down," Bainbridge remarked, and Klien added:

"I calculated that Strathmore's order would net me just about five hundred a year; sorry to lose it, but glad to see you land it, old man."

"I shan't be content with that," Bainbridge observed as he left the office. "A turn down this morning means a throw down tonight," he said to himself. "If I want Alice I've got to get that order. I wonder if a call to his glad hand bluff wouldn't win out."

In due time the steel-clad structure occupied by the firm he had resolved to conquer loomed before him, and with a courage born of his love for a certain gray-eyed girl he asked for the senior member.

Yes, Mr. Strathmore was in, would be pleased to see the representative of this particular firm, for which he entertained the highest respect. He shook hands with their agent, while indicating the books and papers heaped upon his desk.

"Would Mr. Bainbridge please call again? This morning he was extremely busy, and although he had promised a hearing to Mr.—sorry, but the name had slipped his memory for the instant—would not he be excused from looking over samples until a more propitious hour?"

In spite of his anxiety Bainbridge smiled, seating himself in the only vacant chair the office afforded, a slender frame which trembled and cracked beneath his avoirdupois. He rose hastily and set his sample case on the floor beside him.

"Really, Mr. Strathmore, you mistake," he responded blandly; "I haven't called to show goods; our firm has no desire to transact business with Strathmore, Burns & Noble while their affairs are conducted on its present basis."

Strathmore stared, opened his mouth to speak, but Bainbridge gave no opportunity.

"We deal only with those firms who give fair dealing and honest treatment to our agents, and I am sorry to state that yours is not reckoned among them. My business with you is of another nature, one of the greatest importance to yourself, and while I might show you the line we carry, simply to oblige you, personally, Mr. Strathmore, had I found you at leisure, you really must excuse me this morning for I am entirely too busy to show goods to those who do not care to purchase up-to-date articles."

Strathmore wheeled and confronted his visitor. "Honest treatment, fair dealing, up-to-date articles," he repeated, suavity forgotten in the brazen effrontery displayed by Bainbridge. "What do you intend by these insults, sir?"

"Just the truth, nothing more," came the undaunted response, uttered still more blandly. "Our representative has called upon you twenty-three times in the past three months, and each time you have invited a second call, promising attention to our goods, and that attention has never been given—do you call that honest dealing and fair treatment? An honorable man would tell the truth and say he didn't want and wouldn't have them. Don't you agree with me?

"As to up-to-date articles," hurrying on, giving no time for interruption, "have you seen our oxegoneter? Have you examined into the merits of the latest hydromatic? I'll bet dollars to Lincoln pennies that you never saw their equal."

He was on his knees before half his sentence was ended, throwing out samples with a practised hand. Strathmore made no effort to restrain him, his moorings were swept away and for the moment he was adrift on the unusual.

Then a something composed of spirals, tubes and strangely fashioned bits of metal caught his eye, in a beautifully embossed box which Bainbridge had artfully flung open.

"What is that?" he demanded, his anger merged in curiosity.

"That," replied Bainbridge, with a pitying smile, "is a thermalecter; I told you that your firm was 'way behind the times."

Strathmore's eyes flashed. "I haven't found it necessary as yet to hire a two-dollar agent to bring me present day business civility," he retorted, "and with new inventions piling up at the rate of several thousand a month, one may be excused if a worthless contraption is occasionally overlooked."

"Perfectly true," Bainbridge was all suavity. "But this, you see, is one of the modern necessities; by this a man is enabled to read the secret thoughts of his business adversary and by a certain arrangement of its working parts can render him as a child in the hands of an irate mother and bring him where he will produce his last dollar. They are in very common use and our firm has the sole agency, selling over ten millions of them in the past six weeks."

A light which was all ripples and bubbles broke over Strathmore's face. "You'll do," he chuckled. "Come, I'll give you just ten minutes to show your stock and clear out. The truth is, I am busy this morning and shouldn't spare a moment."

Bainbridge nodded and got down to business. When he departed he had a very small order, but felt that he had pierced the breastplate that shielded his antagonist.

At the nearest booth he called Miss Strathmore over the wire. "Yes, I know you object to lunching with me, but this is important, I must see you. All right; much obliged; the Commonwealth at one sharp."

Then he hung up the receiver, well satisfied with the world in general and his particular portion of it for the details of his happiness. Yet he knew that asking for the hand of the dearest girl in America on that evening was out of the question. He dared not lose the advantage gained by a premature avowal, and must be content to wait until events shaped themselves to his good fortune.

Business was too absorbing to give further thought to personal matters, but a quarter before one found him en route for his luncheon engagement.

Rounding the corner of the hotel he collided with a man hastening in the opposite direction, and he regained his balance to notice that it was Strathmore, who apologized with a good-natured grunt. Then he grasped his arm, exclaiming:

"Come on, take lunch with me and another Harvard man; I see you wear the crimson. What year are you?"

Bainbridge gave the required date; he was confused and college talk gave him time to think while he said:

"You'll have to excuse me this hoon, Mr. Strathmore; I've another engagement."

Strathmore gazed into his face, a quizzical expression dawning on his own. "Oh, I see; all right; I'll excuse you. Better slip that thermalecter you showed me this morning into your pocket."

It was well for Bainbridge that he turned away, for not a yard behind him was Miss Strathmore, hastening toward them. A blissful hour followed and Bainbridge returned to his office, elated with the thought that Alice had counseled against delay and that the evening would, he hopefully believed, open the gates to Cupid's heaven.

"Where have you been all day?" came a good-humored growl from Klien as he made his appearance. "The old man's crazy."

"What's the trouble?" Bainbridge inquired with a grin.

"Everything; Hayden, our St. Paul manager, dropped dead this morning; our factory in Unionville is going up in smoke; the junior went home before noon; up against pneumonia, I guess; you're booked for a western trip while I've got to run things here. You take the 3:30 express this afternoon."

Bainbridge gazed at him, stupid in amazement. "The dickens I do," he gasped finally. "I can't go until morning."

"You go at 3:30," Klien responded. "There's not a soul in St. Paul who can care for anything, and you must make the arrangements for the funeral. Hayden's widow is nearly blind and can't help even herself. Now get a hustle on yourself."

Bainbridge resigned himself to the inevitable and certainly did hustle. For two months he worked night and day straightening out the details of the St. Paul business, and letter after letter was written Miss Strathmore, but never a line came in response.

He felt certain that in some manner her father was accountable for the silence, but one morning, running up the steps of the post office, he encountered a lady coming down. Her hands went out, and so did his own, and for a half hour thereafter he didn't think to wonder what the spectators thought, for it was Alice and explanations were many.

"I came the day after you left," she said. "Father told me that his sister was going blind, that her husband had died suddenly and I must stay and comfort her as long as she needed me. I thought it strange, for he has never appeared to be interested in her to any extent. I left my address with the Bigelow Trust and thought it strange I didn't hear from you."

Bainbridge nodded sagely. "Your father must have seen us together at lunch, and it was like him to take advantage of the opportunity Fate threw in his way to separate us. Write him to the effect that you have met me here and see what his response will be. I'll wager the diamond I'm aching to buy you that he'll send a hurry-up letter that you're needed at home."

She laughed merrily. "Just like him. But who ever would have thought that Uncle Hayden had charge of your firm's business here? Strange how things develop themselves if one has patience to wait, isn't it?"

"Think I'll write him myself when I reach the office," Bainbridge returned. "I'll tell him that I'm to have charge of the business here and ask him if he doesn't consider it an act of justice to install the niece of the former manager as co-manager with the present incumbent?"

"Such a question would hit his sense of humor in the exact center," she answered. "I'll tell you what we'll do. Come up this evening and we'll send the two letters in the one envelope."

"You're a trump, Alice." Bainbridge wanted to hug her. "You're the joker of the whole pack. I see where we win."

And he did. A week later, when Miss Strathmore was obeying a sudden summons home, a diamond flashed on her finger and Bainbridge bade her good-by with a certain knowledge that the early summer would find her back in St. Paul as a co-manager in a firm which was to read, "Bainbridge & Strathmore," the elder Strathmore being a silent partner.

WAS REAL SURPRISE PARTY

Recipient of the Honor Certainly Did His Share Toward Making It a Success.

"We have the surprise beautifully planned," said young Mrs. Westerleigh to the guests, "and Frank doesn't suspect a thing. I think he has even forgotten that today's his birthday. He will get home from the office at about seven o'clock. Then he always goes upstairs to take off his coat and put on his smoking-jacket for the evening. When he is upstairs I will call out suddenly: 'Oh, Frank, come down quick! The gas is escaping.' Then he will rush down here, unsuspecting, to find the crowd of friends waiting for him.

It went off exactly as planned. Westerleigh came home at the regular hour and went directly upstairs. The guests held their breath while Mrs. Westerleigh called out excitedly: "Oh, Krank, came down quick. The gas is escaping in the parlor."

Every light had been turned out, and the parlor was in perfect darkness. There was a rapid rush of feet down the stairway, then a voice said: "I don't smell any gas."

"Better light the jet," Mrs. Westerleigh suggested tremulously.

There was a sputter, and suddenly the room was flooded with light. Everybody screamed. The hostess fainted.

For there in the center of the room stood Westerleigh, attired only in a natty union suit, with a fresh pair of trousers over his arm.

Birthday parties still form a forbidden subject of conversation at the Westerleighs'.—Lippincott's Magazine.

A Transfigured Foe

By MARY BARRETT HOWARD

Peggy stood at bay with shamed, defiant eyes, while Jack Travers, pausing at intervals to read aloud brief extracts from a tiny red-covered book, circled about her with derisive whoops of laughter.

"Gee, Peggy Porter," he jeered. "I should think that even a girl in the D class might know enough to spell supper with two ps—s-u-p-e-r—Oh, Gee!"

Peggy made a futile snatch at the book, and there was apprehension as well as anger in her voice as she cried:

"Don't you dare read another word, Jack Travers! You ought to be ashamed to read other people's diaries."

"I must read it, Peg, so's to be sure I'm returning it to the right owner," the boy said.

And as he spoke, his eyes fell on several underlined entries, and he whooped again as he read scoffingly:

"'Freddy Simpson took me out to super at Evenly Starr's party yesterday.' 'Freddy walked home from school with me tonight.' 'Freddy gave me a simply grand American Beauty rose at recess!'"

"By ginger, Peggy, before I'd be soft on a sissy boy like Freddy Simpson!"

A blaze of wrath swept the shame from Peggy's brown eyes.

"Freddy isn't a sissy boy, Jack Travers! We girls all think he's perfectly fine and his neckties are dreams. He doesn't go round without a hat till he's black as an Italian, wearing clothes that aren't fit for a tramp!"

Jack Travers, like all normal boys, hated to "dress up," and he stiffened defiantly as he glanced down at the somewhat disreputable costume which had seemed to him just the thing for a warm summer's day. The blue eyes which contrasted so oddly with his bronzed face, flashed and Peggy noted with malicious satisfaction the deep flush that suffused his very ears as he retorted:

"Oh, yes, Pinky's a winner! He's pink and white, an' he's got curly yellow hair and he dresses to beat the band. But I'll tell you what it is, Peggy Porter, you'll find out, some day, that Freddy Simpson's no good. A fellow who's afraid to play football and afraid to go in swimming unless the water's boiling! And he's a regular josher, too. He's got Maude Herrick and Evelyn Starr and about 'steen other girls goin' just the way he has you."

"He hasn't—I—I'm not," Peggy stammered. "Oh, Jack Travers, I hate—hate—hate you!"

Her voice rose in a screech of despairing rage, and as automatically as the figures in a Dutch clock, two women appeared on the porches of two houses on opposite sides of the street, calling:

"Peggy, come here!"

"Jack Travers, come here this instant!"

The boy hastily thrust the bone of contention into Peggy's hands.

"Take your old diary, cry-baby," he muttered.

"Oh, dear," Mrs. Porter sighed as Peggy, her eyes brimming with angry tears, came slowly up the steps. "Now, I suppose, Mrs. Travers will feel obliged to come over here with another present for you, Peggy, and another apology for Jack's rudeness! It is perfectly lovely in her to insist that your constant quarrels are all Jack's fault, but it mortifies me half to death, for I know better. There has been a natural antipathy between you two children ever since the time when his mother brought Jack to see you before either of you were a year old, and you fell upon each other, tooth and nail like a couple of—of tigers. But I thought then, and I think now, Peggy, that you scratched and bit harder than he did. No. I don't care to hear anything about it. Now Peggy, if you don't stop crying and scolding I shan't let you go to Freddy Simpson's party this evening."

At this awful threat Peggy's tears dried as if by magic. What a frightful calamity it would be if she were not permitted, after all, to accept an invitation which had been the cause of much discussion in the Porter family, and little Mrs. Porter had regarded with dismay the invasion of their quiet town by these glaring examples of a blatant and arrogant plutocracy, but Peggy had pleaded hard, and easy-going Mr. Porter had finally settled the matter by saying:

"Oh, let the child go, Emily. We country folk must be behind the times, for I understand that the Simpsons before they came here moved in 'the best circles' of Peoria."

When a few hours later Peggy stood before her mirror arrayed in her best, she viewed the slim white figure reflected therein with pardonable complacency.

Her new frock was dainty enough to satisfy her exacting taste, and although she sighed, as usual, over her shining locks, which were just the color of old sorrel's glossy coat, instead of being fluffy gold, like Maude Herrick's or cloudy black, like Evelyn Starr's.

She was dimly aware that red hair is not an unmitigated affliction taken in connection with a pair of big brown eyes and a skin whose rose and snow is accentuated rather than marred by a freckle or two on the tip of a spirited nose.

"I'll send Nora for you at ten, dear," Mrs. Porter said, as Peggy set out through the long June twilight.

"Oh, mumsey, not at ten!" Peggy expostulated in tragic tones.

"Well, 11," her mother relented. "But don't keep Norah waiting—11 is very late for a child of your age to be out of bed."

The imposing pile of stone and brick which had sprung into existence, mushroom-like, by the magic power of unlimited wealth, towered grandly above the less pretentious structures around it, and Peggy, who had never before been within its charmed precincts, quite held her breath as she entered a great drawing-room furnished with barbaric splendor.

Freddy Simpson, in evening clothes which made the other boys' "Sunday best" look, as the most independent of them secretly acknowledged, "like thirty cents," seemed to Peggy's dazzled eyes a fairy pink and white prettiness which had gained him the soubriquet of "Pinky," was also of a capriciousness. He responded to Peggy's shy greeting with brusque indifference and the next instant had turned his back squarely upon her to resume a whispered conversation with Evelyn Starr, who wore flame-colored silk.

Notwithstanding his pink and white softness of aspect, Freddy had inherited that parental capacity for riding roughshod over the rights and feelings of others which had so notably assisted his father in his race for riches; and it was soon obvious to all beholders that for this evening, at least, dark-haired Evelyn was the object of his pursuit. It was Evelyn to whom he directed all his words and his smiles; Evelyn whom he called out in all the games, Evelyn in a state of giggling elation, who occupied the seat of honor beside him at the supper table, and the wistful wonder in a certain pair of big brown eyes moved him not one jot.

Peggy never lacked for cavaliers, and she joined in all the merrymaking with apparent zest. But through it all the one drop of comfort in her bitter cup was the fact that Jack Travers, who never went to parties except under coercion, had early in the evening with a few other kindred spirits retired to a room which went by the name of "Freddy's den;" there to amuse themselves with a marvelous collection of mechanical toys.

At supper time she shrank back as far as possible behind a big palm and a small escort to elude the mocking glance of a pair of blue eyes looking out from a bronzed face.

But Jack was devoting himself to his supper with the enthusiasm of a hungry, hearty boy, did not seem to notice her humble position in an obscure corner, ignored and deserted by the fascinating young host, and as he again withdrew to the attractions of the den the girl drew a long sigh of relief:

"Now he's safe for the rest of the evening," she exulted. "I can stand being slighted by Freddy if only Jack doesn't know."

But Peggy was destined to undergo an ordeal that made the other experiences of this trying night fade into insignificance; for in the midst of the after-supper hilarity, Pinky Simpson, taking up his station near a door, announced loudly:

"Ma's gone to bed, an' she's left a big basket of favors that cost a lot for me to give the girls. But I'm not agoin' to give 'em to any but the pretty girls. Them that I call the names of may go into the li'bry. The basket's on the table, but nobody dast to touch it till I come—I'm agoin' to give the nicest ones to Evelyn, 'cause she's my honey. Now, Evelyn, you go first."

Evelyn departed giggling in hysterical enjoyment of the situation. "An' Maude Herrick, you may go—an' you—an' you— an' you— an' you."

One by one the girls designated by the young autocrat left the room, and then, with a nonchalance which some of his father's business associates would have had no difficulty in recognizing, Freddy prepared to close the door in the faces of the unfortunate remainder.

The boys present, although some of them were swelling with generous wrath, seemed stunned into inactivity by the brutal frankness of their host, while most of the girls, belonging to the hopelessly plain sisterhood and inured from their cradles to such "slings and arrows of outrageous fortune," accepted their fate with indignant resignation.

Not so Peggy. As name after name was called she began to quiver with suspense. Her throat grew dry, her hands cold, and as she saw the door of the library closing her pride broke down altogether.

"O Freddy, Freddy—aren't you going to let me in?" she wailed like the peri at the gate of Paradise.

"Naw," Pinky responded without emotion. "You ain't pretty, Peggy Porter—you got red hair."

Unheeding the sympathetic murmur of condolence that arose on all sides, Peggy plunged blindly into the hall and out of the door through a crowd of grinning lackeys. She wouldn't stay in that house another instant. She would run home alone, and if some malefactor met and murdered her on the way, why welcome, sweet death, which would put an end to her agony of shame that was sonsuming her.

But instead of a malefactor Peggy encountered at the entrance of the grounds, the maid who had been sent to escort her home, and Tim Goggin, the policeman on that beat.

"Lord save us! What's allin' the child?" Norah exclaimed at Peggy's wild, distraught appearance.

"Oh, Norah, take me home!" Peggy moaned.

"An' where's yer cloak?" demanded Norah.

"I don't know, I don't care—I just won't go back to that house again!" Peggy wailed.

The exigencies of his profession had accustomed Mr. Goggin to agitated persons of the female sex, and his tactfully soothing ministrations had reduced Peggy to a semblance of calm by the time Norah returned with the cloak.

The question of social precedence was not one often mooted in the little country town, and Peggy was unaware that convention demanded that the maid who acted as her escort should follow her at a respectful distance. As a matter of fact, she usually held fast to Norah's hand while she regaled the friendly girl with an account of the evening's gaiety, or else on the not infrequent occasions whey they were joined by Mr. Goggin, she "tagged on behind" admiring the officer's form and lordly manner in which he swung his club.

But tonight she was far too distracted by her recent humiliation to watch the lovers strolling along in front of her, or to hear the sound of rapid footsteps pounding along the walk behind her, and she started violently as Jack panted in her ear:

"I'd caught up with you sooner, Peggy, but just as I was startin' for home I heard what Pinky Simpson had been up to an' I went back to lick the stuffin' out of him. Those guys in uniform pulled me off before I'd given him what was comin' to him," he added regretfully, "but I guess what he got will hold him for a while."

"Oh, Jack!" Peggy gasped. "Did you thrash Freddy because—because he—"

"Sure I did—why wouldn't I?" interjected the boy.

"Oh, Jack!" Peggy breathed again.

Jack's bronzed face looked pale in the moonlight and his blue eyes shot forth sparks of fire. He was exactly like the picture of St. George after he'd killed the dragon, Peggy thought.

"I told you Pinky was no good," her champion reminded her. "But he must have bats in his belfry to say you're not pretty. Why, Peggy, you're a peach, and I think red hair is great."

Peggy edged nearer in grateful, unbounded amazement.

"Oh, Jack," she asked shyly, "did you thrash Freddy because of me? And do you honestly think I'm pretty?"

"You bet," Jack replied succinctly, but with unmistakable sincerity.

A soft little hand slipped into a sinewy brown one and Peggy snuggled to the side of her ancient adversary.

"Say, Peggy," the boy whispered, "I liked you all the time."

BALD-HEADED MAN'S BREAK

His Criticism of Women Bathers Is, by One of Them, Adroitly Turned Upon Himself.

As they sat sunning themselves on the sand he began to be cynical as usual. As a matter of fact, he frequently spoilt the pleasure of her afternoons in the beach with his cynicism.

"Men look well in their bathing suits," he began. "Look at that fellow over there. A Greek god. Knows it, too. Stands where everybody can get a good look at him, and they ought to be glad to look at him. He is a picture. No superfluous flesh anywhere. Well built. Clean length of limb. Magnificent, but the women! Lord! Of all the floppy, unlovely things in the world a woman in a bathing suit is the wofst. Look at that woman walking into the water now. Legs like pillars. So fat she looks like a lobster tied in the middle with a string. Flesh slopping over everywhere. Never looks half decent unless she wears a corset, and then she looks out of place on the beach. Sometimes it makes me disgusted with life," he finished, "to see the nicest sort of women floundering around on the beach in a bathing suit. It does really."

"If there is anything really pitiful," she remarked musingly then, "it is to see a great big bald man, no matter how good his shape is, in a bathing suit. Now look at that one. Isn't he the most helpless looking creature in the world? No matter how fine he is, no matter how straight he walks or how white his flesh it, there's that bald spot shining, shin—"

But by this time she was talking to the atmosphere, for he had covered his head with his hands and taken a flying leap into the water. She saw him come up again a long way off, where he swam slowly about, thinking it over.

SPRING MODES.

Coat Suits Make Bid For Popular Favor.

They Stand Supreme For Street and Shopping Wear and Give Women a Youthful and Jaunty Appearance.

The new skirts and coats for spring and summer wear show no widening of the skirt and no lengthening of the coat. The new models are first cousins, if not sisters, to the suits we have worn since last October.

The best of the new ones that have appeared give an excellent idea of the lines, cut and hang of the coat and the skirt and also show the way one should look in the suit and its hat.

One of these suits seen recently was of white serge with an unusually rough and woolly surface. It was a close imitation of the ratine, which was invented last autumn and which proved such a successful addition to the long list of winter fabrics. This skirt was moderately narrow and was trimmed near the knee line with a heavy cord of black satin. Down the back was a loose box plait, edged with the satin cord to give it weight and keep it flat.

The coat was short and boyish, trimmed with a satin cord that went across the middle of the back, around the hips and up the front to the shoulder. The sleeves were long, with loose armholes, and trimmed below the elbow with cords of satin. The collar was of black corduroy and the turban of the new ecru straw which is excessively pliable. It was trimmed with black aigrets massed at the back and sides.

Our illustration shows a blue serge suit also of the rough coarse surface. The skirt is cut in four gores, with a narrow one down the middle of front and back and a wide one at each side.

The length of the skirt is broken by a band of braid put on in broken intervals below the knee line.

The coat is jaunty and military. It is called the West Point jacket, is fastened down the front with olive shaped satin buttons, has two short revers of satin at the hem and a straight military collar, also of satin, fastened up the front. There are two gold ornaments on each side.

Bordered Fabrics.

The return of the bordered fabric is one of the modistic occurrences on which we can generally rely each spring. The offering in some of the spring and summer goods is beautiful.

If you are contemplating a silk gown there will be shown some lovely efforts of the weaver's art. Not only are there striped effects, but plain silks can be enhanced by checked borders, bands in exquisite Persian designs and mottled flowered effects that are decidedly new.

These silks come exceptionally wide, so that the question of the skirt is practically solved. For very tall women the convenient yoke effect comes now to the rescue.

Bordure effects come now in the ever popular marquisettes and voiles, and they still are shown in ginghams and lawns. These soft materials can be made on the straight idea, the fullness gathered or tucked into the waist line.

The fact that bordered fabrics trim themselves is always attractive, because the woman who wishes a dressy frock at little expenditure of energy can have one via the bordure gown.

FACTS ABOUT THE CLEARING HOUSE

Former President of America's Great Banking Institution Tells of its History and Practical Workings.

The second monthly dinner of the Chamber of Commerce, held at the Hotel Waldorf, last night, was a distinct success from a numerical as well as a fraternal viewpoint and when Col. Charles W. Fuller had concluded his speech and President George W. Babcock had ordered an adjournment to the rooms of the chamber in the Frost building the hundred or more business men present seemed to have enthused on the subject of better municipal government and were ready to hear the address by former Mayor Alexander Gilbert on "The New York Clearing House."

The menu presented by Henry Windham was all that could have been desired and the service was perfection itself. The two principal speakers delighted the members with their views on practical work and the evening was voted one of the best yet spent by the chamber.

President Babcock in introducing Mr. Gilbert said that he believed the members were to hear something that had never been fully disclosed before and urged the members to give especial attention to the speaker, but it was remarkable how quickly the speaker gained and held the attention of the members. Mr. Gilbert was applauded for fully five minutes at the conclusion of his his speech which follows:

"The New York Clearing House association should always be spoken of with emphasis on the article The. There are many Clearing Houses in the United States, but only one that stands out prominently as The Clearing House. Originally it was intended only as a labor saving device, to accomplish the exchange of the great volume of checks, drafts and other items which accummulate in the banks of the great city as the result of each day's business, and for many years the men who formed it were very watchful and jealous lest it might develop into something more than a simple device for the accomplishment of this purpose. The fear was that in some way it might develop a power that would restrict the freedom and independence of its members. For this reason it was never incorporated. Its constitution was very simple, defining definitely its proposed purpose and the scope of its action. Amendments have been made to it from time to time suggested by various business emergencies that have arisen, until today, it is recognized as one of the most unique and powerful financial organizations in the world. Its influence extends far and wide and controls either directly or indirectly the financial operations of the whole country.

"The association is composed of 49 members and represents in capital and surplus 334 million dollars and in deposits 1400 millions, and in actual cash, principally gold, 375 millions, which is the reserve held against deposits. If you should group together all the banking institutions of the world, you could not select from among them 49 banks, including the banks of England, France and Germany, the total cash reserves of which held against deposits, would approximate the amount carried by the Banks of the New York Clearing House. The Bank of France carries about 600 millions of gold, but it is principally to secure its bank notes in circulation. Nothing is carried to secure deposits. The Bank of England carries about 200 millions in gold, but it is to secure not only its own deposits, but the deposits of all the joint stock banks of England as well. The Imperial Bank of Germany carries less than 200 millions, but like the Bank of France, this amount is largely to secure its notes in circulation. The amount of gold carried by the three great foreign banks, we could more than offset by the amount of gold held by the United States Treasury to secure its notes in circulation—nearly a thousand millions. To this could be added $5 millions held by the Comptrollers of the Currency as a 5% reserve against national bank note circulation.

"My purpose is not to institute comparisons but to emphasize the great money power of the New York Clearing House and the possibility of its becoming in time the great money power of the world. I have said that the association is composed of 49 members, this does not include the Trust Companies. I have believed and held since the panic of 1907 that the Trust Companies should be taken into full membership of the association, not only to give to the members of the Clearing House the advantages to be derived from utilizing the Clearing House to save the time, the risk, the expense that they are now subjected to in making their exchanges with the Trust Companies, but to unify, solidify and increase the banking power and influence of the Clearing House association.

"The Clearing House played a very important part during the trying period of the Civil War. The finances of the government were in a most disordered state at the outbreak of the rebellion. Its credit was at its lowest ebb. It needed money to arm and equip troops and put them in the field, and to provide a navy. The Clearing House was prompt to offer its services. It was a combination of 50 of the strongest banks in the country, welded into one great bank, laying freely at the feet of the government all its treasures, knowing that it must live or die with the government. And before the government got its machinery into operation to issue bonds and fiat money and enact revenue laws, the Clearing House banks advanced to the government many millions of dollars. And all through the continuance of the war, the necessity of being ever ready to respond to any and every call of the government, greatly increased the power and prestige of the Clearing House and caused its members to feel and realize that the association was something more than a labor saving organization—that it was charged with the performance of other and more important duties—that it was practically in its joint capacity the great central bank of the nation, and as such must exert its power whenever necessary in the interest of wise and conservative banking, and if necessary restrict the freedom and independence of any member who should depart from safe, conservative banking methods. Its power in this respect is today recognized and acquiesced in by all of its members.

"Another thing which has greatly enhanced the power and prestige of the Clearing House, is its ability to check and control panics when they occur, through the issuance of Clearing House certificates. These certificates express the joint responsibility of all the banks and the assets of all these banks are p'edged to their payment. In times of panic when bank reserves are being rapidly depleted, these certificates are issued to needy banks against a pledge of security to be used in the daily settlement of balances at the Clearing House. Ordinarily these balances are settled with gold or United States legal tender notes, but when these become scarce through any unusual withdrawal of bank reserve, the ability of the banks to make their daily settlements at the Clearing House or to accommodate their customers, is very much weakened, if not temporarily stopped. To overcome this danger, any needy Clearing House bank can take any acceptable security it may have, including commercial paper, to the Clearing House and borrow enough money to meet its requirements, which amount will be paid in Clearing House certificates. Armed with these, the bank can freely accommodate its needy customers and meet its daily settlement requirements at the Clearing House. These certificates can only be used by Clearing House members in their daily settlements at the Clearing House. They do not count in the reserves, nor are they transferable to any party not a member of the Clearing House. They have been used with great success in every panic since 1860, and in each case the effect of their issuance was almost instantaneous. The simple announcement that they were to be issued was like the tolling of a great bell proclaiming the welcome news that the Clearing House banks were prepared to take care of their worthy customers. After that a panic would have nothing to feed upon. A scarcity of currency might continue for a little while, but that is of trifling importance compared with a scarcity of banking credit. All that the business world needs to continue its orderly processes, is the assurance that banking credit is obtainable, and the Clearing House certificate is an ample guaranty of this.

"We have heard a good deal during the past few years in the line of criticism about our currency system. It has been called all sorts of hard names by scores of critics, who, having only a superficial knowledge, know no better. We have been told that it is the most barbarous system in the world, that it lacks the qualities of expansion and contraction in response to business needs, that it is a disgrace to the country and to the men who originated it. I refer to this only to fix your attention on the very important part that credit plays, and the very trifling part that currency plays in financing the colossal business volume of the nation. If you will con-

COUNTY C.E. MEETS

MISS N. K. FOOTE'S ADDRESS.

Purdy F. Benedict is Also a Speaker at Session Held at the Temple Baptist Church Last Night.

James F. Furber, editor of the Rahway News-Herald; Miss Nellie K. Foote, of Elizabeth, associate secretary of the State Christian Endeavor Union, and Purdy F. Benedict, president of the Unnion County Endeavor Unnion, were the principal speakers at the Union County Endeavor Union conference held at the Temple Baptist church, last night. There was a large attendance.

The remarks of Mr. Furber were based on the topic "The Value of Advertising." He quoted a number of prominent business men to show that to attain success one must advertise. This he said would hold good in Endeavor work as well as business. He declared that any newspaper which attacks evil will not always receive praise in return, but he asserted that the newspaper is an influence for righteousness. He gave a brief talk on his personal experience in the newspaper work in Rahway for the purpose of showing how he had been assailed, according to his version, because he attacked saloons and other alleged existing evils.

Mr. Benedict gave a concise outline of the plans for the International C. E. convention to be held at Atlantic City. Miss Foote told of the progress of Endeavor work in the State, of the many new societies being formed and of the awakened interest on the part of all Endeavorers, while Mr. Benedict spoke of the progress of the work in the county.

Following the several addresses there was an informal discussion. The conference was in charge of W. F. Davis, of Elizabeth, chairman of the press and information committee of the county union. The music was in charge of George Staats and was a feature.

GILMOUR CONFERS ON TROLLEY NEEDS

The Councilmanic Street committee held a conference with L. H. D. Gilmour, assistant counsel of the Public Service Corporation, last night, for the purpose of discussing matters pertaining to requests for the privilege of installing "Ys" at Fourth street and Watchung avenue and at West Front street and Grant avenue and also for installing a switch at Fifth and Richmond streets.

There is opposition to the proposed "Y" at Fourth street and Watchung avenue, since the plan would permit the running of the Netherwood cars through Arlington avenue, instead of running them to the business centre. The switch at Fifth and Richmond streets is favored for the reason that it would prevent the tedious dalays occasioned at present, often making patrons lose their trains both at the North Avenue and Netherwood stations. So far as known there is no opposition to the "Y" at West Front street and Grant avenue. This would help the company to get its cars out early in the morning and would enable it to operate single end trolleys in the city.

Mr. Gilmour explained in detail these proposed improvements but no promises were made on either side.

The committee also discussed at some length street matters in general and proposed improvements to be made this year. A considerable amount of repair work must be done this year to put the streets in good condition.

BRYAN POKES FUN AT HIS FRIEND JIM

When Senator Martine met Colonel William J. Bryan for the first time since the former's election, the Nebraskan was very anxious to know the state of health of the junior New Jersey Senator.

"I'm feeling splendidly," exclaimed Mr. Martine in answer to the Colonel. "I have had some little trouble with my ears and for a time my hearing was somewhat impaired. I am thankful that this trouble is nearly over, for now but one ear is slightly deaf."

"Oh, that won't bother you any, Senator," commented Colonel Bryan; "you never could hear but one side anyway."

MISS. MARY BLIMM DIED THIS MORNING

Mrs. Mary Blimm, aged forty-six years, wife of Joseph C. Blimm, died at 3 o'clock this morning at her home on Darrow avenue, following an illness of ten days, which began with indigestion and developed into septic pneumonia, causing her death.

Mrs. Blimm was born in New York city. Her maiden name was Mary Lehman and she was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Julius Lehman, of that place. She had been a resident of this city since her marriage twenty years ago. Mrs. Blimm was a member of St. Mary's church. She was esteemed for her many excellent qualities and she had a great many friends both here and in New York. Beside a husband, Joseph C. Blimm, who is engaged in the grocery business on East Third street, she is survived by three children, Gertrude, Mary and Elmer Blimm; also one sister, Mrs. Ella Schenck, of Columbus, Ohio.

The funeral will be held at St. Mary's church Monday morning at 9 o'clock, when a solemn requiem mass will be held. The burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

IMAGINES THAT SHE IS CHIEF OF POLICE

Through strategy this morning, Chief of Police Kiely managed to induce Lucy Ann Thompson, a colored woman, to come out of her barred home and today she will be committed to the State Insane Asylum at Morris Plains. The woman has an acute form of mania recently developed. She imagines that she is wealthy and can order the police and other city officials to do her bidding and in an effort to follow her inclinations has kept the telephone wires hot for the past three days.

Fearing an attack from an unseen enemy she barricaded her home and even her husband and one son were unable to gain entrance. This morning Chief Kiely called the woman up and told her that her son had been arrested and that she was wanted in court to bail him out. Mrs. Thompson started to leave the house, but changed her mind suddenly and refused to budge. Later Patrolman Saunders managed to get inside the house and with him Detective Flynn and a patrolman coaxed the woman out and into the waiting patrol wagon.

Overseer of the Poor Alexander Ayres had already prepared commitment papers and shortly after noon Mrs. Thompson was taken to the asylum in an automobile by Chief Kiely.

When it was first known that Mrs. Thompson was acting queerly City Physician C. F. Lufburrow and Dr. Albert Pittis were called by Mr. Ayres. It took them two days to gain entrance to the house and when they had examined the woman they pronounced her insane. Money appears to be the chief worry of the unfortunate woman. She imagines that she is being hounded by people who want to defraud her. When asked this morning what she thought of the people around her she replied that she believed they were trying to rob her and wanted police protection.

Mrs. Thompson is the wife of an expressman well known in this city and has always conducted herself with propriety. The trouble has caused Mr. Thompson much grief, but he believes that restraint is necessary.

GUARDING HEALTH

Local Board Will Act on Some Proposed Ordinances Tonight.

TO COOP UP THE CHICKENS.

Fine For Expectorating On Street—Change In Barbers' Ordinance—To Make the Trolley Cars Sanitary.

The Plainfield Board of Health at its monthly meeting tonight will adopt a new ordinance prohibiting expectorating on the sidewalks or in any public conveyance or building, and providing a fine of $10 for violations. Any trolley conductor, janitor of a building or in fact any person who fails to report a violation of the ordinance will be subject to a fine of $5. The new ordinance is proposed because the old one is not strict enough and complaints have been made concerning infractions of the law.

Another important ordinance to be adopted will provide for the care and keeping of chickens within the city limits. The ordinance will include among other provisions that chickens cannot be kept within twenty-five feet of any dwelling nor within ten feet of any party line and it will also compel owners of chickens to get a yearly permit for keeping chickens for which $1 will be charged. It will also prohibit allowing chickens to run at large.

The ordinance covering barber shops will also be amended to take in manicuring parlors, chiropodists, etc., and the yearly license fee will be $1. Heretofore barbers have paid an annual license of $2. The board also proposes to compel the trolley company to enforce the provisions relating to keeping cars sanitary.

MRS. GRACE GEORGE COMING ON MAY 6

Miss Grace George will present her latest success, "Sauce For the Goose," a comedy by Geraldine Bonner and Hutchinson Boyd, in which she has been touring the country with great success, at the Plainfield theatre on Saturday, May 6, matinee and evening.

This is the attraction selected by William A. Brady for the opening of his new theatre, "The Playhouse," on Saturday, April 15. Miss George interrupting her tour to inaugurate the new theatre.

The scenes of "Sauce for the Goose" are laid in New York city. Miss George plays the role of "Kitty Constable," a young wife, whose literary inclinations are not altogether appreciated. In "Kitty Constable" Miss George is said to have a role which admirably suits her peculiar attainments. She is up to the minute in repartee and her keen sense of humor and her general cleverness is something to be admired. The play will be staged with special care.

MISS MABEL PETERSON WEDS DANIEL PIERCE.

Miss Mabel C. Peterson and Daniel Luke Pierce were married at 8:30 o'clock last night by Rev. F. D. Tildon at the home of the bride's parents on Berckman street. More than a hundred guests from Brooklyn, Newark and New York city were present.

REPORTS AT HOPE

West End Chapel Has Had Another Prosperous Twelve Months.

594 IN THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Review of the Work in Various Departments—Discuss Envelope Contributions—May Discontinue Fairs.

The annual congregational business meeting of Hope chapel was held last night at the chapel, Rev. Frederick L. Greene, pastor, acted as moderator and Frank Rimmer as secretary. William Baker and Walter I. Firstbrook were elected members of the ways and means committee; Willard H. Cook, church treasurer and his assistant, William Baker, Walter I. Firstbrook, Alexander Doig and Harry Keen were re-elected.

A recommendation in the report of the ways and means committee for a pledge card system of contributions, exclusive of church and Sunday-school offerings, when through the necessity of fairs, entertainments, etc., would be eliminated, provoked much discussion. It was decided to refer the matter to a committee comprising the church treasurer, his assistant and the ways and means committee and have a special report in the near future.

Rev. Mr. Greene did not submit a formal report of the church membership owing to a lack of familiarity with church conditions. A report will be published in the May issue of the Crescent Avenue church Messenger.

Willard H. Cook, church treasurer, presented a concise report showing the total amount raised during the year to be $1,857.49, with expenditures of $1,847.13, leaving a balance March 31 of $10.36. Donald McInnes, chairman, presented the report for the ways and means committee. It reviewed the work of the year; also calling attention to the improvements incluing the painting and general repair of the chapel and provision for new floor covering.

Dr. David G. Atwood, secretary of the Sunday-school, in the report emphasized the work which chapel members are doing as teachers in the upbuilding of the work of the Sunday-school. The present membership is 594, divided as follows: Officers and teachers, 51; senior department, 212; intermediate, 177; junior, 39; primary, 69; beginners, 46; Home department, 167; cradle roll, 43, making a total of 804 on the roll. The average attendance for the year was 286.

The report for the library committee was presented by Alexander Doig. It showed that 137 members availed themselves of the library privileges and that 490 books had been circulated. Frank Rimmer, Sunday-school treasurer, reported receipts of $738.77 and disbursements of $704.43.

Mrs. W. H. Cook reporting for the Home department, stated that Mrs. Frederick L. Greene, would be the superintendent during the coming year. The department with 167 members, contributed $157.33 to the Sunday-school. The treasurer's report for the Ladies' Aid Society, presented by Mrs. Charles Hughes, showed that $268.18 had been raised and $259.09 disbursed, leaving a balance of $9.09.

Mrs. Joseph Brown, treasurer for the Women's Missionary Society, reported receipts of $101.54 and disbursements of $79.44, with a balance of $22.10. Charles G. August, leader of the Junior Boys' Club, reported receipts of $80.09, and the redemption of the pledge of $25 for church support. This is one of the youngest and most active organizations in the chapel. John Slorah reported for the William N. Runyon Bible Class Association. The Men's Club report was read by Walter I. Firstbrook, showing receipts to be $163, disbursements, $112 and a balance of $51. Alexander Doig reported receipts for Christian Endeavor Society to be $79.59, expenditures $67.58, with a balance of $12.04.

Thomas Gibson Hendry, chairman of the excursion committee, reported a balance of $175. Miss Grace Cowlay reported for the Junior C. E. Society and there were also encouraging reports from the Young Men's Club and the Boys' Club.

Recovers Wages.

The suit brought by Morris Pelzman against Max Weinthrob to recover alleged wages due, was decided by Judge William Newcorn, in the District Court yesterday afternoon. Pelzman recovered $9 for actual work done. Harry C. Runyon represented the plaintiff and Francis J. Blatz, the defendant.

Mrs. Elmore D. Moffett, of Orchard place, has returned from a visit with her daughter, Mrs. W. H. Tams, of Trenton.

BLAZE IN EAST END

Jos. Harrigan's Hay Storage Barn Fire Does $2,500 Damage.

LOCOMOTIVE'S SPARK CAUSED IT

No. 4 Apparatus Actually on the Scene and Netherwood Has its First Real Excitement in Many Months.

The Netherwood section was aroused from its winter lithargy at 7:30 this morning by the breaking out of a fire in Joseph Harrigan's storage barn on South avenue. Sparks from a passing locomotive on the Jersey Central are supposed to have gotten through an open upper door into bales of hay and also into a wagon load of the same fodder standing in the yard. The damage will figure up to something like $2,500.

The fire in itself wasn't so much but the smoke made by the dried grass packages caused the hill-top people to forget all social and business obligations. They broke away from boudoirs and breakfast tables and only hit the high spots getting to the scene. Inside of five minutes there were more men bossing the extinguishing job than there are places Dorothy Arnold was last heard from. They forgot that time, tide and railroad trains wait for no one in their eagerness to explain how the vamps used to do it up in Pine Bush, N. Y., or Kreischerville, S. I., and most of them got to their Manhattan desks an hour late. The sad part of this was the fact that Chief Doane or his assistants didn't seem to care for the brokers' opinions.

The women were on hand, too. There were groups of them on porches, terraces and sidewalks. When the fire was over, they were not fully acquainted with the main points about its origin, etc., but they did know when the next tea is going to be held and were full of information about new Easter fashions. It was a grand success as a talk-fest.

The fire was first discovered by George Leorsch, an employe, who had been loading the hay bales. He turned in an alarm from box 28, while Joe Harrigan telephoned downtown to the Elks and Moose headquarters. He explained his action by asking of what use is it to belong to lodges if the brothers can't lend a helping hand in time of need. The combined forces got busy in a jiffy and the flames were quickly gotten under control. The building was practically destroyed. The department was kept at work until noon getting the hay out.

The Netherwood residents were awfully proud of the No. 4 apparatus. It got out on a run and beat the headquarters rigs to the scene. They had a stream of water going several minutes before the others arrived. Several of the largest taxpayers congratulated Chief Doane and promised their support to secure a new team for Netherwood every week instead of once a month. Chief Doane indignantly denied the report that No. 4's horses had to be coaxed to and from the fire with handfuls of lump sugar.

In estimating the damage, Mr. Harrigan said the loss on contents would aggregate $1,500 and the building $1,000. The structure was of wood covered by corrugated iron and very little of it is left. There were about 1,000 bales of hay inside and the firemen pulled every bit of it out.

DECEMBER GRAND JURY CONSIDERING SHORTAGE CASE

The Somerset county December grand jury reconvened at Somerville today for the purpose of again taking up the case of John D. Burnman, former custodian of Warren township school funds who is accused of being short $3,250. Eighteen witnesses were in court today and the taking of testimony will probably continue until tomorrow. An expert has been going over the accounts and his report has been presented to the jury.

It is understood that Alvah A. Clark, counsel for Mr. Burnman, offered Saturday night to make a settlement for $2,500, but the board refused it.

Mrs. Charles Hill.

Mrs. Ethel May Hill, wife of Charles Hill, died yesterday afternoon at her home on Pearl street, after a lingering illness. She was the daughter of Mrs. Josephine Waldron, also of Pearl street, and was twenty-six years old. Beside her mother and husband she is survived by two children, also several brothers and sisters, all living in the borough. The funeral will be held at her late home, Sunday noon, and burial will be in the cemetery at Springdale.

HULSKAMPER IS NAMED CUSTODIAN

Elizabeth, April 7.—William Hulskamper, who has been custodian of the County Court House for many years, was reappointed by the Board of Freeholders yesterday afternoon for a three-year term. Mr. Hulskamper is widely known in this city and is connected with numerous organizations. Frank B. Davies, who succeeded Benjamin King, as clerk of the Board of Freeholders, sent in his resignation yesterday, which was accepted. Mr. Davies' successor was not appointed, but it is understood that the appointee will be Dr. Rowe, of Summit.

There was a big delegation of Westfield avenue residents at the meeting of the board yesterday afternoon. They came to protest against the unsightly and worn condition of this thoroughfare which was taken over by the county from the city several years ago. It is used by many autoists going to Philadelphia and New York and is subject to much wear. In one summer piles of dust make the lives of the residents along the street miserable, while in the winter it is almost impassable. For a long time complaints have been made to the board by residents but nothing came of it, and lately the property owners decided to make personal protests. Samuel Koostler, a lawyer residing in the street, made a formal plea to the board.

At yesterday's meeting S. T. Jones, a wealthy property owner, Mr. Koestler and others objected to the condition of the thoroughfare. Mr. Jones said no money had been spent on the street for a period of ten years and he suggested that the money that should have been spent on it in the past should be expended for repairs now.

He was assured that the county road committee and the county attorney would look into the matter and endeavor to improve conditions.

Beat Districting Bill.

Trenton, April 7.—It is believed there will be no districting of Essex county for the purpose of electing the new small board of nine freeholders which takes control of the county next year. This belief is based on the fact that in the House yesterday, a bill by Mr. McGowan providing for the district plan was beaten by a vote of 32 to 11.

A STUDY OF NAPOLEON.

Interesting and exhaustive studies have been made in France of Napoleon's chirography. When a young man Napoleon did not have a bad hand, although, like some other great men, he could never learn to spell. When he was an artillery officer his writing was simple and legible, as his life was simple and direct. But when the Corsican Captain Bonaparte distinguished himself at the siege of Toulon and became the French General Bonaparte his writing took on what has been called "a furious illegibility."

Curiously enough, from that time there seems to have been a gradual degeneration until, profoundly discouraged and utterly humiliated, he scratched an undecipherable, misspelled scrawl of submission to the prince regent on July 14, 1815.

It is said that this change from a simple to a confused writing began at a certain date—namely, with a report, skillfully garbled, of the part he took in what Carlyle called the "whiff of grapeshot that spoke from the steps of St. Roch on the 13th Vendemaire" (Oct. 5, 1795).

The culminating eccentricity of his tortuous strokes of the pen was exhibited in the letter P. This showed plainly the mental changes of the man who would unhesitatingly declare war against the first comer, who would divorce the wife he loved, who would propose a kingdom of Haiti for Louis XVIII., who would freeze nearly a million men upon the steppes of Russia. This letter P became of strange and abnormal form. It was excessively developed. For twenty years the great general used this extravagant and, according to the investigators, accusing letter, especially noticeable in his later unroyal signature, NP.—Harper's Weekly.

FORETOLD BY DREAMS.

Two Remarkable Cases In Which Sleep Warnings Came True.

"I dreamed that the ship was in a heavy sea, that a big wave came over her bows, pressed down upon her, and then she rolled over on her starboard side and disappeared."

This is not an extract from a story. It is evidence, given on oath, during the inquiry at London into the mysterious disappearance of the Waratah, the vessel which, on her second voyage, mysteriously disappeared in July, 1909, and has never been heard of since. And so impressed was the passenger with the vision that he left the vessel at Durban, from which point she continued on her ill fated voyage. Thus one more was added to the extraordinary coincidences in which dreams have figured.

The third Lord Waterford was able to verify a story of an extraordinary dream coming true. Talking one day with the landlord of the inn in the village close to Curraghmore, a man rushed up and said there had been a murder on the hills. "Then it must be the little one," said the landlord, at which Lord Waterford, not unnaturally, became very suspicious. The landlord proceeded to explain that in the night he dreamed that two men had come to the inn and that the taller of the two had murdered the shorter with a very curious knife.

He told his dream to his wife, who laughed at him. But, to his horror, the men he had seen while asleep came to the inn, and one used the curious knife to cut up his food. They left, and soon afterward news of the murder arrived. Search was made for a tall man answering to the landlord's description, and one was quickly arrested. In prison he confessed he had murdered his short companion.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Cowboy's Handkerchief.

"Have you ever wondered why the cowboy pictures by painters who have made a study of western life depict the man of the plains with his red bandanna halfway down on his chest instead of fitting snugly around his neck?" queried a ranch owner of California.

"I'll tell you. When a cowboy starts on a long ride over the plains one of his principal annoyances is having to wipe dust from his eyes. His heavy gauntlets make it impossible to use his hands, and he ties his handkerchief loosely around his neck and when occasion requires uses it to clear his eyes. It is the most convenient place to carry the handkerchief while riding a horse."—Washington Post.

They Help the Justices.

Each United States supreme court justice has a body servant assigned to him, and this servitor is a sore trial to many. The body servants, now called "messengers," descend from justice to justice. Several are old men. Their usual attitude toward their particular justices is that of tutor toward pupil. They dictate in all matters of etiquette and are generally bothersome. But there's no getting rid of them. They're an institution having precedent.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Her Scrap Book.

"Do you keep a scrap book, Mrs. Rowdy?" asked her friend, Mrs. McGuffey, apropos of nothing in particular.

"Well, in a sort of way," said Mrs. Rowdy. "I keep a diary and whenever Mr. Rowdy and I have a tiff I make a note of it."—Judge.

Great Error.

"My hero dies in the middle of my latest novel," said the young author.

"That's a grave mistake," replied the editor. "He should not die before the reader does."—Atlanta Constitution.

No Cheap Electricity.

Trenton, April 7.—The Donnelly bill to reduce the price of electricity from ten cents a kilowatt hour to eight cents a kilowatt hour was beaten in the House. Burke, of Morris, spoke against the measure, on the ground that the question should be left to the Public Utilities Commission. Donnelly made a long speech in support of the bill. Whyte, of Camden, who is an electrical expert, said it was impossible for anybody to fix a general price for electricity. Democratic Leader Matthews, Republican Leader McCran and several others argued that the regulation of the rates should be left to the Public Utilities Commission. The bill was defeated by 29 to 15.

No Sunday Games.

Trenton, April 7.—Senator Osborne's bill legalizing Sunday games in the playgrounds was defeated in the Senate yesterday afternoon by a vote of 9 to 4. Mr. Osborne's strong plea for the measure had little impression.

GOLF.

"Now that Robert Andrew has decided to go to America," says "Golf Illustrated," "the West of Scotland loses one of the finest players it has ever produced. He sails on April 8 for New Haven, Conn. Once he gets acclimated he will show golfers across the Atlantic what a 'real natural golfer' means. Bob has often been called one of the worst of putters, yet he is really one of the best, especially at a long run-up with his famous 'gold-plated' putting cleek. At times he misses some very short puts, but he has a happy knack of holing when it is most wanted. Perhaps his best shot is the approach with either mashie or iron. He pitches the ball well up to the hole, but unlike most good 'pitchers' he plays with very slack wrists and never tries to put cut on.

"The ball flies away slowly and comes down like a 'flat stane;' there is little run on the ball. His swing is very free and loose, and he drives a very long ball. He is a moody golfer, and on one of his happy days it is a treat to watch him. Scotland has lost a really first class player, a good fellow and a 'gowfer' who loved and respected all the traditions of the game. He was born in Prestwick, where golf is almost taken in with the feeding bottle; the clank of the 'gowfers' shoon' is heard on the streets, and we fancy that Mr. Andrew will be escorted to the station by the whole burg, anxious to give 'Wee Bobbie' a hearty send-off and wish him good luck in the land of the hustler.

"A bronze medal is the best that Andrew can show for his amateur championship appearances, but in international golf he has been singularly successful. He has represented Scotland against England on five occasions, and in these matches he has an unbroken record."

BASEBALL.

Baseball fans will be interested in a game to be played at Westfield tomorrow between the Troy, New York State League club, and a team made up of Plainfield and Westfield players. The Troy club is getting its spring practice at Westfield and tomorrow's contest has been arranged to assist the men in rounding into form for the summer. Jimmie Montross and Lou Dixon will be the battery for Westfield; Brit. Martin will play second base, Emery will cover third base and Adam Schott will be in left field. The rest of the positions will be taken by Westfield players.

RIGHT TYPE OF SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER TOLD

About forty of the officers and teachers of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school attended the teachers' conference in the church last evening and listened with much interest to an address made by Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church.

Mr. Mathiews' topic was "The Right Kind of Teacher" and he showed those present how interesting is the soul of teaching and how reverence for the Bible is a process of growth. After the address refreshments were served in the Primary room by Philip A. Vroom's class and following this a round table was presided over by Mr. Mathiews.

MEDICAL ASSOCIATION HAS ANNUAL MEETING

Corbusier; secretary and treasurer, Dr. G. T. Longbothum.

At the conclusion of the dinner an interesting paper on the "Thyroid Gland" was read by Dr. John Rogers, of New York, who is connected with the Cornell University medical school. The paper was followed by a general discussion.

Children at Theatre.

Trenton, April 7.—Senate bill No. 40, preventing the admission of children to any dance hall, concert saloon or theatre without consent of parents or guardian, passed the House yesterday after being amended. Changed in the Senate, so as to affect children under fourteen years old, the bill was amended in the House, so that the age limit was put back to sixteen years. Leader Matthews, of the majority, in urging the adoption of the bill, said that a majority of the ministers of the State had approved the House amendment. The measure now goes back to the Senate for concurrence on the amendment.

Number 3

THE IMITATORS

Many little pressing tailor shops claim to do Dry Cleaning. These are the magicians. These the people who simply take in your clothes, brush out the dust, remove such spots as they can, pressing fairly well. Your clothing is then sent home and after a few days the spots reappear. You naturally condemn Dry Cleaning, when in truth your garments have only been sponged and pressed.

You should send your clothes here. We dust them properly, having the right equipment. Then we put your garments in just the right bath for their special needs, depending upon condition, texture, etc. Drying and airing after cleaning is accomplished here under the most sanitary and perfect conditions.

Send your next work to us—if you appreciate quality.

NEW HOUSE BILLS.

Ford Has One Providing For Boxing Entertainments.

Trenton, April 7.—Assemblyman Ford, of Hudson, introduced a bill yesterday afternoon to amend the crimes act so that any athletic club or association of three incorporators may give boxing entertainments solely for the purpose of showing the act of boxing as a physical culture exercise and how to defend oneself.

Assemblyman Griffin offered a bill to abolish the office of State editor of reports, a place created at the instance of former Governor Fort three years ago and now held by Thomas B. Holmes, editor of a Trenton newspaper, at a salary of $2,000 annually.

Other bills introduced yesterday:

Mr. Ramsay—Extends the time two years for the completion of water-works and the laying of water mains.

Mr. Martin—Fixes salaries in any town of 20,000 population or over of members of Town Council at $500 per annum.

Mr. Boettner—Provides that all foreign fraternal organizations doing business in this State shall designate as their attorney the banking and insurance commissioner for the purpose of serving process against such corporations.

THE CLEARING HOUSE

sult statistics, you will find that the Clearing House exchanges for the whole United States during 1910, amounted to 160 billions of dollars, which is a pretty accurate measure of the business volume of the country for 1910. Surely the amount of business done on a currency basis would not increase the total volume more than 5%. Now, if 95% of the credit instruments used in the business transactions of the country contract and expand in response to the business requirements of the country—surely it is not a very serious matter if, occasionally, the 700 millions of National Bank fail to so respond.

"It is not my purpose to discuss the currency question, but to set clearly before you the relation of the New York Clearing House association to the great volume of commercial and banking credit represented by the clearances of the country. This colossal superstructure of credit practically rests upon the banking reserve of the New York Clearing House association, and the Clearing House association is charged with the responsible duty of protecting and wisely using that reserve, in order that the credit volume of the country would at all times rest upon a stable foundation. During the panic of 1907, the volume of credit flowing daily through the New York Clearing House for settlement, amounted to 230 millions of dollars, and through the issuance of Clearing House loan certificates, the settlements were made promptly and quietly without any interruption to the business of the country. Had there been any interruption to these daily settlements from any cause whatever, the credit operations of the country would have been seriously disorganized and crippled."

President Babcock introduced Col. Fuller, who spoke in part as follows: "Anybody, no matter where he lives, who receives an invitation from the Plainfield Chamber of Commerce should feel complimented. I do, and believe that this feeling predominates among others who have accepted your invitations. We are passing through an age frought with problems of deep concern to the whole country and while we are prone to belittle the crises as they come before us because we feel that we are so big, yet I would suggest to you that it behooves us as a people to go carefully.

"We are waxing strong and fat and we are getting over-confident so much so that we are tempted to rush headlong into things which on more sober thought we would hesitate to do. We should be not halting but steady. Let us weigh carefully the things which confront us and think carefully over the problems as they present themselves and it is sure to happen later that our soberer judgment will prove its worth.

"The commission form of government looks good to me and it may be the solution of many of the defects which we seem to have today. We must look carefully ahead before we make any sweeping changes. The initiative, referendum and recall may lay claim to some virtues, but there are other claims more vitally arraigned against them and any change in our present governing laws demands careful study.

"I would suggest to you that everyone here get a copy of the Record- Geran bill and study it with care. This bill changes some of our cherished functions as freemen and I would urge you to not jump too hastily nor let your representatives in the House saddle upon you something that you do not want.

At the business session of the chamber applications for membership were presented from the following, all of whom were elected: W. F. Arnold, Dr. P. J. Zeglio, Charles H. Russell, W. R. Codington, Lawrence C. Whitall, Edward C. Hardingham, Francis J. Blatz, H. H. Pond, Arthur L. Case, S. Scheuer & Co., W. A. Woodruff & Son, F. W. Woolworth & Co., Daniel F. Dugan, Endress Company, Jeremiah D. Van Winkle, Jr., William Roth, W. R. Townsend, Arthur E. Smith, Louis Steigman, David T. Kenney, Philip E. Thompson; William Newcorn, Leo Slonim, George Wiegand, M. T. Gano, Duncan W. Taylor, Dr. Richard Moldenke.

SHIRT WAIST SUITS.

Spring Is at Hand, and It Is Then That Fabrics For These Garments Can Be Obtained at Lowest Prices.

The time to sew for the summer is in the spring, before the warm days come and while buying and constructing are not made difficult on account of a quick need and a disinclination to sew. Remnants of linen and gingham are always to be purchased, special sales are always exploiting new fabrics, and now that the styles have been decided upon the stitch in time saves worriment in the coming days.

The one piece frock is a boon to every one. It is put on in the time that it requires to adjust a blouse. There are no unsightly gaps at the waist line; there is a comforting feeling of completeness in the whole costume, and when built on the conservative lines of the season's styles the cost is little.

Dotted and striped fabrics are much in vogue, while combinations of plain and figured goods are still friendly to the buyer of remnants.

Stitched bands are shown on the suit in our illustration. The natural colored linen is relieved at the neck by a guimpe of tucked white batiste or sheer linen. A two inch band outlines the dropped yoke, and two tortoise shell buttons at the yoke and belt give a new effect. Plaits over the shoulders are stitched, as are the turned back cuffs, the belt and the band on the skirt. Subcuffs of white lengthen the sleeves. The whole costume is practical and distinctive. It can be copied in any plain chambray, gingham or silk.

More ornate, yet practical, is another suggestion—for white, linen. Heavy lace—Irish, if you have it—is used for the shallow yoke and cuffs. A collar of hand tucked handkerchief linen is worn with this. Washable braid and crocheted buttons give a charming decoration at one side over a strip of lace. The belt is pointed in two places on the upper edge. The straight skirt is perfectly plain, fitted around the hips. At the back there is a hanging panel to give a flat effect.

Striped gingham for the seashore, for instance, is appropriate for a sailor. White pique forms the sailor collar, or if the material be in two tones of one color the lighter shade is a good one to choose. Plain gingham is used for the straight, narrow belt, cuffs and two bands on the skirt. It also covers molds to decorate the front. The collar, by the way, is made on a guimpe and is of thin hemstitched linen. It would be sensible to make two or three guimpes with one dress.

A barred gingham in blue and white, trimmed with plain blue gingham of a darker shade, will appeal to all. The skirt is circular, and the bodice is made on the regular kimono blouse pattern. Broad bands of plain material are crossed in front and back, hooking at the belt and adjusted after the dress is on. The collarless guimpe and subcuff are of plain white linen or lawn. A band of plain blue is placed on the skirt at about the knees.

Every one is practical, and all are becoming.

For the Tea Table.

A novelty to serve instead of candy at afternoon tea is made from figs stuffed with chopped nuts and a fresh marshmallow. The figs are first soaked in brandy—or sherry, if preferred—for half a day, then pulled apart and each half lined with the nut and pulled around the marshmallow to make a round ball.

The only drawback to this delicious confection is that it is somewhat "smeary" to eat.

THE ART OF DRESSING.

To Be Well Groomed a Woman Must Take Pains In Putting on Her Clothes.

A girl is never well dressed unless her clothes are put on carefully. More than the material or style is required for smartness. Given trigness, a gingham may look infinitely better than brocade.

Men's linen collars, as a rule, fit better than do those worn by women because the latter do not always understand the essentials of correct neckwear. High turnovers should be almost as close together on the lower edge as they are up by the neck. To have the outer or embroidered side spread like an inverted V toward the bottom will take away all smartness of effect about the neck. It is this characteristic of standing high and close that men refer to when they say a collar "sits well."

Strange to say, women's seldom do.

If a string tie is worn the bow should be just at the base of the front tips and the loops and ends should be short and square. When a four-in-hand, whether wide or narrow, is chosen the knot must fit up under the collar tips a trifle; otherwise there will be a tendency to fall away, which is very homely.

When a stickpin is used it is put just below the knot and part of the pin itself is exposed, the actual point being thrust in again.

When a wash blouse is being worn it must be trigly and even tightly pulled down into the dress belt. Blousing at the back will make a woman appear round shouldered, even though in reality she may be erect. Hooks on the waist and eyes on the skirt have never been surpassed for holding these garments together, but long black headed pins form a most excellent substitute. The pins should be at least three inches. They are much better for the purpose than safety pins.

A not uncommon form of carelessness in even the best dressed woman is seen when hooks and eyes are not tightly sewed on. The result is that the two edges intended to come closely together fail to do so, and the finish is spoiled. It is not that either of the fastenings is entirely off, but that the stitches holding the top of the hooks are gone. Both these and the eyes must be as tightly sewed at the top as they are in the loops.

Turkish Mats.

If you are the lucky possessor of a Turkey rug or mat don't allow it to wear into holes without trying to remedy matters. Go to an upholsterer and ask him to give you a small bundle of odd pieces of wool and a suitable needle. Then when you find a weak spot go down on your knees and darn the place, of course matching the wools as closely as possible.

It is really astonishing what good results one gets. A Turkey carpet which would have been worn out years ago by putting a stitch here and there whenever required looks quite presentable and will last for some time.

PLAITED SKIRTS REVIVED.

The plaited skirt is coming back. We may turn to the figure revealing lines of the directoire or to the scant, uncomfortable "hobble," but we always return to our first love, the graceful plaited model. And no wonder. What is more becoming, after all, than the moderate skirt, full enough that one may step easily and yet not reveal one's figure ungracefully? Many modifications are shown in the models displayed. The tunic effect is still popular. The underskirt is of the plain material which is used on the blouse. Deep yoke effects, which also give the appearance of the tunic, are popular, while the wide band at the skirt bottom, known as the "washerwoman's hem," are noticeable features of the new skirts. American makers are devoting their attention almost exclusively to skirts of this design, and, while they may not be seen at present to any extent on the street, their return is assured.

SUMMER HATS.

No Change In Shape From Winter Models.

Wide Range of Materials, However, Offers Opportunities For Charming Effects — Trimming at the Back Still In Favor.

As far as the eye can reach there is no especial change to be seen in summer millinery from what we have worn all winter except in the materials. The enveloping crown is to remain the fashion. You may have heard somebody whisper that hats were to be raised on the head by the addition of a bandeau. This whisper was premature.

The new straws for hats are exceptionally charming. A hat on exhibition in one of the fashionable shops is striped black and white. These stripes are a distinct novelty and will be possibly overdone by the time July arrives, but we have not lost faith in the fact that great popularity kills itself since the Pierrot hat has held its own for a year. At least, the stripes will be a relief from the usual plain straw, which we have had with us for so many summers.

This hat is intended for the young girl, although we shall probably see it on the stout middle aged lady as soon as the fashion is established. It is worn well over one temple and ear, has a band of black velvet below the edge of brim, a pump bow of velvet at the side and a large flat bow with a colored fantasie at the back.

It may be well to emphasize the fact that this trimming at the back continues in favor. A good deal of fun was made of it at the beginning of its reign, and it cannot yet win the approval of those who are artistic, but as a fashion it has won out, and therefore there is no use going against it.

Our illustration shows the new sailor hat, which is half velvet and half straw. It is safe to say that this model will prove a trifle heavy when the really hot weather comes down on us, but it is a pleasant compromise between the summer and winter and can be fitly worn through the spring. The straw is pink and the velvet black, while the shower aigret at the back is white tipped with black.

A very attractive model is a modified poke bonnet which might be extreme any other season, but is quite demure now. It is made of fine French cretonne, the colors being pink and mauve on a golden tan background. There is an edge of heavy lace around the brim to soften the effect at the face.

The trimming is of two bands of pink and mauve satin with clusters of pink roses and green leaves arranged over each ear. At one side there are streamers of pink and mauve ribbon.

A New Button.

The enameled button which has become so much the vogue has really reached artistic merit. It is strange how the pendulum of fashion swings around. These buttons that were in such high favor in other days have come into their own again, and deservedly so, for they are infinitely more beautiful than buttons of any other design. One sees them in the palest of green and gold enamel, rimmed with cut steel pearls, silver and chased gold.

A COZY ROOM.

In hanging curtains it is well to remember that the simplest way of hanging is best. Straight lines from the poles or tied back without looping gives an infinitely better effect than if they are caught up in some fancy way.

Curtains, more than anything else, add to or take away from the cozy effect of the home. A woman of taste whose home is noted for its "homey atmosphere" has just had her sun parlor re-hung with curtains of coarse ecru scrim with a pattern of squares an inch in size. The wicker furniture which is used on the open porch in summer has been fitted for winter use in this parlor by means of deep blue cushions. A blue and ecru rug covers the floors, carrying out the color scheme.

A TOILET ECONOMY.

The particular hostess now uses individual pieces of soap in her guest room and gives to each new guest a fresh piece. Where such entertaining is done this means numerous odds and ends of fine soap.

One woman has hit upon the plan of using this for the children in a wire soap shaker such as are found for dishwashing. The tiniest piece can be utilized. A basin is filled with warm water and the shaker agitated until a thick lather is formed.

Another way to use up small pieces of fine soap is to put them into small cheesecloth bags and use as one would a bran or almond meal bag.

For Schoolgirls.

Many of the new materials are shared by the schoolgirl of today with her grown-up sisters. The striped serges, the dainty shirt flannels, and the woolback satins are all made useful by the schoolroom damsel.

ERRORS IN WILLS.

Two Famous Lawyers Whose Testaments Were Defective.

TILDEN'S CURIOUS BLUNDER.

Loosely Drawn Stipulations That Invalidated His Charitable Trust Bequest—President Polk's Will, Written by Himself, Nullified.

Whether the old saying that "a lawyer who tries his own case has a fool for a client" is applicable to Samuel J. Tilden in the matter of drawing his will is not known. It was thought for some time that the will was drawn, or at least approved, by Charles O'Conor and James C. Carter, two of the most eminent lawyers in New York, but later statements, says Case and Comment, are to the effect that they had nothing at all to do with the will, and consequently it is not definitely known who was responsible for it.

It would hardly seem possible that Mr. Tilden himself could have made such a mistake had he been acting for some one else. The statement has been made that Mr. Tilden had some doubts as to the validity of those clauses which the court subsequently condemned and had spoken to Mr. Carter about it, but nothing more came of it.

In summing up the provisions of the Tilden will the court in holding it invalid stated that the testator in substance said: "I have determined to devote my estate to charitable, educational and scientific purposes. I have formed no detailed plan how that purpose can be executed, but under the law of New York it must be done through and by means of a corporation. I request you to cause to be incorporated an institution to be called the 'Tilden trust,' with capacity to maintain a free library and reading room in the city of New York, and such other educational and scientific objects as you shall designate, and if you deem it expedient—that is, if you think it advisable and the fit and proper thing to do—convey to that institution all or such part of my residuary estate as you choose, and if you do not think that course advisable then apply it to such charitable, educational and scientific purposes as in your judgment will most substantially benefit mankind."

It will be noted that the discretion of the trustees was indefinite both as to the amount which they were to give to the corporation to be formed and also as to whether they should give any at all to the incorporation, and the validity of the bequest was denied upon the ground of this complete discretionary power to convey or not to convey to the suggested beneficiary.

The trustees procured the incorporation of the "Tilden trust" and elected to convey to it the entire property, but the court held that the invalidity of the charitable trust because of its uncertainty could not be cured by anything done by the trustees to execute it.

In striking contrast with the Tilden will is that of his contemporary in law and politics, Roscoe Conkling, the text of which is as follows: "I, Roscoe Conkling of Utica, make, publish and declare my last will and testament as follows: I give, devise and bequeath to my wife Julia and to her heirs and assigns forever all my property and estate, whether real or mixed, and I constitute and appoint my said wife sole executrix of this my last will." It would undoubtedly take a better lawyer than even Mr. Conkling to break his will.

In passing upon the validity of the will of President James K. Polk a Tennessee court of chancery said: "This will was written by the testator with his own hand in the executive mansion at Washington at a time when he was president of the United States. He was a lawyer of recognized ability, had filled many high public offices with distinction and reflected great honor upon his state. His will was witnessed by a law partner and a senator in congress and named as executor one of the justices of the supreme court of the United States. It comes to us with the impression of having been carefully thought out before it was formally put down and published as his last testament."

Among other provisions his home, known as Polk Place, situated in the city of Nashville, was given to his wife for life, and upon her death it was bequeathed to the state of Tennessee in trust to be occupied and enjoyed "by such one of my blood relatives having the name of Polk as may by designated by the said state," and if there were no blood relatives of that name then "by such other of my blood relations as may be designated by the said state to execute this trust."

The occupant was to keep the same in repair and prevent it from dilapidating or falling into decay, to pay the taxes and to preserve and keep in repair "the tomb which may be placed or erected over the mortal remains of my beloved wife and myself and shall not permit the same to be removed nor any buildings or other improvements be placed or erected over the spot where said tomb may be."

This will was declared invalid as tending to establish a perpetuity. It was not a gift for public charity and was merely an attempt to retain the property for the use of the blood relatives of the testator.

How easy it is for one to suggest a sure way for some one else to manage a troublesome affair!

Walter Firstbrook, of Hope chapel, will be the leader of the Christian Endeavor Society meeting at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. This will be a temperance service and the topic will be "Painting the States White." "Joseph, Faithful in Little, Faithful in Much," will be the topic of the Junior Endeavor Society meeting at 3 o'clock. LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

Theatregoers who are constantly clamoring for better shows will have their demand gratified when John E. Henshaw comes to town with his new scenic comic play "Best People On Earth." This is not a musical comedy but a comedy, with music and is so well acted and mounted that it will be quite a treat to discriminating theatregoers. Klaw & Erlanger, who are routing this attraction, have booked it for this city for Saturday, matinee and night, April 15, at the Plainfield theatre.

Dance For Building Fund.

The committee of the Holy Name Society of St. Joseph's church together with a committee of the Ladies' Auxiliary, A. O. H., Division No. 1, of the same parish, met last night to perfect plans for a post-Lenten dance to be held at Saengerbund hall, Wednesday night, April 19, for the benefit of the church building fund. The committee feels confident that this dance will far surpass any yet given by the same societies and consequently expects to be able to tender Father Miller a neat little sum to help along the work already begun.

Mrs. Floret Wurmser.

Mrs. Frances Wurmser, wife of Floret Wurmser, died in Muhlenberg Hospital last night, where she had been receiving treatment for a complication of diseases. She was fifty three years old and leaves seven children. The family now resides on Lee place, but lived between Watchung and Warrenville for many years. The funeral will be held in St. Mary's church Monday morning and burial will be in St Mary's cemetery.

GOLF AND BASEBALL UNLAWFUL ON SUNDAYS

Sunday baseball and other athletic sports received a setback yesterday when the Senate at Trenton defeated the bill to legalize the playing of golf, baseball and other games under the direction and supervision of the playgrounds commission of a municipality. The bill was Senate No. 204 introduced by Senator Osborne, of Essex, who made a strong plea for its passage.

Senator Frelinghuysen, of Somerset, declared that he was in sympathy with the scheme to afford amusement for the men who were employed through the week, and while he personally believed that it would have the effect of taking many young men away from the saloons and the evils of intoxicating drinks, yet, because he lived in a county which had long been strict in its notions regarding the observance of the Sabbath, and because the clergy were opposed to the bill, he would vote against it. He said he hoped that the day might yet come when the clergy would recognize the need of the working man for some recreation of this sort.

Senator Gebhardt took his colleagues to task by pointing out the fact that it was not so long ago that they voted for the saloon, practically. "I am glad," he observed, "to see that you are coming over to my way of thinking, and now you admit that the saloon is a bad thing. After awhile you will vote for local option, perhaps."

Senator Frelinghuysen said that the rich men played golf and rode in automobiles on Sunday, and there was no reason why the working man should not have his enjoyment on Sunday in sports. "I wish the clergy might see the question in that light," he said. Three Senators voted for the bill, Edge, Osborne and Prince. Nine Senators voted against it, Senators Ackerman, Frelinghuysen, Gaunt, Gebhardt, Johnson, Leavitt, Lewis, Plummer and Silzer.

"Bugaboo Girl" at Proctor's.

Leona Stephens, the original "Bugaboo Girl," is the big hit at Proctor's theatre this week. Her clever, original act is alone worth a good many times the price of admission. Her costumes and singing are perfect screams. Frank Maltest & Co. present an unusually funny sketch, "The Wrong Mrs. Appleton." Michael Braham and his wonderful dog, "Bright Eyes," will please both old and young, while Mueller and TenBrook, in impersonations of famous composers and character impersonations, complete a fine bill.

A Jawing Match.

A PINE CONE PILLOW.

The Handy Needlewoman Will at Once Recognize Its Value For Library or Den.

For your den or library or living room a pine cone design for a pillow is always appropriate. It is so delightfully easy to work and so effective when done that every one will be glad to accept the pattern.

First of all you must enlarge and then trace the design on linen. The carbon paper method is best for this. You will find that medium weight tan linen is the best for this pretty top.

This design is a "swing" pattern. The lower edge of the half becomes the upper edge on the remainder. In that way there will be one large cone on each side of the central line.

When you have transferred your design, the working of it in one shade of brown and one of green is fascinating.

Outline stitches with coarse thread should define the stem that forms the edge of the design. The occasional lines on the stem are to be marked with outline stitches also, using the dark brown thread.

And while you have the brown cotton in your needle, you may as well work the cones. The diamond space should be worked solid with straight stitches, either the long way of the diamond or the shorter way, just as you wish.

The pine needles you will work in green, using the outline stitch. Before you know it the pillow top is finished. If you can fill it with the fragrant pine needles, so much the better. A green or a brown cord is a good finish for the cover, and if you wish you can vary the one color idea that is generally followed in the back and top by making a dark green back. Just a hint, of course, but remnants come in so will sometimes.

With a centerpiece on this same idea, a set for the library or the porch of your simmer home is irresistible. Try it.

SEWING MACHINE'S CARE.

This Useful Household Article Is Very Much Neglected—How to Keep It In Good Order.

The care of a sewing machine is given far too little attention by the majority of women, and it seems a singular thing, too, for, like everything else, it responds generously to the right treatment. Where it is run quite constantly it should be oiled every night, but where it is used, say, a little every day or so once a week is enough to clean and oil it.

It will be best before the season's sewing is begun to overhaul the machine thoroughly. Set it in a good light and loosen the strap and the plate. Remove the shuttle if it is a double thread machine and get every particle of dust and dirt out. A steel stiletto with a soft cloth wound around the point will help a good deal. A small size camel's hair paint brush is a valuable aid in this cleaning process. Clean the wheel and oil the lower part. Have two machine oil cans always, keeping one filled with good kerosene and the other with a standard machine oil. It is not economy to buy a cheap grade.

Use kerosene everywhere that oil is ordinarily put, then fasten the plate and put the strap in place and run the machine hard for a few minutes, and let it stand overnight, and in the morning wipe every particle of kerosene off and oil thoroughly. By this is not meant deluging the parts, but using perhaps a couple of drops in each place and being sure that none is forgotten. Run the machine a little and let it stand overnight, and in the morning run it some more and wipe carefully. Most people use oil too generously when they use it at all, with the result that it keeps coming out and getting on materials.

If there seems to be much more difficulty in regulating the tension it will be better to have some one from the shop come and fix it. If the shuttle tension is once well regulated it is almost never necessary to alter it, the regulating being done with the outside one.

From Towels.

A simple and useful combing jacket or peignoir may be made from a good large towel. Divide it into four even parts; cut off the two of these parts nearest the ends and sew them at right angles to the central portion. Sew tape where the pieces join to tie the peignoir on.

From three crash dish towels you can make a sewing apron, turning up the bottom and stitching it into pockets. Ribbon strings complete the apron.

A large embroidered towel will make a good bureau cover for summer. A line of drawn work will add to the appearance of a plain one used for the same purpose.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

You who have amused yourself in Berlin's Winter Garden or in the glad resorts along the Champs Elysee, in Paris, will never imagine, when you go to the American Winter Garden, which has opened in the spring, that you have suddenly been whisked across the ocean. You'll miss some of the characteristic scenes of those levianthan temples of folly, but you'll find, nevertheless, something quite new to New York, which may best be described as a roof garden on the ground floor. The chorus that filled the stage at various times during the evening are gorgeously costumed, while the feminine contingent of principals wore gowns startling in cut and co'or.

"I attended a performance of your play at the Bijou theatre, last night," wrote Vicar General Laville, of New York, to the author, "and I wish to say to you that 'The Confession' represents accurately the doctrine and practice of the Catholic church upon the obligations of the priest to preserve inviolate, the confidence he receives from the penitent. The play seems to me very strong, tender and well constructed. It tells a story dear to my Catholic heart; one we would be glad to have the whole world see. Although attending during the Lenten season, I found nothing in your play to offend conscience, but on the other hand, was most pleased with the absorbing story, and the great moral truth which you have so splendidly and fearlessly presented. I gladly advise all loyal members of the Mother Church to see 'The Confession,' as after having seen it myself, I know it will be of great and lasting benefit to them."

HINTS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE.

A marshmallow served with a cup of chocolate is a pretty and tasty conceit.

Adhesive plaster is a most practical substance to use for labels on tin cans or pails.

Grape jelly served with boiled rice is substituted for sugar and cream by one housekeeper.

If the inside of the oven is kept perfectly clean, the process of baking will be aided materially.

If doilies or handkerchiefs are ironed from the centre to the edge, they will not have an unsightly bulge.

Add one beaten white of the egg to one bowl of mayonnaise for a change. A lighter salad dressing is the result.

A few minced pistachio nuts, will be found an addition well worth while when next making a celery and apple salad.

One test for beef is this: Press the meat hard with the thumb. If as soon as the pressure is removed the fibers resume their normal position, the meat is good.

Somethimes curtain hings not only are difficult to move along on the curtain pole, but they make considerable noise. Rubbing the pole with a little vaseline or lard will remedy the trouble.

When next making ice cream make a plain vanilla cream. After freezing it and before packing, stir in chopped almonds browned in sugar. Half a cupful to a quart of cream is the usual proportion.

A piece of ordinary window screen is excellent for cleaning flat irons; keep a piece at hand and if the flats stick, rub them across the screen instead of scraping them off with a knife.

One who has used it often says that plaster of paris mixed with vinegar till the consistency of putty is excellent for repairing cracks in walls. The plaster of paris does not dry so quickly when mixed this way as it does when water is used.

Boiled sweet potato is the foundation for a delicious and wholesome salad. Dice the cold potatoes and mix well with half as much celery cut fine. Toss up with as much mayonnaise as it will carry and serve on hearts of lettuce garnished with stuffed olives sliced across.

A soup may be quickly cleared with the white of an egg. The egg gathers all tiny bits of solid matter just as it does in coffee. If the soup is strained, while hot, through a fine cheesecloth bag, wrung outin ice water, any stray fat globules will cling to the cold bag instead of remaining in the liquor.

Too few people appreciate what a delicate vegetable young carrots are. Clean and scrape the carrots and then cut in as thin slices as possible. Boil till tender in salted water, drain and add a generous amount of butter. Reutrn to the stove until the carrots are fairly well dried out, loosening them around the edge of the kettle if necessary to prevent their sticking.

For the Invalid.

A patient confined to one room for any length of time will feel the monotony of his surroundings greatly relieved by change of color. A clever woman accomplished this by freuently changing the shades over the gas burners. She cut shades from crepe paper, changing the color each day.

PUFFED THEIR OWN WARES.

Authors In the Good Old Days Threw Bouquets at Themselves.

Authors in "the good old days" were not above writing their own puffs. Charles Reade wrote a long article on himself for Once a Week, in which he said:

It is impossible to speak too highly of "The Cloister and the [illegible]." It is one of the most scholarlike and learned as well as one of the most artistic and beautiful works of fiction in any language. Read him. Resign yourself to the magic spell of his genius. The effect of "Foul Play" is perfectly marvelous. It leaves the stories of every other sensational novel writer far behind.

Nor was Balzac in France above praising his own works. "If you have not been born a story teller," he wrote in a review, "you will never obtain the popularity of M. de Balzac. And what a story teller! What verve and wit! How the world is dissected by this man! What passion and coolness!"

But the height of literary advertising in the first half of the last century was reached in the case of Eugene Sue's famous novel "The Wandering Jew." Every little while the daily installment in the newspaper in which it was appearing would be missing, and in its place would be an announcement that M. Sue was suffering from a slight indisposition and readers would be obliged to wait forty-eight hours for new developments of the narrative. So well did these methods succeed, says Mr. Tassin, that it was impossible to buy outright a copy of the journal, but instead copies were rented out at 10 sous for half an hour, the time thought necessary to read the installment. "And all the while Sue himself was industriously abetting the publishers by posing overdressed and with spurs to his boots at the Cafe de Paris in an attitude of deepest abstraction, as if wondering what the next installment would be about."—Bookman.

NESTS OF SEAWEED.

Floating Homes For Flying Fish In the Sargasso Sea.

Science is beginning to know a good deal more than it formerly did about that strange "drowned meadow" in the Atlantic ocean southwest of the Azores which is called the Sargasso sea.

It is, as is well understood, a vast accumulation of a kind of seaweed which, upheld at the surface of the water by innumerable little air vessels that act as floats, is continually renewed by the breaking up of its fronds and the growth of the broken parts. Many fishes have established their homes in it as well as numerous swimming crabs, small cuttlefish and quite a variety of other creatures.

Most remarkable of all its inhabitants is the mouse fish, which has pectoral fins developed in such a way as to resemble arms. By these it holds on to the fronds of the weed, a creature of solitary habits, highly carnivorous and always waiting for some prey to come within reach. It is a fish of very peculiar appearance, with ever so many queer looking appendages, and in color it imitates closely the plant that affords it shelter, being green with white spots.

The flying fishes that inhabit the floating meadow make ball-like nests out of fronds of the weed as big as two fists. Such balls are found floating and appear as if knit together with elastic threads. They are filled with eggs. Professor Louis Agassiz mistook them for nests of the mouse fish, but Dr. Theodore Gill, an eminent authority, has proved this to have been an error. Each one of these nests is composed of a single frond, which by commencing with the slenderest outer branchlets and peeling them successively off can be spread out entire.—New York World.

Magnets In Needle Factories.

In factories where needles are made the grindstones throw off great quantities of minute steel particles, although the dust is too fine to be perceptible to the eye. Breathing the dust shows no immediate effect, but gradually sets up irritation, usually ending in pulmonary consumption, and formerly almost all the workmen died before the age of forty. Ineffective attempts were made to screen the air by gauze or linen guards for nose and month. At length the use of the magnet was suggested, and now masks of magnetized steel wire are worn by workmen and effectually remove the metal dust before the air is breathed.—London Telegraph.

The Retort Courteous.

This is the sort of conversation one overhears between newly married couples:

Him—Oh, I'm tired of hearing about your brother Bob! Shut up about him! One would think he had all the manly virtues.

Her—Well, he may not be such an angel as all that, but he isn't such a fool as you are.

Him—You bet he isn't. He's a bachelor!—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Very Special.

A young medical student was being quizzed by one of his teachers. "In what will you specialize?" he was asked.

"Diseases of the nostril," replied the student.

"Good!" said the professor enthusiastically. "Which nostril?"—Success.

Premature.

The Fair Purchaser—Your eggs are all very small today, Mr. Jones, Mr. Jones—Yes'm, they are, but I'm sure I don't know the reason. The Fair Purchaser — Oh, I expect you took them out of the nests too soon.—London Sketch.

PLACATING THE DEVILS.

Paying Homage to Evil Spirits of Land and Sea In China.

Once every year, during the first fifteen days of the seventh Chinese month, the curious ceremony of Yu Nan Whei is celebrated, being, in fact, the paying of homage to the land and sea devils.

Seven priests carry out the ceremony by offering up various forms of prayer, says the Wide World Magazine, and making an unearthly noise by beating gongs.

Any one wishing to show his respect to the devils can do so by a payment of 600 cash—about 22 cents—to each of the priests, for which amount they will continue their performance for twelve hours, a truly modest remuneration.

For an extra payment of 2,000 cash a number of small red paper boats about six inches long, with lights inside, will be sent floating down the river with the current. These lights are for the benefit of the sea devils in order that they may be able to see their way about on dark nights.

Having finished this performance, the person on whose behalf it has been carried out goes away happy in the conviction that he will not lose any of his family throughout the year either by sickness or drowning, so that the whole ceremony may be looked upon as an insurance policy. At this time of year many thousands of the small lighted boats may be seen floating down the Yangtsekiang.

CUSTOM HOUSE FLAGS.

Having No Legal Existence, They Are Not Protected by Law.

Tradition is responsible for the flying of the revenue flag over the custom houses of the country, according to a high ranking member of that department.

The flag which floats from the roof of the custom house has not only no legal existence, but is not protected by law from popular use on land and sea nor from advertising, as is the national flag.

The revenue cutter service was established under authority of an act of congress of Aug. 4, 1790, as an armed force. It soon became evident that the vessels of the service should have some distinguishing flag or mark to indicate their employment and authority, and under an act of congress of March 21, 1799, the marker was provided for. This act set forth that "the cutters and boats employed in the service of the revenue shall be distinguished from other vessels by an ensign and pendant, with such marks thereon as shall be prescribed by the president."

As is apparent from the act of congress mentioned and various revisions of later date, the revenue ensign was intended especially for the cutters and boats of the service, but it has long been displayed over custom houses.—Baltimore Sun.

A Get Beautiful Quick Scheme.

"If you have a hurry call to be beautiful without the time to work up to the permanent affair," said Mildred Holland, "here's your chance. First wash your face with warm water and almond meal. Make a sort of paste of those things and wash off with warm water and dry lightly. Then apply your skin food lest there be any reaction from the drastic treatment to follow. Now take a piece of lemon and rub it over the face till the skin smarts. Rinse again, this time with water that is gradually brought down from cool to cold. You are then ready for the final ceremony. Hold a good sized piece of ice in a towel and iron your face with it. Then look in the glass. This has been found an absolutely reliable recipe before asking for the coveted new bonnet."—New York World.

Canvasbacks on the Wing.

If you have any doubt as to the swiftness of the canvasback on the wing where business calls just fire at the leader in a string some time when you have the chance. Duck shot when propelled by the proper quantity of powder travels pretty quickly itself, but if your charge brings down any member of that string of ducks at all it will be the fifth or sixth bird back of the leader, and I'll bet a farm on it.

"If you would have a chance of dropping the leader you will have to aim not less than ten feet ahead of him. Then he will more than likely run plump against your shot. When he drops it will be a quarter of a mile or so farther on, for he can't stop short of that distance even after he is dead."—New York Sun.

His Striking Feature.

He was butler at the British embassy, and he was very English. He was at the telephone, and the society editor of a Washington newspaper was asking him about a distinguished Englishman who had just arrived as a guest at the embassy.

"Tell me," said the editor, "what he looks like. Give me some striking feature by which I may recognize him."

"Well," replied the butler in awe and admiration, "'e 'as a most hintelligent face."—New York Tribune.

One Suggestion.

"Any suggestions as to the music for the dinner tonight?"

"Well, play something loud with the soup course. You understand?"—Washington Herald.

Golf Versus Motoring.

The difference between learning golf and motoring is that in golf at first you hit nothing, but in motoring everything.—Puck.

Intellect annuls fate. So far as a man thinks, he is free.—Emerson.

VARIED HIS VIEWS.

A Broad Minded Candidate and a Patient Constituent.

Farmer Gordon was engaged for a fortnight to drive a political candidate about the county in his buggy. They traveled by day, each town being a stage, and the politician spoke every evening.

The man was honest and well meaning, but careful local partisans had tried the temper of each community in advance and reported to him with suggestions. So it happened that from his extreme anxiety to please his expressed conviction on the issue varied considerably from time to time.

"Well, Mr. Gordon," said the candidate one day at the beginning of the second week, "how do you stand on the election? How are you going to vote?"

The farmer was silent, thinking. "I really don't know," he said. "I can tell better, maybe, at the close of our engagement."

"Can't make up your mind yet? You've heard all of my speeches."

"Yes, and I like you personally, and I'm hoping to get to vote for you. Don't worry—at least, not yet."

"Not yet! Why do you say that?" asked the puzzled candidate.

"Well, you've had several points of view, and I'm just waiting and thinking maybe before the end of the week you'll get round to mine too."—Youth's Companion.

MISSED THE KANGAROO.

The Hunter Was After Meat, but Got Instead a Stone.

In 1889 a hunter in New South Wales took a fancy for some kangaroo meat, so he made a trip through the mulga with no companion but his gun. He had no need of either guides or dogs, as he was an experienced bushman.

The first kangaroo sighted was wounded by him, but not badly enough to disable it. Before he could get in another shot it made off through the salt bush at a terrific pace, but leaving a plain trail in drops of blood, so the hunter followed as fast as he could.

The trail gradually grew fainter as the wounded animal bled less freely, and its pursuer was often obliged to stoop and examine the ground closely for the telltale signs. After several hundred yards had been covered without seeing any more crimson spots the hunter began to think his quarry had escaped, when he saw a single fleck of red before him.

As he bent to look for more flecks the red changed to an iridescent pale green, and he say it was a gem stone that lay before him. The kangaroo was not bagged, but the White Cliffs opal fields were discovered.—New York Press.

A Fish Aids Science.

There appears to be no limit to scientific curiosity, especially in Germany. Not long ago a scientist of Leipzig, wishing to ascertain whether fish are warmer than the water they live in, stuck a needle connected with a thermoelectric circuit into a living fish in an aquarium. The needle formed one element of the circuit, while the other element was immersed in the same water that contained the fish. The latter was not seriously injured by the needle and quickly became indifferent to it. Then as the fish swam about, carrying the needle, the ingenious savant closed the circuit and kept watch of the galvanometer. It showed no deflection whatever, from which he concluded that the fish and the water were precisely equal in temperature, for had either been warmer than the other a current would have been generated in the circuit.—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Furtive Look.

Here is something worth while for bachelors to consider.

A Boston woman says she can detect a bachelor as far as she can see him. She always knows a bachelor by his furtive look. The furtive look, she explains, is something akin to that of a hunted animal, always on the watch for snares and pitfalls. Of course this may apply only to Boston bachelors, but it would be well for all other single unfortunates to take a good look at themselves in the mirror and find that telltale look. If they do there is an easy way to efface it.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

No Excuse at All.

"Its climax," he said, "is false and unsatisfactory—as false and unsatisfactory as Rowndar's excuse. On Rowndar's return at a very late hour his wife said reproachfully:

"'You used to vow I was the sunshine of your life, but now you stay out night after night.'

"'Well, my love,' said Rowndar, 'I don't ask for sunshine after dark.'"—New York Tribune.

Impertinence.

Mr. Todgers—Why have you sent Maria, the servant girl, away so suddenly? You told me yesterday that she was the best girl you ever had.

Mrs. Todgers—She's an impertinent hussy. I wanted to borrow her rubbers, and she said she was afraid I couldn't get them on.

Two Classes.

The world is divided into two classes—those who go ahead and do something and those who sit still and inquire, "Why wasn't it done the other way?"

A man should be grateful even to his enemies when they open his eyes to a sense of his own faults and failures.

"You are not perfection, nor I either," she answered gravely. "You are famous in your way, and people call me celebrated in mine; but so far as the rest is concerned we are just two ordinary human beings, and if we are going to be friends we must understand each other from the first, as far as we can."

"I'll try to do my share," said Van Torp, taking her tone.

"Very well. I'll do mine. I began by thinking you were amusing, when I first met you. Then you frightened me last winter, and I hated you. Not only that, I loathed you—there's no word strong enough for what I felt. When I saw you in the audience, you almost paralyzed my voice."

"I didn't know it had been as bad as that," said Mr. Van Torp quietly.

"Yes. It was worse than I can make you understand. And last spring, when you were in so much trouble, I believed every word that was said against you, even that you had murdered your partner's daughter in cold blood to get rid of her, though that looked as incredible to sensible people as it really was. It was only when I saw how Lady Maud believed in you that I began to waver, and then I understood."

"I'm glad you did."

"So am I. But she is such a good woman herself that nobody can be really bad in whom she believes. And now I'm changed still more. I like you, and I'm sure that we shall be friends, if you will make me one promise and keep it."

"What is it?"

"That you will give up all idea of ever marrying me, no matter what happens, even if I broke—"

"It's no use to go on," interrupted Van Torp, "for I can't promise anything like that. Maybe you don't realize what you're asking, but it's the impossible. That's all."

Margaret Bent Her Head a Little, and Was Silent.

"Oh, nonsense!" Margaret tried to laugh lightly, but it was a failure.

"No, it's very far from nonsense," he replied, almost sternly. "Since you've spoken first, I'm going to tell you several things. One is, that I accepted the syndicate's offer for the Nickel Trust so as to come and see you here. I deliberately asked him to dine with me last night in London. I went right home, wrote a note to him, antedated for yesterday afternoon, to put him off, and I left it to be sent at the right hour. Then I drove to the station, and here I am. You may call that pretty sharp practice, but I believe all's fair in love and war, and I want you to understand that I think so. There's one thing more. I won't give up the hope of making you marry me while you're alive and I am, not if you're an old woman, and I'll put up all I have in the game, including my own life and other people's, if it comes to that. Amen."

Margaret bent her head a little and was silent.

"Now you know why I won't promise what you asked," said Van Torp in conclusion.

"You have no right to speak like that," she said rather weakly, after a moment.

"Perhaps not. I don't know. But I consider that you have a right to know the truth, and that's enough for me. It's not as if I'd made up my mind to steal your ewe-lamb from you and put myself in its place. Logotheti is not any sort of a ewe-lamb. He's a man; he's got plenty of strength and determination, he's got plenty of money—even what I choose to call plenty. He says he cares for you. All right. So do I. He says he'll marry you. I say that I will. All right again. You're the prize put up for the best of two fighting men. You're not the first woman in history who's been fought for, but by all that's holy, there never was one better worth, not Helen of Troy herself!"

The last few words came with a sort of stormy rush, and he turned round suddenly, and stood with his back against the gate, thrusting his hands deep into his coat-pockets, perhaps with the idea of keeping them quiet; but he did not come any nearer to her, and she felt she was perfectly safe, and that a much deeper and more lasting power had hold of him than any mere passionate longing to take her in his arms and press his iron lips on hers against her will.

Margaret was not angry; she was hardly displeased, but she was really at a loss what to say, and she said the first sensible thing that suggested itself and that was approximately true.

"I'm sorry you have told me all this. We might have spent these next two days very pleasantly together. Oh, I'm not pretending what I don't feel! It's impossible for a woman like me, who can still be free, not to be flattered when such a man as you cares for her in earnest, and says the things you have. But, on the other hand, I'm engaged to be married to another man, and it would not be loyal of me to let you make love to me."

"I don't mean to," said Van Torp stoutly. "It won't be necessary. If I never spoke again you wouldn't forget what I've told you—ever! Why should I say it again? I don't want to, until you can say as much to me. If it's time to go, hitch the lead to my collar and take me home! I'll follow you as quietly as a spaniel anywhere!"

"And what would happen if I told you not to follow me, but to go home and lie down in your kennel?" She laughed low as she moved away from the gate.

"I'm not sure," answered Van Torp. "Don't."

The last word was not spoken at all with an accent of warning, but it was not said in a begging tone either. Margaret's short laugh followed instantly.

"You said just now that you would not say over again any of those things you have told me to-night. Do you mean that?"

"Yes, I mean it."

"Then please promise that you won't. That's all I ask if you are going to spend the next two days here, and if I am to let you see me."

"I promise," Van Torp answered, without hesitation.

She allowed herself the illusion that she had both done the right thing and also taken the position of command; and he, standing beside her, allowed himself to smile at the futility of what she was requiring of him with so much earnestness, for little as he knew of women's ways he was more than sure that the words he had spoken that night would come back to her again and again; and more than that he could not hope at present. But she could not see his face clearly.

"Thank you," she said. "That shall be our compact."

To his surprise, she held out her hand. He took it with wonderful calmness, considering what the touch meant to him, and he returned discreetly what was meant for a friendly pressure. She was so well satisfied now that she did not think it necessary to telegraph to Logotheti that he might start at once, though even if she had done so immediately he could hardly have reached Bayreuth till the afternoon of the next day but one, when the last performance of "Parsifal" would be already going on; and she herself intended to leave on the morning after that.

She walked forward in silence for a few moments, and the lights of the town grew quickly brighter.

"You will come in and have some supper with us, of course," she said presently.

"Why, certainly, since you are so kind," answered Van Torp.

"I feel responsible for your having forgotten to dine," she laughed. "I must make it up to you. By this time Mrs. Rushmore is probably wondering where I am."

"Well," said the American, "if she thinks I'm perfection, she knows that you're safe with me, I suppose, even if you do come home a little late."

"I shall say that we walked home very slowly, in order to breathe the air."

"Yes. We've walked home very slowly."

"I mean," said Margaret quickly, "that I shall not say we have been out towards the fields, as far as the gate."

"I don't see any harm if we have," observed Mr. Van Torp indifferently.

"Harm? No! Don't you understand? Mrs. Rushmore is quite capable of thinking that I have already—how shall I say?"—she stopped.

"Taken note of her good advice," he said, completing the sentence for her.

"Exactly. Whereas nothing could be further from my intention, as you know. I'm very fond of Mrs. Rushmore," Margaret continued quickly, in order to get away from the dangerous subject she had felt obliged to approach; "she has been a mother to me, and heaven knows I needed one, and she has the best and kindest heart in the world. But she is so anxious for my happiness that, whenever she thinks it is at stake, she rushes at conclusions without the slighest reason, and then it's very hard to get them out of her dear old head!"

"I see. If that's why she thinks me perfection, I'll try not to disappoint her."

They reached the hotel, went upstairs and separated on the landing to get ready for supper.

On his side of the landing, Mr. Van Torp found Stemp waiting to dress him, and the valet handed him a telegram. It was from Capt. Brown, and had been retelegraphed from London.

"Anchored off Saint Mark's square to-day, 3:30 p. m. Quick passage. No stop. Coaling to-morrow. Ready for sea next morning."

"Stemp," he asked, as he threw off his coat and kicked off his dusty shoes, "were you ever sea-sick?"

"Yes, sir," answered the admirable valet, but he offered no more information on the subject.

During the silence that followed, neither wasted a second. It is no joke to wash and get into evening dress in six minutes, even with the help of a body-servant trained to do his work at high speed.

"I mean," said Van Torp, when he was already fastening his collar, "are you sea-sick nowadays?"

"No, sir," replied Stemp, in precisely the same tone as before.

"I don't mean on a 20,000-ton liner. Black cravat. Yes. I mean on a yacht. Fix it behind. Right. Would you be sea-sick on a steam yacht?"

"No, sir."

"Sure?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then I'll take you. Tuxedo."

"Thank you, sir."

Stemp held up the dinner-jacket; Mr. Van Torp's solid arms slipped into the sleeves, he shook his sturdy shoulders, and pulled the jacket down in front while the valet "settled" the back. Then he faced round suddenly, like a soldier at drill.

"All right?" he inquired.

Stemp looked him over carefully from head to foot in the glare of the electric light.

"Yes, sir."

Van Torp left the room at once. He found Mrs. Rushmore slowly moving about the supper-table, more imposing than ever in a perfectly new black tea-gown and an extremely smart widow's cap. Mr. Van Torp thought she was a very fine old lady indeed. Margaret had not entered yet; a waiter with smooth yellow hair stood by a portable sideboard on which there were covered dishes. There were poppies and corn-flowers in a plain white jar on the table. Mrs. Rushmore smiled at the financier; it would hardly be an exaggeration to say that she beamed upon him. They had not met alone since his first visit on the previous afternoon.

"Miss Donne is a little late," she said, as if the fact were very pleasing. "You brought her back, of course."

"Why, certainly," said Mr. Van Torp with an amiable smile.

"You can hardly have come straight from the theater," continued the lady, "for I heard the other people in the hotel coming in fully 20 minutes before you did."

"We walked home very slowly," said Mr. Van Torp, still smiling amiably.

Mr. Van Torp's Solid Arms Slipped Into the Sleeves.

"Ah, I see! You went for a little walk to get some air!" She seemed delighted.

"We walked home very slowly in order to breathe the air," said Mr. Van Torp—"to breathe the air, as you say. I have to thank you very much for giving me your seat, Mrs. Rushmore."

"To tell the truth," replied the good lady, "I was very glad to let you take my place. I cannot say I enjoy that sort of music myself. It gives me a headache."

Margaret entered at this point in a marvelous "creation" of Chinese crape, of the most delicate shade of heliotrope. Her dressmaker called it a tea-gown, but Mr. Van Torp would have thought it "quite appropriate" for a "dinner-dance" at Bar Harbor.

"My dear child," said Mrs. Rushmore, "how long you were in getting back from the theater! I began to fear that something had happened!"

"We walked home very slowly," said Margaret, with a pleasant smile.

"Ah?.. You went for a little walk to get some air?"

"We just walked home very slowly, in order to breathe the air," Margaret answered innocently.

It dawned on Mr. Van Torp that the dignified Mrs. Rushmore was not quite devoid of a sense of humor. It also occurred to him that her repetition of the question to Margaret, and the latter's answer, must have revealed to her the fact that the two had agreed upon what they would say, since they used identically the same words, and that they therefore had an understanding about something they preferred to conceal from her. Nothing could have given Mrs. Rushmore such profound satisfaction as this, and it revealed itself in her bright smiles and her anxiety that both Margaret and Van Torp should, if possible, over-eat themselves with the excellent things she had been at pains to provide for them and for herself. For she was something of an epicure and her dinners in Versailles were of good fame, even in Paris.

Great appetites are generally silent, like the sincerest affections. Margaret was very hungry, and Mr. Van Torp was both hungry and very much in love. Mrs. Rushmore was neither, and she talked pleasantly while tasting each delicacy with critical satisfaction.

"By the by," she said at last, when she saw that the millionaire was backing his foretopsail to come to anchor, as Capt. Brown might have expressed it, "I hope you have not had any trouble about your rooms, Mr. Van Torp."

"None at all, that I know of," answered the latter. "My man told me nothing."

"The Russian prince arrived this evening while you were at the theater, and threatened the director with all sorts of legal consequences because the rooms he had ordered were occupied. He turns out to be only a count after all."

"You don't say so," observed Mr. Van Torp, in an encouraging tone.

"What became of him?" Margaret asked, without much interest.

"Did Potts not tell you, my dear? Why, Justine assisted at the whole interview and came and told me at once."

Justine was Mrs. Rushmore's Parisian maid, who always knew everything.

"What happened?" inquired Margaret, still not much interested.

"He arrived in an automobile," answered Mrs. Rushmore, and she paused.

"What old Griggs calls a sudden-death-cart," Mr. Van Torp put in.

"What a shocking name for it!" cried Mrs. Rushmore. "And you are always in them, my dear child!" She looked at Margaret. "A sudden-death-cart! It quite makes me shiver."

"Griggs says that all his friends either kill or get killed in them," explained the American.

"My throat-doctor says motoring is very bad for the voice, so I've given it up," Margaret said.

"Really? Thank goodness your profession has been of some use to you at last, my dear!"

Margaret laughed.

"Tell us about the Russian count," she said. "Has he found lodgings, or is he going to sleep in his motor?"

"My dear, he's the most original man you ever heard of! First, he wanted to buy the hotel and turn us all out, and offered any price for it, but the director said it was owned by a company in Munich. Then he sent his secretary about trying to buy a house, while he dined, but that didn't succeed either. He must be very wealthy or else quite mad."

"Mad, I should say," observed Mr. Van Torp, slowly peeling a peach. "Did you happen to catch his name, Mrs. Rushmore?"

"Oh, yes! We heard nothing else all the afternoon. His name is Kralinsky—Count Kralinsky."

Mr. Van Torp continued to peel his peach scientifically and economically, though he was aware that Margaret was looking at him with sudden curiosity.

"Kralinsky," he said slowly, keeping his eyes on the silver blade of the knife as he finished what he was doing, "it's not an uncommon name, I believe. I've heard it before. Sounds Polish, doesn't it?"

He looked up suddenly and showed Margaret the peeled peach on his fork. He smiled as he met her eyes, and she nodded so slightly that Mrs. Rushmore did not notice the movement.

"Did you ever see that done better?" he asked with an air of triumph.

"Ripping!" Margaret answered. "You're a dandy dab at it!"

"My dear child, what terrible slang!"

"I'm sorry," said Margaret. "I'm catching all sorts of American expressions from Mr. Van Torp, and when they get mixed up with my English ones the result is Babel, I suppose!"

"I've not heard Mr. Van Torp use any slang expressions yet, my dear," said Mrs. Rushmore, almost severely.

"You will," Margaret retorted with a laugh. "What became of Count Kralinsky? I didn't mean to spoil your story."

"My dear, he's got the pastor to give up his house, by offering him a hundred pounds for the poor here."

Van Torp left them soon after supper, and gave himself up to Stemp, pondering over what he had accomplished in two days, and also about another question which had lately presented itself. When he was ready to send his valet to bed he sat down at his table and wrote a telegram:

"If you can find Barak, please explain that I was mistaken. Kralinsky is not in New York, but here in Bayreuth for some days, lodging at the pastor's house."

An American Heiress Imposes Upon Her Titled Suitor

By SARAH J. ATWATER

The center of art in Europe is Florence. The town is always full of Americans, and there are usually American art students there. One day an American girl, in rich apparel, while gazing at the paintings hung in the Pitti palace in that artistic city stopped at the easel of a copyist—a girl about her own age—who was copying a Titian, admired her work and entered into conversation with her. The artist was a Miss May Monroe of St. Louis, the other Miss Margaret De Forest of New York. The acquaintance thus begun was continued, and in time Miss De Forest engaged Miss Monroe to paint her portrait.

"I am going to take you into my confidence," said Miss De Forest to Miss Monroe one day while sitting for the picture, "and ask you to do me a favor. I possess an immense fortune and have come abroad for the purpose of meeting a suitor who has never seen me. Mutual friends have made an arrangement by which Count Desmond de l'Amoureux, descended from one of the oldest families in France, is to visit me, and if we are both agreed we are to marry. I am not to be taken in by any adventurer and have investigated the count's position thoroughly. He possesses valuable estates which with my fortune would enable us to take a very prominent position in European society.

"But I will marry no man who does not love me. My wish is that you shall impersonate me to the count, I impersonating you, a protegee of my real self. If I like him I will endeavor to win him away from you. In that way I shall know that he loves me for myself."

"That would make a very pretty romance," said Miss Monroe.

"Unless you fall in love with him yourself."

"No fear of that. I'm engaged to be married."

"Indeed!"

"Yes; to a young American, a struggling artist like myself."

"That is fortunate. We can take him into the secret and, forming a party of, four, go about together, thus enabling me to carry out my plan."

"And enjoy ourselves as well."

Count Desmond de l'Amoureux arrived and was introduced to the two girls, they occupying reversed positions. Bernard Wright was introduced to the count as the fiance of the real Margaret De Forest. The four visited together the galleries, the mediaeval buildings and the environs of Florence, enjoying every moment. The party filled a carriage, and many were the drives they took over the beautiful hills and dales about the city in the delicious Florentine sunshine.

Young Wright, devoted to his art and, with the usual artistic temperament, careless as to material possessions, entered upon his part of the deception reluctantly and merely to please Miss Monroe. He paid his devoirs perfunctorily to the heiress, but was by no means bored at doing so. His real mistress was his brush. Miss Monroe seemed to enjoy immensely personating an heiress and was very patronizing to the real Miss De Forest. Count de l'Amoureux was evidently from the first very much pleased with the girl whom he supposed to be Miss De Forest, and Miss Monroe knew with a woman's quick intuition that it was not interest alone that moved him.

Miss De Forest soon began to practice artful means to draw the nobleman away from her substitute. Margaret was an attractive girl and knew how to win a man. Nevertheless the count was constant to May. One day while sitting with her on the Piazza Michelangelo, a hill overlooking the city and the Arno flowing through its quayed banks and under its old fashioned bridges, he said:

"Where did you pick up your protegee?"

"I met her here in Florence. She's a lovely girl."

"H'm! I don't fancy her."

Miss Monroe laughed.

"Why are you merry?" asked the count.

"I was thinking, supposing I were to turn over my fortune to her, how long would it be before you would transfer your attentions from me to her."

"I will grant that there was a time when I might have done this, when we first met, though I fancied you in preference immediately. But now that I have known you a transfer would be impossible."

"Suppose you try."

"Try! What do you mean?"

"I think May cares for you. Before entering upon any contract to become your wife I should prefer that you remain for a time under her influence. She and I are bosom friends and shall always be much together. I don't care to have an affair between my husband and my friend. I prefer to trust his constancy before marriage."

"But you must have seen that Miss Monroe has not been averse to my attentions and that I have not given them."

"Devote yourself to her for two weeks."

"It would seem an age."

Miss Monroe flatly refused to excuse her suitor from the test, and he finally consented, the period being reduced from two weeks to two days. He attempted to make a beginning the next afternoon when the four were walking together in the Pitti gardens. He joined Miss De Forest.

She turned away from him.

Now, it is not pleasing to the amour propre of a nobleman who has descended from one of the proudest houses in France to be snubbed by an American girl of ordinary lineage, and a protegee at that. The count was furious. He regretted that he had not accepted the two weeks' period of trial offered, since it would give him time to teach this young woman whom he did not like that she could not with impunity turn away an attention from the Count de l'Amoureux. He found himself in an equivocal position. Miss Monroe had not seen the snub he had received, and he was too proud to confess it to her. And yet for two days he was expected to devote himself to the girl who would not accept his attentions. What was to be done? He begged Miss Monroe to let him off from the balance of his trial on the ground that it was obnoxious to him. She refused. He passed a weary time till the period had passed nursing his wrath. Then the lady who had snubbed him relented.

The temptation to give her a bit of punishment was too great for the count to resist. A little side play from this time went on all the while which Miss Monroe was not supposed to notice. The count was really making love to Miss De Forest with a view to tossing her away when he should have won in the game. It was not long before he discovered that the protegee was a girl of superior judgment and endowments to the one whom he believed it was to his interest to marry. About the time he had made up his mind to this Miss De Forest began to court the attention of Bernard Wright. Young Wright did not appear to be especially desirous to give it, but this did not make any difference to the count. He saw that the girl preferred another to himself. The pique he felt he attributed to the danger of losing his revenge.

The spring was fading into summer, and yet the count was not engaged. Indeed, he was beginning to think that he would go back to France to remain, for a time at least, a bachelor. The lady to whom he was devoting himself openly had intimated her willingness to accept him, but he did not propose. The lady whom he was endeavoring to punish was punishing him. There were times when he was tempted to commit the folly of throwing himself, his position and his name away on her—that is, if she would accept him, a matter of which he could not form any opinion.

One evening he was standing on that old bridge, the Ponte Vecchio, looking over the Arno to the westward. The sun had set, but the day lingered. The placid river reflected the houses and the quays, bordered by a long chain of lights on either side. The old stone bridges were reflected, too, the reflection of one appearing under the one next beyond, the stone and the image together forming a circle. The nobleman was thinking of the American protegee. Suddenly a soft voice behind him called:

"Count!"

He turned and saw Margaret.

"Where did you come from?" he asked.

"Visiting the palace of the king. I am on my way to the hotel. Isn't it a lovely sight?"

"Ravishing."

"And to think that I must leave it! I go tomorrow."

"Tomorrow!"

"Yes; I am called home to America."

"Then if I must part from you this is a fit scene to remember as the last we saw together in this unique city."

She rested her arms on the stone coping, and they looked at the beautiful sight together. Presently he said:

"I, too, go tomorrow."

"Ah!"

"Yes; I return to France."

"Engaged?"

"No; I came with a view to enhance my position by a favorable marriage. I have given that up."

"Why?"

"Because I have been turned from my purpose."

Wright and Miss Monroe came up as he spoke the last words. The four enjoyed the view for awhile, then walked on together.

The next morning the count left Florence by an early train and Miss De Forest by a later one.

The count went to Paris, where at a hotel overlooking the garden of the Tuileries he strove to turn from his mind the girl with whom he had parted on the Ponte Vecchio in Florence. Hoping for better success at his home, he was about to take a train when he received a card on one side of which was the name "Margaret De Forest" and on the other: "I am about to start for America. Should be pleased to see you once more before I go. Call this evening."

L'Amoureux hesitated whether to excuse himself or to accept. A desire to see one connected with May Monroe in so many pleasant rambles conquered, and he determined to accept.

The lady who entered the reception room surprised him.

"Why," he said, "I received Miss De Forest's card."

"I sent you Miss De Forest's card."

"Why so?"

"Because I am Miss De Forest."

The count stood stupefied.

She told him the story of the deception. A Frenchman, he could not understand the ways of a Yankee woman, but his delight at the denouement of the little comedy in which he had played the fool was unbounded.

"And now," he said, "we will begin what we meant to begin in Florence."

RETURN OF THE BOLERO.

Once Popular Garment Again Seen In Fashionable Shops—A Suggestion In Pink Linen.

The bolero is coming back to us as something of a novelty, for it is some time since the once popular little garment has been fashionable. Many will welcome it gladly, as it is rather easy to make, aside from the fitting, and will give opportunity for the embroiderer to display her skill.

A pretty idea for a linen dress is shown in the illustration and has the advantage of appearing as an entire costume, but allows the skirt to be worn separately if desired. The smart little bolero fastens in the back and is scalloped about the edges.

A decorative design is embroidered on body and sleeves. White embroidery and scallops on pink linen are attractive, and white on green or brown on ecru is also pretty. If the scalloped edge is not desired it may be simply faced and finished with a band of braid applied as a straight band or in fancy design.

Ginghams were never so pretty and artistic as this season, and the bordered patterns are almost in a class by themselves. A feature of the bordered materials is the solid band of color with the pattern above it. It is a pretty idea to have the accessories of a costume match the band if possible. Checks and quite large plaids are much in favor, and this is especially true of black and white effects.

Utilizing an Old Brooch.

Many women have tucked away in their jewel cases old brooches with fascinating fluted or ruffled gold edges in which are set a lock of hair or a golden curl. The size makes them impossible for a neck pin, so they are never brought to light.

If you possess such a pin turn it into a watch fob charm and you will have a novel and very fashionable ornament. An ingenious girl set the style with a big brooch of her grandmother's, and now the other girls are playing "copy cat."

Make the fob of heavy grosgrain ribbon, black or white, wide enough to form a backing for the brooch. Fasten it at the top with the usual oval gold slide and from it suspend the heirloom pin and you have a fob that cannot be duplicated in the stores.

One girl, finding one of these pins with the center gone, had set in place of the hair an oval bit of Russian lapis lazuli which shows the flecks of gold in the blue. It made a stunning ornament for the fob, if not quite so quaint as in its original form.

For the New Housekeeper.

If new tinware is rubbed over with fresh lard and then thoroughly heated in the oven before it is used it will never rust afterward.

The same is true of all iron cooking utensils, such as muffin pans, skillets and kettles.

Unfortunately comparatively few new housekeepers use iron cooking utensils, which cook more evenly and are better for many things, but nearly every housekeeper has at least one iron kettle. If she wants this to be smooth and forever rustless let her try greasing it and setting it away for awhile before she cooks in it.

Millinery Hints.

Large and small turbans of supple straw, handmade, are being shown in the shops. The crowns are high and the trimming makes them more so.

Small bonnets of silk are being shown. They are of the early Victorian shape. The brim is "scooped" and very close fitting. Draped crowns projecting toward the back are used. These full, soft crowns allow for the present mode of hairdressing.

Black and white combinations for early spring are very pronounced. In both straws and trimming this is good. Black and white lace is used for huge bows or for surface coverings on large shapes. Ribbon in black and white checks and stripes is used on plain shapes for wear with tailored suits.

SAUNDERS SCHEME

Suggests Women's Franchise Would Tend to Factory Employe's Welfare.

A HUMANITARIAN INCLINATION.

People Suffer From Lack of Laws Enforcement He Tells National Civic Federation Gathering.

As chairman of the meeting of the New York State Employers' Welfare Section of the National Civic Association, former Mayor William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield, on Thursday night, suggested that placing the franchise in the hands of women might be a solution as to how best to protect the lives and health of factory employes. His introductory remarks follow.

"The purpose of this meeting is to express the sentiments of employer and workman in the interests of humanity. We are here to deplore the conditions that made possible the recent loss of life in the Triangle shirtwaist factory and to emphasize the importance of doing something in a practical way to improve the safety and welfare of those who toil.

"At the public meeting last Sunday in the Opera House the chairman, Mr. Philbin, said that he thought it strange that we should not have provided for those helpless girls who were unable to take care of themselves. There is nothing strange about it—it is simply part and parcel of our American system of neglect, of carelessness, of selfish pursuit of money. We are too busy to even watch the politicians, hence how can we expect busy men to labor in the cause of humanity. What is everybody's business is nobody's business. Human welfare is sure to suffer when men's minds are filled with what Virgil has called "Auri sacra fames,' an insatiable thirst for gold.

"This is a condition which we must recognize. We cannot change it, we can only watch and work to improve things that exist under it. It is an old story to talk in this line when deprecating corruption in our political system. The people wake up periodically, reform movements start, flourish and die, as they always will, and as this movement to improve humanitarian conditions is sure to do unless through organization and work the laws are enforced. It has been suggested to establish a bureau. This might lead us into the evils of bureaucracy, so prevalent in Russia and so pregnant with graft and corruption. Concentration of responsibility should lead to better results. Put responsibilities upon people, and they either respond or go under.

"We may talk of the inadequacy of our laws, of the incompetence of our officials, of the evils of politics, yet back and behind all this is the degeneracy of our people in the higher virtues because of the push for money. No one can do but one thing at a time and do it well. The one thing that prevails is profit to ourselves and we have practically no leisure class, except perhaps among women, whose time might be given to human welfare.

"This great disaster, therefore, seriously raises the question whether it would not be wise for us to enfranchise women, thereby putting responsibility and power in the hands of those whose inclinations are naturally humanitarian. When Mayor VanWyck was visited by a deputation of women to urge the appointment of members of their sex as factory inspectors, he is said to have bluntly rejected their demand with the statement, 'There is not a single vote in the whole lot of you.'

"We suffer not so much from the lack of good laws as from the lack of honest enforcement of laws. Dr. Moscowitz has found that out of 1200 factories in New York fourteen have no fire escapes at all and sixty-five have defective ones. Nearly five hundred have no other exits than fire escapes and more than one thousand have doors opening in; twenty-three were found with the doors locked.

"No new laws are necessary to protect working people in these cases. We simply need vigilance and active work to enforce common laws that everyone recognizes. It is too often true that comfort without safety is the lot of workers. It pays to make one comfortable because it makes for more work, while safety is looked upon as taken care of by insurance. It should be the duty of every employer of labor to care for the health, comfort and safety of the workers. He should be held responsible for the workers' welfare and life while at work and in cases where carelessness and neglect are proven that responsibility should be both civil and criminal."

WANT A SAFE 4TH

Want Association Working for "Sane" Celebration of Independence Day.

HOLDS ITS ANNUAL ELECTION.

Mrs. H. C. Corbusier President at Yearly Meeting Held at Home of Mrs. Morris Benton.

The question of a "safe and sane Fourth" came up before the members of the Mothers' Association yesterday afternoon and a committee was appointed to take immediate action looking toward safeguarding the lives and preventing injury to the little ones on Independence Day. The speaker of the afternoon was Mrs. Augustus H. Reeve, president of the State Congress of Mothers. She delivered an inspiring address on the National and State Congress, which aroused the mothers present. A discussion followed the address and the meeting resolved itself into one of the most enthusiastic ever held in this city by the mothers.

Mrs. Morris Benton, of 107 Crescent avenue, was the hostess and was afterwards elected to the vice-presidency of the association. The various committees who are working hard to make the State Congress of Mothers a success on November 9 next reported good progress in the arrangements. The officers elected for the year are: President, Mrs. H. D. Corbusier; first vice-president, Mrs. Morris Benton; second vice-president, Mrs. H. C. Krebs; recording secretary, Mrs. H. C. Phillips; corresponding secretary, Mrs. M. P. E. Groszman; treasurer, Mrs. George Wean.

The advisory board is made up of Dr. Henry M. Maxson, William D. Murray, Dr. Norman Probasco, Dr. H. D. Corbusier and Hugh F. Fox.

Arrangements are being satisfactorily made for the reception of delegates to the big convention next November and it is believed that it will be one of the greatest of its kind ever held. All the mothers are enthusiastically planning to attend and the speakers to be heard are of the best in the country.

MRS. RYNO PRESIDENT OF THE MISSION BAND

Officers were elected and reports presented at the annual meeting of the Young Women's Mission Band, of Trinity Reformed church yesterday afternoon and during which Miss Winifred Rapalje gave an interesting talk of the recent missionary Jubilee in New York, especially describing the pageant at the Metropolitan Opera House, pictured by her as a wonderful sight. At that pageant there was a spectacular presentation of mission work, the different nationalities being representated in costume. Those in charge gave a living illustration of various peoples as they are before conversion and afterward.

Miss Rapalje's description was so vivid that those present at the meeting could easily imagine that they were attending the pageant in New York. The talk was considered a most interesting one.

During the year the Band raised about $300 for foreign and home mission work, and in addition sent boxes and barrels of articles to McKee, Ky., as well as in the west and $40 was contributed toward the support of Dr. Paul W. Harrison and more recently $190 was divided between home and foreign missions. The band has a membership of about fifty. A hearty vote of thanks was given to the retiring officers.

These officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. Corra Ryno; vice-president, Miss Helen Smith; secretary, Miss Winifred Rapalje; treasurer, Mrs. A. B. Cole; corresponding secretary, Mrs. F. E. Woodruff.

After the meeting there was a social hour, during which members of the Band served tea and wafers.

The annual smoker of the Princeton Club of Plainfield will be held at Truell Hall, Friday evening, May 5, at 8:30 o'clock, and the chief speaker for the occasion will be Prof. Paul VanDyke, '81, of the University faculty. Raymond B. Fosdick, '05, commissioner of accounts, New York city, and Robert Rudd Whiting, '01, editor of Ainslie's Magazine, will also address the sons of Old Nassau on this occasion.

The executive committee of the club has accomplished considerable during the past year, according to a prospectus furnished the members. A prize of $50 for each year has been offered by the club to the Plainfield boy, attending school either in Plainfield or elsewhere, who shall pass the highest entrance examination for entrance into the freshman class at Princeton.

Interest is being aroused among the school boys of the town by means of personal interviews and the distribution of attractive literature regarding the institution and arrangements are nearly completed for a trip to Princeton by automobile for a party of prospective Princetonians on the occasion of the Princeton-Harvard baseball game on May 20.

ORGANIZING WIRELESS CLUBS IN THE EAST

Secretary Charles G. August, of the Plainfield Wireless Association, reported last evening that Charles Brandegee, son of Senator Brandegee, of Connecticut, had applied for membership in the organization in this city and that favorable action was taken. Nine new members were admitted to the local association last evening and as the by-laws are still incomplete their adoption was put over to a later meeting.

A communication was read from the wireless association of Easton, Pa., in which Plainfield is invited to visit that city and help to organize a club. Mr. August has accepted the invitation and will probably take a trip to Easton next Friday. Several wireless associations in nearby States have decided to affiliate with the local association because of their more complete organization and following out the plans of the present officers an organization will be formed which will include wireless amateurs in all the States east of the Mississippi.

KENSINGTON AVE. CAN'T BE EXTENDED BY CITY

The proposed extension to Kensington avenue cannot be made by the city. This statement is made on the authority of Judge Gilbert Collins, of Jersey City, whose opinion has been filed with the Common Council.

Judge Collins' opinion is based on paragraph five of section thirty-nine of the City Charter. Remonstrances had been filed within the time limit by a majority of the affected property owners and the city is powerless to overcome them.

The restraining clause of the charter's provisions as to laying out and extending streets states:

"Provided, That no street, road, highway or alley in said city shall be laid out, opened or extended against the written remonstrance of those persons owning a majority in interest of the frontage land lying on that portion of the street, road, highway or alley proposed to be laid out or opened."

The opinion will be submitted to the Common Council on Monday night.

'THE PEAK SISTERS' PROVIDE SOME FUN

"The Peak Sisters" from Alaska, comprising ten young women from the Junior Epworth League of the First M. E. church, under the direction of Miss May Randolph, superintendent and her assistant, Miss Ethel Pryor, entertained a large number of people in Vincent chapel, last night. The sisters appeared in the familiar attire with high hats and carried large band-boxes. They gave an interesting program of solos, recitations and selections by the chorus. Miss Pryor presided at the piano.

The young women appearing in the entertainment were the Misses Zeta Voorhees, Ruth Johansen, Kathryn Bingaman, Marion Lynn, Ruth Lynn, Alma Thomas, Irma Good, Hester Stebbins, Barbara Schlick and Myrtle Darling. At the conculsion of the entertainment. Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor, in a few happy words presented Miss Randolph and Miss Pryor with a beautiful bouquet of flowers in appreciation of their services. A social time followed and lemonade and wafers were served by members of the league. The silver offering amountd to nearly $17.

FIRE HORSE QUESTION IS UP TO THE COUNCIL

The Councilmanic Fire committee at its meeting last night, discussed the question of the horses secured from Fiss, Doer & Carroll, of New York, for the Netherwood fire house, one of which died last week. It is reported that one of the councilmen had informed the committee that he had purchased the team for $650 and also that in view of the fact that one of the horses died, the New York concern was willing to compromise with the city in settlement.

It was understood by the committee, it is said, that the team was secured on approval and if not satisfactory could be returned. The fact that one of the horses died as a result of illness which began with distemper before the team came to Plainfield, was not considered sufficient to hold the city liable. Some of the members of the committee were not willing to talk compromise until the matter had gone before the Common Council for consideration. This will be done next Monday night and a decision will probably be reached at that time.

The committe also received a delegation of electrical contractors who wished to talk over some features of the new building code, but no changes of any importance were considered necessary. The New York Telephone Company submitted a bid, by request, for caring for the city fire alarm system during the coming year and it is believed that if a contract is made with the company the city will save about $500 over last year.

Robert C. Woodhouse, who expected to appear before the committee and give some facts and figures relative to the advantages of installing an automobile apparatus, was requested to defer his visit until next week when the committee will meet again. Mayor G. W. V. Moy attended the committee meeting by invitation, but did not remain throughout the entire session.

Roland Clark and Katherine Clark, children of Mr. and Mrs. Edward O. Clark, of West Fourth street, are ill with pneumonia.

ASK FOR WIDENING

Somerset Street Property Owners Present Petition for the Improvement.

MAYOR URGES EARLY ACTION.

Informs Council Projected Trolley Work Will Help Out—Engineer Exhibits Maps of Contemplated Undertaking.

The Somerset street widening proposition from Jackson avenue to Johnson's drive, was again taken up by the Borough Council at its meeting last night. A petition signed by about thirty abutting property owners, was presented, asking that the improvement be made as soon as possible. It was referred to the street committee for action and will be reported upon as soon as possible.

After the petition had been read Mayor Smalley took occasion to speak on the subject. He stated that all the bonds on the first part widening from Craig place to Jackson avenue, had been paid off and another issue could be made to defray the cost. The people want the improvement, he said, its need is becoming more and more apparent and there is no good reason why it should not be done. Furthermore, he said, the time for the widening is now opportune inasmuch as the trolley company proposes to install new rails and ties on Somerset street from Grandview avenue north to the terminus. It pays for one third of the repairs to the thoroughfare and the work can all be carried on at once. A system of storm sewers will have to be installed, which would mean a second tearing up of the roadbed if undertaken separately. Personally, the Mayor said, he wanted the street widened and the sooner it is done the better he will like it.

Mr. Woolston and Mr. Waldren both expressed themselves in favor of the widening but preferred to see the Watchung avenue extension and macadamization put through first. Their statement elicited the reply that the property owners on the avenue had taken no steps themselves to have the work done and it is up to them to present some sort of a resolution. Mr. Stahl was enthusiastic in his support of the Somerset street matter and declared that no time should be lost in going ahead. If lack of money stood in the way, he said, the improvement should be taken up step by step until the mountains were reached. The other councilmen also expressed favorable opinions of the petition.

Before the Council adjourned, a recess was taken to permit the members to examine maps of the proposed widening as prepared by H. C. VanEmburgh. The latter was present to point out the details. In reply to a query from Mayor Smalley he stated that he had not estimated the cost but would do so later. The maps showed that the widening can be carried out without seriously imbe carried out without seriously damaging to but one or two prop-

TUBERCULOSIS SUNDAY IN LOCAL CHURCHES

Dr. Edward Krans and Miss Mabelle C. Phillips represented the Plainfield Anti-Tuberculosis Society at the Deaconness' House of St. George's church, New York, last evening and heard some interesting facts concerning the work being done by the fighters against tuberculosis in that city. The need of funds for the work was shown when it was declared that a single class under the auspices of St. George's spent $9,000 last year all of which went in preventive and curative work. $600 is required for each patient a year and it is only by free contributions of money that the fight against the great white plague can be carried to a successful issue.

The Plainfield society is planning to furnish literature for the use of ministers for tuberculosis Sunday, which has been appointed for April 30. The society understands fully that the different churches will have different ways of communicating the great need of funds and the reading matter will be supplied the week before so that all churches will have the opportunity of selecting their own day for the appeal for funds.

REPORT ON SEWERS

W. J. Buttfield Details Borough Commission's Work to Present Time.

PRAISES MR. FRELINGHUYSEN.

Senator's Aid Has Greatly Facilitated Progress—Council Passes Resolution of Apreciation for His Co-operation.

William J. Buttfield, chairman of the North Plainfield Sewage Commission, appeared before the borough Council at its monthly meeting, last night, and outlined the progress that has been made in the matter at the present time. He took occasion to express his appreciation of Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen's efforts in the commissions' behalf, stating that he had been willing at all times to introduce any desired measure before the upper house and at the present time he is fathering a bill for North Plainfield's benefit that will preclude the possibility of holding up the sewage plans for long periods in the event of the State Board of Health demanding certain changes. Under the existing borough law any deviation from the original proposition as put before the people would have to be referred back to them for approval. One little change might cost a year's time. If the bill Senator Frelinghuysen is presenting goes through it will permit the borough to make the necessary alteration without asking the taxpayers. It will probably be heard next week.

A part of Mr. Buttfield's report was as follows:

"Since our last report the progress, in respect of the borough sewerage plans, has been delayed from causes entirely beyond our control.

"The borough of Bound Brook filed a protest against the location selected for the disposal plant. The legality of said protest was challenged by Sherrerd Depue, and his contention was upheld by the Attorney-General.

"An effort was then made by Bound Brook to secure legislative action to defeat North Plainfield's work, but this effort was met by a clear and unanimous report from the Senate committee upholding the equity of our borough's position and refusing to countenance Bound Brook's object in introducing the bill in question.

"The State Board of Health has been delayed in its action for various reasons, but there is a probability that a favorable decision may be received from the Board next Tuesday.

"Our borouugh has every reason to be grateful to Senator Frelinghuysen for his fair-minded and unqualified justification of North Plainfield's course as embodied in the committee report above referred to."

Mr. Buttfield's remarks relative to Mr. Frelinghuysen's work led to a general discussion of the Senator's co-operation. It was the concension of opinion that the Council's appreciation should be expressed in some concrete form. As a result, the following resolution was introduced by Mr. Milne and passed unuanimously:

"Resolved, That the fair and just stand taken by the Senator from Somerset county in the matter of Senate bill 41, and others in connection with the endeavor of North Plainfield to get its sewer plant properly located, be and hereby is most heartily endorsed."

FINED FOR DRUNKENESS; BOY'S TALE NOT BELIEVED.

George Curtis, the sixteen-year-old boy, who was arrested last Monday charged with being drunk and disorderly, was fined $3 this morning by City Judge William G. DeMeza. The boy paid the fine.

It was announced by the counsel for the hotels at which the boy alleged that he purchased his liquor, that affidavits would be presented to Mayor Moy showing that the boy was not telling the truth. Little credence is placed in the tale he told as to how and where he obtained liquor.

Mr. Rice to Sing.

The recital that was to have been given by Leon Rice last Tuesday evening will be given on Monday evening, April 10, in the Y. M. C. A. Hall. Mr. Rice will give the program previously announced. The members of the Loyal Temperance League are requested to meet Mrs. Henry Thomas at the W. C. T. U. rooms tomorrow afternoon, after Sunday-school to rehearse the Easter music.

WHEN HER BACK ACHES.

A Woman Finds All Her Energy and Ambition Slipping Away.

Plainfield women know how the aches and pains that come when the kidneys fail make life a burden. Backache, hip pains, headaches, dizzy spells, distressing urinary troubles, all tell of sick kidneys and warn you of the stealthy approach of gravel, dropsy and Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills should be used. Here's proof of their merit in a Plainfield woman's words:

Mrs. O. C. Moore, 57 Manning avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "You may continue to publish my endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills which I gave in August, 1905. I endured much misery from backache which was caused by my kidneys. Many nights I was unable to rest and when I arose in the morning, my limbs were so stiff and sore that I could hardly get out of bed. Whenever I caught the least cold, it settled on my kidneys and any strain in my back always made the aches and pains worse. I was treated by physicians but their medicine did not help me and it was not until I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Randolph's Drug store, that I had any hope of getting rid of my trouble. This preparation made me feel like a different person and I have never had any serious trouble since. I use Doan's Kidney Pills once in awhile however, and they keep my kidneys in good working order."

ATTACK LIABILITY LAW.

May Recommend Additional Legislation Next Year.

Trenton, April 8.—President J. W. Foster, of the New Jersey Manufacturers' Association, has announced that when the new employees' liability law goes into effect on July 4 his organization will take immediate steps to tests its constitutionality. This is coincident with the statement that Senator Edge will introduce in the Senate Monday a bill providing that the Employers' Liability Commission, which framed the Edge bill, recently signed by the Governor, shall be continued in existence throughout the present year.

It is the object of the prospective bill to give the men who have made so thorough a study of the subject of workingman's compensation an opportunity to watch the workings of the measure throughout the year in order that they may be able to recommend such additional legislation next year as the fact may warrant.

Mrs. Augustus Van Deventer, of Myrtle avenue, has gone to Baltimore, Md., to visit her daughter, Mrs. Herbert Whittingham.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

"Baby Mine," in which Margaret Mayo injected more laughs than is usually supplied to a dozen farces, has become firmly re-established at Daly's and will remain there the balance of the season. The interest that London is taking in the play is simply a reflection of the remarkable success of this merry farce in New York. A company of unusual merit is offered.
Acompany of unusual merit is offered.

Last Monday night marked the hundredth performance of "Over Night." Philip H. Bartholomae's comedy of the honeymooners at the Hackett. Although "Over Night" shortly leaves the Hackett, owing to a change in the theatre's management, arrangements have been perfected by which this laughable farcical comedy will be seen at another house. The run will continue well into the summer. Margaret Lawrence, Jean Newcombe, Herbert A. Yost, A. P. Aylesworth and the other clever players in the cast, give a most amusing interpretation of the well-drawn characters in the play.

Henry B. Harris and Jesse L. Lasky announce the opening of their new Folies Bergere, a restaurant-music hall, more Parisian than Paris and catering to all the senses, which they have built in 46th street, west of Broadway. At 8:15 the curtain will go up on a revue which will be followed by a ballet and then by another revue. At 11 p. m. the first show of the evening will be over and at 11:15 there will begin supper and the Cabaret Show made up of sensational novelties from Europe in which pretty women will predominate. Among those in the cast of the revue are Ethel Levey, who returns from four years of success in Europe, Martha Lenclud, the star of La Cigale, Paris; Janette Denarber, the comedienne of the Paris folies Bergere revues; Britta, prima ballerina at the London Alhambra, Borghini, prima ballerinas from the Metropolitan Opera House, Emily Lea, an American dancer, the Pender Troupe, Faico and his dancers, Pilar la Arenera Company of Spanish Players.

HERE AND THERE.

There are nine cackling hens and three newly laid eggs in the Fourth Precinct station, Newark, and somewhere there are two badly frightened men, who dropped the chickens early yesterday morning when chased by Patrolman Heitzenroeder. In the office of Captain Vogel sits Patrolman Cort, of the Sixth Precinct, who claims the chickens. In the yard in the rear of Patrolman Cort's home, at 805 South Sixteenth street, there is a coop, and in that coop there is, or was Thursday night, thirty-three prize buff cochin chickens. This morning fourteen were missing. Heitzenroeder was going home at 5 yesterday morning when, at Rose street and Eighteenth avenue, he saw two men with bags. When they saw Heitzenroeder they dropped the bags and ran. The partolman pursued and fired one shot in the air, but the men outdistanced him. So he returned, got the bags and brought them to the station house. When Desk Sergeant Meyerowitz opened the bags nine highly indignant hens tumbled to the floor and cackled their disapproval of the entire proceedings. They were placed in the cellar in a soal bin, and by 10 o'clock there were two new eggs there also. Cort visited the Fourth Precinct station on business about that time, and was deploring the loss of his prize chickens, when Captain Vogel took him to the cellar and Cort identified the fowls as his. Now Captain Vogel is somewhat of a diplomat, and he told Cort to go upstairs and finish what he had to do. Later, when the captain was about to tell Cort to take his chickens, Doorman "Dory" Ambs entered the office and whispered: "Captain, there is another egg, and I guess there will be more." Vogel told Cort he had better wait until night before taking his hens.

Youngest Horse Thief.

Trenton, April 8.—The youngest horse thief Trenton ever had to deal with was in court yesterday. Edward Groff, seven years old, stole a rig and had the entire police force of the city looking for him before he was captured. Patrolman Cook saw him driving down the street and the same time the horse became frightened. The policeman stopped the horse, saved the boy's life and arrested him all at once. In court yesterday Edward rather gloried in his feat and he was sent to the dungeon. One minute in the dark was enough, however, and the lad promised never to do it again. He was released in the custody of his mother.

Stealing a march on a Chicago attorney, Detective Doran, of Camden, Thursday returned from the "Windy City" with Philip Berman, who is wanted for deserting his wife and family. Berman had been gone since last November. When Detective Doran reached Chicago, the authorities were willing to deliver the man, but a lawyer held matters up by applying for a writ of habeas corpus. Before the matter was argued the sleuth was given the custody of Berman, hurried to the railroad station, got him aboard a train and came East. Berman asserts he was "kidnapped."

Prof. William Adams Brown, of Union Theological Seminary, will preach at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church tomorrow morning.

BASEBALL.

It is not likely that Walter Johnson will play ball this year unless he accepts the offer of $6,500 made by the Washington American League Club. James R. McAleer, manager of the Senators, sent his great twirler home and then wired notice of his action to President Noyes, of the Senators.

The South Atlantic League got in motion last Monday and on Wednesday the first double-header of the season was played.

Eddie Zimmerman played third base for the Brooklyn Trolley Dodgers Thursday against the Lynchburg, Va., team. The former Brave was at the bat four times and poled out three safe drives. He also accepted six chances in the field without an error.

The Quincy Club paid $2,500 to get a release from the Central League so that it might enter the Three I League, but Waterloo froze out the Quincy Club, and now Quincy has no affiliation with any league. Like swapping horses while crossing a stream.

Herbert Cushing, treasurer of the Montreal club, was in New York Thursday and said that the Royals look like a first division team this year. The Montreal man paid his respects to President Ed Barrow at the Eastern League headquarters in the St. James building.

The Paterson club will open its season at Olympic Park, Paterson, tomorrow with the Albany club of the New York State League.

The Athletics defeated the Phillies Thursday in a twelve-inning game at Philadelphia by a score of 2 to 1. Twelve innings were played before the winning run was sent over the pan. The series now stands two victories for the Athletics and one for the Phillies.

Pitcher Louis A. Brockett has been reinstated by the National Baseball Commission as a member of the New York American League club without the infliction of a fine. Brockett failed to report to the Yankees last year on account of sickness. "King," as he is called, is in fine shape and expects this year to be the best of his career.

The Danville (Va.) team defeated the Toronto Eastern League team Thursday afternoon at Danville by a score of 2 to 1. The Maple Leafs have not been setting the world on fire by their playing, and have been a number of games on the spring training trip to the teams in the bush leagues.

Old Cy Young has requested Manager Jim McGuire to permit him to pitch the opening championship game of the season. Young's trial against the Cincinnati Reds on Wednesday does not indicate that the manager of the Cleveland Naps will grant the veteran's request.

Manager McAleer, of the Washington Americans, has turned over to the Atlanta team of the Southern League, as "ground rent man" Outfielder Fred Corbin. He is subject to recall at the end of the season.

The Buffalo team under the leadership of Bud Sharpe played an eleven-inning tie game Thursday with the Spartanburg team of the Carolina Association. With the score 5 to 4 in favor of the Bisons, the Spartanburg players started a batting rally. A single, two doubles and a home run netted four runs. The game was then called on account of darkness.

GOLF.

A varied program has been decided upon by the Western Golf Association for its annual open championship tournament, to be held at the Kent Country Club, June 27 to 30, and care has been taken to have the prize list arranged so that others besides the favored few will be able to win something. As an early incentive the contestant returning low score in the thirty-six hole medal play qualifying round will receive $50, while the second, third, fourth and fifth men will be rewarded with $30, $20, $15 and $10, respectively.

The winner of the tournament will receive $200 as first prize and the runner-up will get $100. The other two to reach the semi-final bracket will each receive $50. Provision has also been made for the consolation division. The player with low score for seventy-two holes gets $50, second man $25, third $15 and fourth $10. In case an amateur wins any of the above prizes an appropriate medal will be given, while the full amount of the cash will go to the professional or professionals next in order.

The Western open will begin with a thirty-six hole testing round, in which sixteen will qualify for the championship. Eighteen-hole match rounds will be decided on the second day, but the semi-final and final matches on subsequent days will consist of thirty-six holes. The conditions governing the consolation set are that those who fail to qualify for the championship must play another thirty-six holes, which will be added to their first day's efforts.

ELIZABETH HAS PAVING DISPUTE.

Elizabeth, April 8.—There seems to be a differennce of opinion among officials as to what kind of pavement should be used on Elizabeth's streets. At the present time the pavement of several streets are under discussion, Westfield avenue, between Morris avenue and North Broad street is being paved with Bessemer brick and some of the property owners there asked for Metropolitan brick. They declare that Bessemer brick is in use in Newark and is not wearing well. Residents of Rankin street also protested against Bessemer brick, wanting Mack brick instead and their petition is now under consideration.

Cuncilman Everard Tucker precipitated a lengthy argument the other night at the Council meeting when he offered a resolution calling for the paving of North avenue, with a mixture of asphalt and macadam, the same as on the Hudson turnpike. Chairman Patrick J. McGurn, of the street committee, said that this combination gave no satisfaction and declared that former Mayor Victor Mravlag was opposed to it.

The latter, while in office, often so expressed himself, but the residents of the street, together with the residents of other fashionable thoroughfares seeemd to want the fancy pavement; not reckoning on its wearing qualities. To their decision Mravlag was opposed. Because of his opposition Newark avenue at the present time is in a bad condition.

MESSENGER BOY BILL.

Trenton, April 8.—Senator Osborne made a fight in the Senate Thursday against concurrence in the amendments which the House Thursday tacked on to his bill forbidding the employment of boy messengers between 10 o'clock at night and 5 in the morning. As passed by the Senate the bill placed the minimum age for night messengers in cities of the first class at 21 years. The House cut it down to 18 years. Senator Osborne succeeded in having the Senate stand out against the reduction, and on his motion a resolution for a committee of conference was adopted. During the discussion Senator Plummer said he favored the reduction because it would enable the older boys to learn telegraphy. Senator Osborne declared that such a notion was all buncombe because the boys were kept so busy they had not time to learn anything.

The annual parish meeting will be held at the First Baptist church, Wednesday night, April 12, for the election of officers and presentation of reports.

The weekly prayer-meeting will be held at the West End Tabernacle Thursday night, April 13, at 8 o'clock and the Junior C. E. Society will meet in the afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

COLLEGE MEN UNGODLY?

But recently we have heard a distinguished Jerseyman describe the alleged godlessness of the American college student and professor. This slander on our colleges was given widespread publicity and while the small minority who by their experiences while students at seats of learning were astonished little effort was made to prove the charges unfounded Clayton Sedgwick Cooper in the Homiletic Review, however, gives facts and figures showing how thoroughly aroused the college man is to the value of Bible study. The writer gives a list of twenty-five representative institutions with their total attendance and the number of students enrolled in Bible study classes.

In the list, selected at random, are the following, the total attendance and the Bible study enrollment, respectively being given: Princeton university, 1,400, 524; Yale university, 3,297, 900; University of Texas, 1,150, 636; Lafayette college, 464, 162; University of Toronto, 2,800, 1,019; Penn. State college, 1,400, 464; U. S. Naval academy, 774, 350; U. S. Military academy, 413, 220; and Iowa Sate college, 1,600, 512. Commenting on these figures and reproducing others, the Literary Digest says:

"Further more, this movement appears to be largely in the hands of the brightest and ablest undergraduates, and to have reached 'students of all classes of opinion, of all races, of all vocations.' Facts and figures recently secured from the student constituency of this country and Canada show among college Bible students a large proportion of men active in college life, including:

1,522 members of 'varsity football teams.

1,454 members of college glee clubs.

653 editors of college papers.

1,402 members of 'varsity baseball teams.

755 class presidents.

983 prize and scholarship men.

712 members of 'varsity basketball teams.

92 members of 'varsity crews.

1,053 members of 'varsity track teams.

"The sweep of this great awakening,' is further indicated by these returns:

28,562 men reported by 490 institutions as having attended Bible classes for two months, or more.

9,089 men following habits of daily Bible-study in 338 institutions.

6,156 non-Christian men were reported in Bible classes in 302 institutions.

5,061 fraternity men were reported in 120 institutions.

2,308 students were used to lead Bible groups in 306 institutions.

2,272 of these leaders were in attendance at 305 normal classes in 139 institutions.

800 faculty men cooperated in the Bible study work in 295 institutions.

IF you have never had a bank account you cannot understand the feeling of independence and happiness that comes with the possession if one.

A great writer has said that many people with good incomes are more unhappy than beggars because they live beyond their means. If you have never had a bank account you realize the truth of this assertion and cannot understand the feeling or independence and happiness that you may so easily enjoy.

CONGRESSMAN ASKS FOR STREET MACADAM

Congressman Stephen B. Ayers, of the Eighteenth New York District, appeared before the Borough Council last night, in behalf of the Plainfield Park Associates, of which he is a member, asking that Clinton avenue be macadamized from Greenbrook road to Green brook. The Park concern owns considerable property in this section which it is developing, but which has been delayed owing to the lack of certain municipal improvements in the vicinity. Mr. Ayers said that his concern has plans prepared for the erection of five fine houses as soon as the borough orders the macadamizing. They will cost from $6,500 to $8,000 each and it is proposed to build thirty more within a year, none of them to run below $5,000.

The congressman further stated that his company had received estimates for the grading, curbing and flagging of Clinton avenue and that it will be done at its own expense. It was originally intended, he said, to ask for a thirty-two feet width of macadam, but in view of the fact that sewers may be installed a little later and this street torn up again, a sixteen-foot strip would suffice for the time being. The petition was referred in the usual way, but Mayor Smalley assured Mr. Ayers that the borough would do its share in building up the locality to be developed.

In the regular order of business resolutions were passed authorizing the macadamizing of Allen place from Fairview to Grandview avenues and the placing of flagwalks on the westerly sides of Harrison and Cedar avenues. Mayor Smalley stated that he had engaged William A. Coddington as counsel, to represent the borough in the injunction suit brought by A. J. Brunson against the Somerset Freeholders. North Plainfield's share in the work of improving the thoroughfare, last year, he said, was $1,247, and it certainly should have its interests guarded in the matter. His action in securing Mr. Coddington was unanimously approved by he Council.

The following building permits were granted: Adolph Bohren, dwelling on Greenbrook road near Stone street; Samuel Taub, erection of dwelling on Warren street, where barn is to be torn down; Mrs. Mary Truitt, three dwelling houses in vicinity of Harrison and Chestnut streets, each to cost about $3,000; Henry Johnson, alterations to house in Washington avenue; Margaret Coriell, dwelling house on Verdon street; George Ammon, dwelling house on upper Duer street; F. W. Hand, garage in rear of premises at Brook and Westervelt avenues.

A communication was received from Winfield Scott Post inviting the Council to attend the Memorial Day exercises. It was referred. Councilman Stahl reported the fire department expenses for the month to have been $219.11, and $682.56 for six months hydrant rent. Recorder Doliver reported the arrests for the month and $20 in fines collect, while the treasurer reported a balance of $3,245.21. John Y. Barrett was appointed a member of the Shade Tree Commission to succeed Hughes Fawcett.

QUALITIES NECESSARY FOR THE S.S. TEACHER

In his address to the teachers of Trinity Reformed Sunday-school on Thursday afternoon, Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews said in part:

"The right kind of a teacher is an interesting one. All teachers should be interesting, but religious teachers especially so, for what God soys and does is most strikingly interesting. How full of interest is nature. The Bible is the most interesting book in the world.

"From the mental point of view interest has value because by it the mind becomes receptive to fact and truth; from the moral view point interest is of supreme value for it is the soul of the will, energising to action, thinking and feeling.

"How shall the Sunday-school teacher interest the pupils; first by promptness. The teacher should always be the first to arrive at the class. When the young people arrive and find that they are in control their interest at the very ouutset dominates rather than that of the teacher. Second, teachers must be regular in their attendance. There is little hope of a teacher interesting a Sunday-school class when intermittent attendance makes lack of interest so apparent. Third, children must have good text books on the Bible. How far would a public school teacher get in interesting her pupils if she had nothing better to use than "help" like the "International Sunday-school lesson?" We need to get rid of the quarterly and in its place put the new graded lesson. Fourth, the teacher must at least have a reading kuuowledge of the literature of modern educational methods. Every teacher should know the educational value of the Sunday-school and the strong features of manual training.

"Fifth, the teacher must study the personality of the pupils. A good book should be read that would make intelligible childhood and adolescence, for it is only as we know children that we can hope to interest them. When the teacher incarnates the truth her or his life speaks so loud that the pupils are bound to be interested."

LIQUID AIR EXPLAINED TO HIGH SCHOOL BOYS

Under the auspices of the High School science class yesterday, Professor McClanahan, of Princeton university delivered a lecture on "Liquid Air," demonstrating with the aid of apparatus the method of manufacturing and the uses to which it could be put. Besides the local science class that of the North Plainfield High School and many visitors were present.

In explaining what liquid air is the speaker said that as yet the substance is not well enough understood to make it practicable for commercial purposes. Air becomes liquid at a temperature of 315 degrees below zero. Among the interesting experiments made were freezing mercury into a solid cake; freezing a rubber ball so that it broke into several pieces when dropped on the floor and making a lead bell ring after dipping it into the liquified air.

Fell Off Trolley.

Antonio Fallachi, an Italian laborer, fell from a main line trolley car this morning in front of 1,050 West Front street, and received injuries to his head which may prove fatal. According to reports received at police headquarters Fallachi attempted to jump from the car while it was moving swiftly and instead of landing on his feet took an involuntary somersault landing on his head. City Physician C. F. Lufburrow was called and attended the injured man Fallachi is suffering from concussion of the brain.

SENIORS SHUT-OUT BY HIGH SCHOOL TEAM

The first real baseball game of the season in this city was played yesterday afternoon between the Plainfield High school team and the senior class team, the former winning by a score of 3 to 0. It was a pitcher's battle from the start, Nelson doing the twriling for P. H. S. while Grisley shot them over for the seniors. Only four of the senoirs reached first base and there they died.

The fifth session proved the undoing of the senior boys. Ricketts made a single to centre, Mills followed suit with a liner through short. An error put Grod on first and with the bases filled Runyon and Hanrahan slammed out singles bringing in the only runs scored. Jimmy Emery umpired the game which lasted only seven innings.

The score:

P. H. S.	0 0 0 0 3 0 0—3

DINNER EPISODES.

Odd Happenings That Helped to Spice the Meals.

THE WORM THAT DIDN'T TURN

It Spoiled a Funny Story For a Woman Whose Pet Horror Is Anything That Wriggles—A Distracted Scientist and a Gastronomic Calamity.

At a dinner party one night my host and I were in the midst of an interesting conversation when I noticed a movement in the lace centerpiece which lay under a pot of growing tulips. The lace was pushed aside, and straight toward me wriggled a fat red earthworm. If I have a pet horror it is for anything that writhes. My host was nearing the point of a funny story when I caught sight of that strange intruder on a dining table. He reached the end of the story and laughed. I believe I laughed, but to this day I cannot tell what that story was about. I sat watching the gymnastics of that lively specimen of fish bait. In forty seconds it was due to tumble into my lap. There was no waiter near. The reptile was hidden from my host by a soup plate. The man at my right was absorbed in conversation with a woman beside him. The worm had almost reached the edge of the table when I had an inspiration. I turned a red wineglass upside down, for the waiter was approaching with a napkin wrapped bottle.

"Have you turned White Ribboner?" asked my host.

"For tonight I have." Where my voice came from I do not know; neither do I know how I ever sat out that meal listening to a host who tried his level best to entertain a dull guest and watching a frantic fishworm try to break its way out of jail. Somehow growing plants on the dining table have gone out of favor in our house.

A dear distracted old scientist I know keeps his wife on the anxious seat every moment when they dine out. She is prepared for any ridiculous thing he will do. No one ever possessed finer breeding or gentler manners than the good old professor, but his fits of abstraction are likely to descend on him at any moment. His wife tells of one notable experience.

"One night," she says, "I lectured John all the way home from a dinner. I was trying to make him understand that pate shells were intended to be eaten. If it had been a caterer's meal I should have thought nothing about it, but our hostess was a fine cook, and she had just announced proudly that we were having some of her own puff paste. Everybody ate the pates except John. With the greatest care he scooped out the creamed chicken and left the shell. He was horribly distressed over it. 'If I had only known, my dear,' he said, 'that the thing was intended to be eaten, that it was really food and she made it, I should have shown my appreciation.'

"'Remember it next time, then,' I said.

"A week later at another dinner John was seated opposite me. I glanced at him curiously after the dessert came on, for he seemed to be in the throes of a choking fit. Imagine, if you can, my horror. He was trying to masticate the paper case of a charlotte russe. There was only one thing I could do—call him to order as one would have done a child. I could not sit by calmly and watch him choke to death. Dinners are frequently stupid affairs, but that one was not after I had explained the situation to a tableful of people. Fortunately John is so brilliant that his absentmindedness is considered a natural adjunct to genius."

"My husband," said one woman, "is the funny man at a party when the mood happens to seize him. One night after playing bridge we filed out to the dining room, where we were seated about the table for supper. From the corner where my husband sat came gales of laughter. He had turned conjurer and was making everything disappear, from salt spoons to a water decanter. When things were found it was in the most remarkable places.

"A week later while searching his clothes for soiled handkerchiefs—that is a regulation Monday morning task in our home—I heard something rattle in his dress coat. From an inside pocket I drew two silver forks, three teaspoons and a salt spoon. They were marked with various initials. None of the stuff came from our sideboard. My husband was out of town, and I spent a few perplexed hours. An idea suddenly dawned on me. I wrapped up the silver, put on my hat and went straight to the hostess of our last card party. 'Thank goodness!' she cried. 'I have nearly had nervous prostration over the loss of these things. Servants have been suspected, I hired a man to go over the garbage dump, and the whole house has been turned upside down in our search. If it had been my own silver it would not have been so bad, but it was borrowed, and I could not duplicate it anywhere in town. Wait till I see that husband of yours!'

"The story got out, and sometimes a hostess in facetious mood insists on counting her silver before my better half goes home."—Isabel Gordon Curtis in New York Tribune.

FREAK SHADOWS.

A Peculiar Phenomenon That Has a Simple Explanation.

In the crude oil producing regions in California there are scores of large ponds of this material. After being pumped to the surface the petroleum is emptied into depressions in the earth, where it remains for a time. Later the crude oil is placed in barrels, in large metal cans or else in big reservoirs. These oil ponds are known as "sump holes."

There is one peculiar thing about these "sump holes," and that is in the way of producing what are known as "freak shadows." These are real shadows, but notwithstanding this fact they are decidedly "freaky." If the sun is brightly shining and a person stands for a few moments on the margin of the "sump hole" so that his shadow falls on the surface of the petroleum and he then quickly changes his position the dim shadow remains just where it was originally cast. In other words, the "shadow does not follow the substance."

This may seem like a paradox, but it is true. The instant a person shifts his position his shadow is again cast in a new place, yet the former shadow remains unchanged. The longer a person stands in one particular spot the longer will the former shadow be visible.

Hundreds of experiments have been made along these lines, and every time the same results have been produced. The simple explanation for this phenomenon is that under the hot sun gas is being constantly generated down in the body of the petroleum, and it rises to the surface in the form of little minute bubbles. So very small are these bubbles that they are scarcely visible to the naked eye. Millions of these wee bubbles are rising to the top all the time, when the bubbles break and the gas is liberated, passing into the air.

Both the gas and bubbles are so very supersensitive to the temperature that even one's shadow cast for a moment across them is affected. The temperature is lowered. Whenever the substance quickly changes position the shadow remains until the rays again warm up that spot and the shadowy outline slowly fades away. Of course the "freak shadow" may be seen for only a very few seconds.—Scientific American.

A FLAME OF PAIN.

The Shock That Comes With the Bite of the Electric Ant.

When you happen to sit down to rest or take notes near a colony of electric ants some wandering hunter is sure to find you and come cautiously forward to discover the nature of the intruder and what ought to be done. If you are not too near the ant town and keep perfectly still he may run across your feet a few times, over your legs and hands and face, up your trousers, as if taking your measure and getting comprehensive views, then go in peace without raising an alarm. If, however, a tempting spot is offered or some suspicious movement excites him a bite follows. And such a bite! I fancy that a bear or a wolf bite is not to be compared with it. A quick electric flame of pain flashes along the outraged nerves, and you discover for the first time how great is the capacity for sensation you are possessed of. A shriek, a grab for the animal and a bewildered stare follow this bite of bites as one comes back to consciousness from sudden eclipse.

This wonderful electric ant is about three-fourths of an inch long. Bears are fond of it and tear and gnaw its home logs to pieces and roughly devour the eggs, larvae, parent ants and the rotten or sound wood of the cells, all in one spicy acid hash. The Digger Indians also are fond of the larvae and even of the perfect ants, so I have been told by old mountaineers. They bite off and reject the head and eat the tickly acid body with keen relish. Thus are the poor biters bitten, like every other biter, big or little, in the world's great family.—John Muir in Atlantic.

Too Smart to Be a Lawyer.

B. Davis Noxon was one of the ablest lawyers in central New York. A young man entered his office as a student and was given Blackstone to study. At the end of a month he asked Mr. Noxon what he should read next. "Do you understand Blackstone?" "Yes," was his answer. "Read Kent," was the order. In another month he announced that he had finished Kent and "What next?" "Have you read Blackstone and Kent?" "Yes." "Do you understand them?" "Yes.' "Well," said Mr. Noxon, "you had better go at some other business; you are too smart to be a lawyer."—Boston Herald.

Always Busy.

"And you are really settlement workers?" interrogated the housewife as she handed each of the wanderers a wedge of pie.

"Yes, mum," responded the dusty spokesman, with a low bow, "we work every settlement we come to."—Chicago News.

"Going to shave it off, I s'pose?"

"Oh, no. She never liked me."—Kansas City Journal.

HIS DOLLAR BILL.

He Tried to Bestow It In Charity, but It Went Astray.

Diplomacy doesn't always work, as a certain kind hearted business man in West Philadelphia has just found out. He says that the lesson was cheap at the price, but at the same time he will employ more direct methods next time he wishes to play the philanthropist.

It happened on the subway the other night. He had just closed a real estate deal at considerable profit and was feeling very generous, so when he saw a poor woman in a threadbare dress carefully count out five pennies for her ticket and saw that it was the last money in her worn pocketbook he determined to help her. Of course it wasn't easy, but the man prides himself upon being a diplomat. So, crumpling a dollar bill up in his hand, he stooped over as if picking something up and then, holding it out to the woman, said:

"Madam, here is some money you dropped." He tried to smile significantly as he said it, but she didn't seem to understand and said simply:

"Tain't mine."

"You'd better take it," he said. "It isn't mine, and it was lying right by you."

The woman shook her head at first, then took it s[illegible] out of his hand and looked at it [illegible]atingly. The man smiled, well pleased with himself, but an instant later the woman, seeing a man looking down at the platform, rushed up and cried, "Was you looking for a dollar bill?"

"I sure was," answered the man promptly.

"Well, here it is," said the woman, and the man with a delighted "Oh, thanks!" calmly pocketed the sum and walked away.—Philadelphia Times.

FIRE EATERS.

The Trick of Breathing Flames and Sparks From the Mouth.

Fire tricks were practiced in very ancient times. The first known fire breather was a Syrian slave named Eunus, a leader in the Servile war in Sicily, 130 B. C. He pretended to have immediate communication with the gods. When desirous of inspiring his followers with courage he breathed flames and sparks from his mouth.

In order to accomplish this feat Eunus pierced a nutshell at both ends, and, having filled it with some burning substance, he put it in his mouth and breathed through it. The same trick is performed today in a more approved manner. The performer rolls some flax or hemp into a ball about the size of a walnut, which he lets burn until it is nearly consumed. Then he rolls around it more flax while it is still burning. By this means the fire is retained in the ball for a long time. He slips this ball into his mouth unperceived and breathes through it. His breath revives the fire, and he sustains no injury so long as he inhales only through his nostrils.

Various theories have been advanced to account for other feats of this sort performed by the ancients. An old ordeal was the holding of a redhot iron by the accused, who was not burned if he were innocent. Probably some protective paste was used on the hands. The peculiar property of mineral salts, such as alum, in protecting articles of dress from fire has long been known. An old Milanese devised a costume consisting of a cloth covering for the body which had been steeped in alum. A metallic dress of wire gauze was added to this, and thus protected a man might walk on hot iron.—Harper's.

London's Dramatic Censors.

London has had its absurd dramatic censors even if it cannot quite come up to Vienna. Colley Cibber in his autobiography tells us of one master of the revels who was responsible for the licensing of plays in those days expunging the whole first act of "Richard III." on the ground that the distresses of Henry VI. would remind weak people of King James, then living in France. In fact, Shakespeare has more than once been censored, for "King Lear" was inhibited during the illness of George III. George Colman when reader of plays banned the use of such words as angel and heaven.—London Chronicle.

To Make Him Sleep.

"Unfit for duty because of insomnia" was the record of a New York policeman for several weeks.

Inspector Byrnes sent for the man and gave him a little bit of advice, thus: "Tonight, about midnight, put on your uniform, belt, hat, revolver, take night stick in hand and go to some corner house. Lean against it, and lean against it hard, as if you were really on duty. You'll go to sleep, all right."—New York Tribune.

BARS THE CROOKS

Uncle Sam's Assay Office In Wall Street Not a "Fence."

ON THE WATCH FOR THIEVES.

Precautions Taken to Keep Jewelry and Gold and Silver Articles, That May Have Been Stolen, Out of the Government's Melting Pot.

The way in which the United States assay office in Wall street keeps itself from becoming a "fence" where thieves and crooks may bring their stolen wares to have them melted and receive cash for the same was recently explained by the superintendent.

The federal statutes make it difficult for those in charge to refuse any gold or silver handed in. The statute reads in part that "any owner of gold and silver bullion shall be entitled to deposit the same, and it shall be melted and assayed immediately." It does not designate that only the rightful owner may apply for service, and inasmuch as possession is nine points of the law of rightful ownership the assayer is not allowed to be a doubting Thomas.

"Several years ago," said the superintendent, "there was a city detective stationed in the building to watch for jewelry and gold and silver pieces that were presented for assaying to determine whether or not they were stolen goods. He remained here for eighteen months, and during that time he did not catch a single thief. The reason was that the news undoubtedly went out to every 'fence,' crook and thief of every description in the city that a guard was at the assay office and to watch out for him.

"After the city detective was withdrawn it became more necessary to secure some other means to prevent our offices from really becoming a 'fence' for stolen articles.

"The one provision we finally incorporated into our rules that has kept away from us the greatest portion of stolen goods that might otherwise be headed in our direction was that we refused to accept any bullion that will assay less than $100. In this way we are able to refuse any ordinary quantity of rings, watches and other trinkets that would be stolen and which we know will not contain pure metal to that amount. Of course sometimes we will accept stuff and it will turn out to be worth a few dollars under the amount, but we cannot always guess correctly when looking at goods.

"We have many other ways of determining whether goods presented to us have been stolen, but it would not be wise to let every crook in town know what they are. Sufficient to say that every time we have suspected things were not right we have secured immediate co-operation of the New York detective bureau, and I believe we have secured better results than when a man from the central office was constantly on watch. Then the stuff did not appear. Since then we have been of assistance in tracing down several burglar mysteries.

"When goods are stolen that value or would assay over $100 it is much easier for us to keep the lists of the same which are furnished by the police department and to be on the lookout for what is wanted.

"Then when the value of the articles is over that amount we are in much safer position to put a few questions to our customer, to discover who he is and why he wants to get money for the articles. If we are still suspicious that all is not as it should be it is a simple matter to make a few investigations before we complete the transaction.

"I am perfectly aware that the idea is prevalent in many quarters that the United States assay office is a 'fence' for thieves to bring their wares. This may have been the case in New York in the old days, and it may be so now in other places, but I feel that it is a pity that such feeling still exists in New York. It may be that there are cases where stolen articles get by us, but we are constantly on the lookout for crooks and what they have looted, and I feel safe in saying that there is less justice to the term 'fence' being applied to us now than at any other time in the history of the office."—New York World.

Bench and Bar.

Sir Edward Carson is noted for his ready Irish wit. On one occasion in court when the judge, with whom he had had more than one passage of arms, pointed out to him the discrepancy between the evidence of two of his witnesses, one a carpenter and the other a saloon keeper, he answered: "That's so, my lord. Yet another case of difference between bench and bar."—London M. A. P.

THE DIVA'S RUBY

This message was addressed to Logotheti at his lodgings in London, and Van Torp signed it and gave it to Stemp to be sent at once. Logotheti never went to bed before two o'clock, as he knew, and might very possibly get the telegram the same night.

When his man was gone, Van Torp drew his chair to the open window and sat up a long time thinking about what he had just done; for though he held that all was fair in such a contest, he did not mean to do anything which he himself thought "low down." One proof of this odd sort of integrity was that the telegram itself was a fair warning of his presence in Bayreuth, where Logotheti knew that Margaret was still stopping.

As for the rest, he was quite convinced that it was Kralinsky himself, the ruby merchant, who had suddenly appeared at Bayreuth, and that this man was no other than the youth he had met long ago as a cow-boy in the west, who used to whistle "Parsifal" with his companion in exile, and who, having grown rich, had lost no time in coming to Europe for the very purpose of hearing the music he had always loved so well. And that this man had robbed the poor Tartar girl, Mr. Van Torp had no manner of doubt; and he believed that he had probably promised her marriage and abandoned her; and if this were true, to help her to find Kralinsky was in itself a good action.

CHAPTER VII.

When Van Torp and Logotheti left Mr. Pinney's shop, the old jeweler meant to have a good look at the ruby the Greek had brought him, and was going to weigh it, not merely as a matter of business, for he weighed every stone that passed through his hands from crown diamonds to sparks, but with genuine curiosity, because in a long experience he had not seen very many rubies of such a size, which were also of such fine quality, and he wondered where this one had been found.

Just then, however, two well-dressed young men entered the shop and came up to him. He had never seen either of them before, but their looks inspired him with confidence; and when they spoke, their tone was that of English gentlemen, which all other Englishmen find it practically impossible to imitate, and which had been extremely familiar to Mr. Pinney from his youth. Though he was the great jeweler himself, the wealthy descendant of five of his name in succession, and much better off than half his customers, he was alone in his shop that morning. The truth was that his only son, the sixth Pinney and the apple of his eye, had just been married and was gone abroad for a honeymoon trip, and the head shopman, who was Scotch, was having his month's holiday at Ayrshire, and the second man had been sent for, to clean and restring the duchess of Barchester's pearls at her grace's house in Cadogan Gardens, as was always done after the season, and a couple of skilled workmen for whom Mr. Pinney found occupation all the year round were in the workshop at their tables; wherefore, out of four responsible and worthy men who usually were about, only the great Mr. Pinney himself was at his post.

One of the two well-dressed customers asked to see some pins, and the other gave his advice. The first bought a pin with a small sapphire set in sparks, for ten guineas, and gave only ten pounds for it because he paid cash. Mr. Pinney put the pin into its little morocco case, wrapped it up neatly and handed it to the purchaser. The latter and his friend said good-morning in a civil and leisurely manner, sauntered out, took a hansom a few steps farther down the street, and drove away.

The little paper twist containing Logotheti's ruby was still exactly where Mr. Pinney had placed it on the counter, and he was going to examine the stone and weigh it at last, when two more customers entered the shop, evidently foreigners, and moreover of a sort unfamiliar to the good jeweler, and especially suspicious.

The two were Baraka and her interpreter and servant, whom Logotheti had called a Turk, and who was really a Turkish subject and a Mohammedan, though as to race, he was a half-bred Greek and Dalmatian. Now Dalmatians are generally honest, truthful, and trustworthy, and the low-class Greek of Constantinople is usually extremely sharp, if he is nothing more definitely reprehensible; and Baraka's man was a cross between the two, as I have said, and had been brought up as a Musulman in a rich Turkish family, and recommended to Baraka by the Persian merchant in whose house she had lived. He had been originally baptized a Christian under the name of Spiro, and had been subsequently renamed Salim when he was made a real Moslem at 12 years old, so he used whichever name suited the circumstances in which he was placed. At present he was Spiro.

The interpreter spoke broken but intelligible English. He called Baraka his master and explained that the latter wished to see some rubies, if Mr. Pinney had any, cut or uncut. The young gentleman, he said, did not speak English, but was a good judge of stones.

For one moment the jeweler forgot the little paper twist as he turned towards his safe, pulling out his keys at the same time. To reach the safe he had to walk the whole length of the shop, behind the counter, and before he had gone half way he remembered the stone, turned, came back and slipped it into his waistcoat pocket. Then he went and got the little japanned strong-box with a patent lock, in which he kept loose stones, some wrapped up in little pieces of paper, and some in pill boxes. He brought it to his customers, and opened it before them.

They stayed a long time, and Spiro asked many questions for Baraka, chiefly relating to the sliding scale of prices which is regulated by the weight of the stones where their quality is equally good, and Baraka made notes of some sort in a little English memorandum book, as if she had done it all her life; but Mr. Pinney could not see what she wrote. He was careful, and watched the stones when she took them in her fingers and held them up against the light, or laid them on a sheet of white paper to look at them critically.

She bought nothing, and when she had seen all he had to show her, she thanked him very much through Spiro, said she would come back another day, and went out with a leisurely, oriental gait, as if nothing in the world could hurry her. Mr. Pinney counted the stones again, and was going to lock the box, when his second man came in, having finished stringing the duchess' pearls. At the same moment, it occurred to Mr. Pinney that he might as well go to luncheon, and that he had better put Logotheti's ruby into the little strong-box and lock it up in the safe until he at last had a chance to weigh it. He accordingly took the screw of paper from his waistcoat pocket, and as a matter of formality he undid it once more.

"Merciful Providence!" cried Mr. Pinney, for he was a religious man.

The screw of paper contained a bit of broken green glass. He threw his keys to his shopman without another word, and rushed out into the street without his hat, his keen old face deadly pale, and his beautiful frock-coat flying in his wake.

He almost hurled himself upon a quiet policeman.

"Thief!" he cried. "Two foreigners in gray clothes—ruby worth ten thousand pounds just gone—I'm Pinney the jeweler!"

You cannot astonish a London policeman. The one Pinney had caught looked quietly up and down the street, and then glaced at his interlocutor to be sure that it was he, for he knew him by sight.

"All right," he said quickly, but very quietly. "I'll have them in a minute, sir, for they're in sight still. Better go in while I take them, sir."

He caught them in less than a minute without the slightest difficulty, and by some odd coincidence two other policemen suddenly appeared quite close to him. There was a little stir in the street, but Baraka and Spiro were too sensible and too sure of themselves to offer any useless resistance, and supposing there was some misunderstanding they walked back quietly to Mr. Pinney's shop between two of the policemen, while the third went for a four-wheeler at the nearest stand, which happened to be the corner of Brook street and New Bond street.

Mr. Pinney recognized his late customers without hesitation, and went with them to the police station, where he told his story and showed the piece of green glass. Spiro tried to speak, but was ordered to hold his tongue, and as no rubies were found in their pockets he and Baraka were led away to be more thoroughly searched.

But now, at last, Baraka resisted, and with such tremendous energy that there would have been serious trouble if Spiro had not called out something which at once changed the aspect of matters.

"Master is lady!" he yelled. "Lady, man clothes!"

"That makes a pretty bad case," observed the sergeant, who was superintending. "Send for Mrs. Mowle."

Baraka did not resist when she saw the matron, and went quietly with her to a cell at the back of the station. In less than ten minutes Mrs. Mowle came out and locked the door after her. She was a cheery little person, very neatly dressed, and she had restless bright eyes like a ferret. She brought a little bag of soft deerskin in her hand, and a steel bodkin with a wrought silver handle, such as southern Italian women used to wear in their hair before such weapons were prohibited. Mrs. Mowle gave both objects to the officer without comment.

"Any scars or tattoo-marks, Mrs. Mowle?" he inquired in his business-like way.

"Not a one," answered Mrs. Mowle, who had formerly taken in washing at home and was the widow of a brave policeman, killed in doing his duty.

In the bag there were several screws of paper, which were found to contain uncut rubies of different sizes to a large value. But there was one, much larger than the others, which Mr. Van Torp had not seen that morning. Mr. Pinney looked at it very carefully, held it to the light, laid it on a sheet of paper, and examined it long in every aspect. He was a conscientious man.

"To the best of my belief," he deposed, "this is the stone that was on my counter half an hour ago, and for which this piece of green glass was substituted. It is the property of a customer of mine, Mons. Konstantin Logotheti of Paris, who brought it to me this morning to be cut. I think it may be worth between nine and ten thousand pounds. I can say nothing as to the identity of the paper, for tissue paper is very much alike everywhere."

"The woman," observed the officer in charge of the station, "appears to steal nothing but rubies. It looks like a queer case. We'll lock up the two, Mr. Pinney, and if you will be kind enough to look in to-morrow morning, I'm sure the magistrate won't keep you waiting for the case."

Vastly relieved and comforted, Mr. Pinney returned to his shop. Formality required that the ruby itself, with the others in the bag, should remain in the keeping of the police till the magistrate ordered it to be returned to its rightful owner, the next morning; but Mr. Pinney felt quite as sure of its safety as if it were in the japanned strong-box in his own safe, and possibly even a little more sure, for nobody could steal it from the police station.

But after he was gone, Spiro was heard calling loudly, though not rudely or violently, from his place of confinement.

"Mr. Policeman! Mr. Policeman! Please come speak!"

The man on duty went to the door and asked what he wanted. In his broken English he explained very clearly that Baraka had a friend in London who was one of the great of the earth, and who would certainly prove her innocence, vouch for her character, and cause her to be set at large without delay, if he knew of her trouble.

"What is the gentleman's name?" inquired the policeman.

The name of Baraka's friend was Konstantin Logotheti, and Spiro knew the address of the lodgings he always kept in St. James' place.

"Very well," said the policeman. "I'll speak to the officer at once."

"I thank very much, sir," Spiro answered, and he made no more noise.

The sergeant looked surprised when the message was given to him.

"Queer case this," he observed. "Here's the thief appealing to the owner of the stolen property for help; and the owner is one of those millionaire financiers; and the thief is a lovely girl in man's clothes. By the by, Sampson, tell Mrs. Mowle to get out some women's slops and dress her decently, while I see if I can find Mr. Logotheti by telephone. They'll be likely to know something about him at the bank if he's not at home, and he may come to find out what's the matter. If Mrs. Foxwell should look in and want to see the girl, let her in, of course, without asking me. If she's in town, she'll be here before long, for I've telephoned to her house, as usual when there's a girl in trouble."

There was a sort of standing, unofficial order that in any case of a girl or a young woman being locked up, Mrs. Foxwell was to know of it, and she had a way of remembering a great many sergeants' names, and doing kind things for their wives at Christmas time, which further disposed them to help her in her work. But the London police are by nature the kindliest set of men who keep order anywhere in the world, and they will readily help a man or woman who tries to do good in a sensible, practical way; and if they are sometimes a little prejudiced in favor of their own perspicuity in getting up a case, let that policeman, of any other country, who is quite without fault, throw the first stone at their brave, good-natured heads.

Logotheti was not at his lodgings in St. James' place, and from each of two clubs to which the officer telephoned rather at random, the only answer was that he was a member but not in the house. The officer wrote a line to his rooms and sent it by a messenger, to be given to him as soon as he came in.

She Grasped Lady Maud's Arm.

It was late in the hot afternoon when Mrs. Foxwell answered the message by coming to the police station herself. She was at once admitted to Baraka's cell and the door was closed after her.

The girl was lying on the pallet bed, dressed in a poor calico skirt and a loose white cotton jacket, which Mrs. Mowle had brought and had insisted that she must put on; and her man's clothes had been taken from her with all her other belongings. She sat up, forlorn, pale and lovely, as the kind visitor entered and stood beside her.

"Poor child!" exclaimed the lady, touched by her sad eyes. "What can I do to help you?"

Baraka shook her head, for she did not understand. Then she looked up into eyes almost as beautiful as her own, and pronounced a name, slowly and so distinctly that it was impossible not to hear each syllable.

"Konstantin Logotheti."

The lady started, as well she might; for she was no other than Lady Maud, who called herself by her own family name, "Mrs. Foxwell," in her work amongst the poor women of London.

Baraka saw the quick movement and understood that Logotheti was well known to her visitor. She grasped Lady Maud's arm with both her small hands, and looked up to her face with a beseeching look that could not be misunderstood. She wished Logotheti to be informed of her captivity, and was absolutely confident that he would help her out of her trouble. Lady Maud was less sure of that, however, and said so, but it was soon clear that Baraka did not speak a word of any language known to Lady Maud, who was no great linguist at best. Under these circumstances it looked as if there were nothing to be done for the poor girl, who made all sorts of signs of distress, when she saw that the English woman was about to leave her, in sheer despair of being of any use. Just then, however, the sergeant came to the door, and informed the visitor that the girl had an accomplice who spoke her language and knew some English, and that by stretching a point he would bring the man, if Mrs. Foxwell wished to talk with him.

The result was that in less than half an hour, Lady Maud heard from Spiro a most extraordinary tale, of which she did not believe a single word. To her plain English mind it all seemed perfectly mad at first, and on reflection she thought it an outrageous attempt to play upon her credulity; whereas she was thoroughly convinced that the girl had come to grief in some way through Logotheti and had followed him from Constantinople, probably supporting herself and her companion by stealing on the way. Lady Maud's husband had been a brute, but he knew the east tolerably well, having done some military duty in the Caucasus before he entered the diplomatic service; his stories had chiefly illustrated the profound duplicity of all Asiatics, and she had not seen any reason to disbelieve them.

When Spiro had nothing more to say, therefore, she rose from the only seat there was and shook her head with an air of utter incredulity, mingled with the sort of pitying contempt she felt for all lying in general. She could easily follow the case, by the help of the sergeant and the police court reports, and she might be able to help Baraka hereafter when the girl had served the sentence she would certainly get for such an important and cleverly managed theft. The poor girl implored and wept in vain; Lady Maud could do nothing, and would not stay to be told any more insane stories about ruby mines in Tartary. She called the sergeant, freed herself from Baraka's despairing hold on her hand and went out. And when she thought of what must have gone before, and of the part Logotheti had almost certainly played in the girl's life, her anger was roused, and she sat down and wrote to Margaret on the impulse of the moment. She gave a detailed account of her experience at the police station, including especially a description of the way Baraka had behaved in trying to send a message to Logotheti.

"I tell you quite frankly," Lady Maud wrote in conclusion, "that my friend Mr. Van Torp has begged me very urgently to use any friendly influence I may possess, to induce you to reconsider your engagement, because he hopes that you will accept him instead. You will not think any less well of him for that. A man may ask his best friend to help him to marry the girl he is in love with, I am sure! I told him that I would not do anything to make trouble between you and Logo. If I am making trouble now, by writing all this, it is therefore not to help Mr. Van Torp, but because the impression I have had about Logo has really frightened me, for you. I made such a wretched failure of my own married life that I have some right to warn a friend who seems to be on the point of doing just the same thing. You have a right to be sure that the man you marry is quite free, and that you won't suddenly meet a lovely eastern girl of 20 who claims him after you think he is yours; and your friend has a right to warn you, if she feels sure that he is mixed up in some affair that isn't over yet.

"I don't know where Logo is, but if he were near enough I should go to him and tell him what I think. Of course he is not in town now—nobody is, and I've only stayed on to clear everything out of my house, now that I'm giving it up. I suppose he is with you, though you said you did not want him at Bayreuth! Show him this letter if you like, for I'm quite ready to face him if he's angry at my interference. I would even join you in Paris, if you wanted me, for I have nothing to do and strange to say I have a little money! I've sold almost all my furniture, you know, so I'm not such a total pauper as usual. But in any case answer this, please, and tell me that I have done right, or wrong, just as you feel about it—and then we will go on being friends, or say good-by, whichever you decide."

Lady Maud signed this long letter and addressed it to Miss Margaret Donne, at Bayreuth, feeling sure that it would be delivered, even without the name of the hotel, which she did not know. But the Bayreuth post-office was overworked during the limited time of the performances, and it happened that the extra assistant through whose hands the letter passed, for distribution either did not know that Miss Donne was the famous Cordova, or did not happen to remember the hotel at which she was stopping, or both, and it got pigeon-holed under D, to be called for. The consequence was that Margaret did not receive it until the morning after the performance of "Parsifal" to which she had taken Van Torp, though it had left London only six hours after him; for such things will happen even in extremely well-managed countries when people send letters insufficiently addressed.

Furthermore, it also happened that Logotheti was cooling himself on the deck of his yatch in the neighborhood of Penzance, while poor Baraka was half-stifled in the police station. For the yacht, which was a very comfortable one, though no longer new, and not very fast according to modern ideas, was at Cowes, waiting to be wanted, and when her owner parted from Van Torp after promising to dine on the next day but one, it occurred to him that the smell of the wood pavements was particularly nasty, that it would make no real difference whether he returned to Pinney's at once or in two days, or two weeks, since the ruby he had left must be cut before it was mounted, and that he might just as well take the fast train to Southampton and get to sea for 36 hours. This he did, after telegraphing his sailing-master to have steam as soon as possible; and as he had only just time to reach the Waterloo station he did not even take the trouble to stop at his lodgings. He needed no luggage, for he had everything he wanted on board, and his man was far too well used to his ways to be surprised at his absence.

The consequence of this was that when Baraka's case came up the next morning there was no one to say a word for her and Spiro. Mr. Pinney identified the ruby "to the best of his belief" as the one stolen from his counter, the fact that Baraka had been disguised in man's clothing was treated as additional evidence, and she and Spiro were sent to Brixton jail accordingly. Spiro protesting their innocence all the while in eloquent but disjointed English, until he was told to hold his tongue.

Further, Lady Maud read the police court report in an evening paper, cut it out and sent it to Margaret as a document confirming the letter she had posted on the previous evening; and owing to the same insufficiency in the address, the two missives were delivered together.

Lastly, Mr. Pinney took the big ruby back to his shop and locked it up in his safe with a satisfaction and a sense of profound relief such as he had rarely felt in a long and honorable life; and he would have been horrified and distressed beyond words if he could have even guessed that he had been the means of sending an innocent and helpless girl to prison.

A Word to Mother-in-Laws.

The following is excellent advice, given by a clever woman to a mother-in-law: "The wife is queen of the home. You are but a guest in your son's house. Let your visit be as angels' visits. Your welcome will be more cordial if, when visiting your son, you do not attempt to supervise the kitchen. The sun will rise in the east just the same if the meals are not cooked exactly as you would cook them, and if your son's wife drinks coffee, don't try to reform her, and don't install yourself guardian over her digestive organs. It is surprising how few people die from food that we consider indigestible."

CHICKEN NUISANCE

Health Board Discusses a Law to Regulate Keeping of Poultry.

OTHER STRICT ORDINANCES.

Fifty-two Births, Thirty-three deaths and Eight Marriages During March—Report of Inspectors.

Several ordinances were presented at the monthly meeting of the Board of Health last night, including those covering the keeping of chickens in the city limits, a more effective ordinance to prohibit expectoration in public places and one covering the licensing of manicuring parlors, chiropodists, etc., and providing for a license fee of $1 all of which were announced in The Daily Press of yesterday. It was decided finally to hold a special meeting next week to take action on these proposed ordinances.

The following communicable diseases were reported, together with number of deaths: Scarlet fever, 8; one death; diphtheria, 3; no deaths; typhoid fever, 4; two deaths; tuberculosis, 7; three deaths; measles, 8; no deaths; chicken-pox, 3; no deaths.

There were 132 inspections made in connection with the milk supply and 41 samples of milk were analyzed. The dairies were found to be in fair condition and the analysis of milk were satisfactory. Inspections were made of bakeries, butchershops, dumping grounds, back yards, cellars etc., also on complaint of nuisances, visits to houses with communicable diseases and inspections made of houses for overcrowding. Of the houses inspected for the latter purpose, about 50 per cent. were found to be overcrowded and in these cases, three or four beds had to be removed from several rooms.

There were 78 inspections made in conection with plumbing and 136 in conection with milk supply and 303 in connection with general work. 120 rooms in twenty-four houses were disinfected during the past month, some disinfection being on request of householders. At present thereare only five houses under quarantine for scarlet fever, none for diphtheria.

During the month eight marriages were reported, fifty-two births, three still-births and thirty-three deaths. Of the number of deaths twenty-three were persons over forty years of age.

The following applications for permits were received: Milk, Elwood Farm, W. E. Lambert, successor to Frank M. Smalley; Jacob Paritz and H. Rosenthal to sell from store. The application of Frank Long to sell a few quarts of milk in the city was refused; garbage, Sylvester Cuff and George E. Masenoir, renewals; Chas. Drake, new applicant; scavenger, Joseph F. Burke & Bros., renewal; plumbers' bonds, M. Armstrong, W. R. Conover, Herman Moosbrugger, C. M. Raybert, Hugh Reilly, renewals; Carl Ebel, W. J. Dodd, Joseph Tetlow and Clarence Van Zandt, new applicants.

Chalmers "30" Pony Tonneau, $1600

What to look for in a Motor Car

Now-a-days the buyer of a motor car must ask other questions than "Will it take me there and bring me back?" Any good car of a dozen makes will do that.

But ask these questions before purchasing:

How long will this car keep its youth; its good appearance; its wholesome sound? Will it be economical? Is there an organization back of this car that can make good the guarantee of service? Has this car beauty of line and finish? Refinements? Style? Will it give the utmost comfort at all times?

Will it be a good seller in a year, two years, five years from now? A Chalmers car will be, because our strict one-price policy establishes a standard price for second-hand Chalmers cars. As for the answers to the other questions, we believe the Chalmers company can give better answers than any other company.

Chalmers cars are good cars. You have the word of 14,000 Chalmers owners if you care to ask them. And you have the word of other makers and sellers of cars if you care to ask them.

You have the record of Chalmers cars in all kinds of contests—their crowning victory being the winning of the Glidden Trophy in the longest and most trying tour ever held.

This monogram on the radiator stands for all you can ask in a motor car

THE FORUM.

Editor, The Daily Press:—

I notice that the city fathers have at last awakened to the conditions of our street car service which have long been patent to everybody using this mode of conveyance.

The ordinances so far as they go are all right but several vital points have been overlooked. There is nothing said regarding the sanitary condition of these conveyances nor of the structural condition of the car bodies. Had you ever taken one of the "Hair raising rides" from Netherwood during last summer you will recall how the "upper works" of the cars swung backward and forward with the fluctuating of the motive power. These same cars are in the barns awaiting the warm weather to begin their career of jumping the the track again.

Would it not be well for the Common Council to take the public into their confidence before promulgating such a set of ordinances and have a public hearing on the subject?

I understand that it is the intention of the Public Service Corporation to run the Netherwood line out Fourth street to Arlington avenue and thence to the end of that line. This means that the women and children on stormy days will be compelled to change cars to get to the shopping district and to stand in the rain awaiting some other car to convey them there.

It is said that the Public Service Corporation has done pretty much as it pleased in this city in times gone by. Don't you think its time to call a halt?

SALVATION ARMY CLEARS ITS DEBT

Commander Eva Booth is Among Speakers at Rallies in the Churches.

Undaunted by the sudden snow storm the Salvation Army staff band with the special speakers and soloists brought here for the occasion raised the $1,200 deficit in the mortgage raising fund yesterday and incidentally did some real religious work among the people of this city. Captain Hewitt, with his numerous assistants, was busy throughout the day and when the big meeting at the First Baptist church was started standing room was at a premium. Almost as large a crowd attended the services held in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church and the Park Avenue Baptist church in the evening, while the morning service at the Temple Baptist church was also largely attended.

Commander Miss Eva Booth was the speaker at the First Baptist and Crescent Avenue churches, speaking in the former in the afternoon and in the latter in the evening. Her topics were of the kind which moves the human heart and in both addresses she held the attention of her audiences from beginning to end. At the First Baptist church Miss Booth were received by Mayor George W. V. Moy, who extended to her the welcome by the city. On the platform with Miss Booth and Mayor Moy were Rev. G. R. Maguire. Charles W. McCutchen acted as chairman. The necessary amount to clear off the mortgage on the East Second street barracks was raised with some to spare and consequently the Army people are happy today.

The twentieth anniversary celebration started Saturday evening with a concert at the Y. M. C. A. hall, in which a number of talented musicians, members of the army, entertained a large audience. The net result at this meeting was something over $100, leaving only $1,100 of Saturday's deficit to be made up.

In opening the meeting at the First Baptist church yesterday afternoon Mr. McCutchen said: "We ought all to have full fellowship with the Salvation Army and by coming to the Baptist church prepared to help them you are putting the stamp of approval upon their work. We are all of one family and mutually responsible for each other." He told of the parable of the Good Samaritan and likened the Salvation Army to the innkeeper and the business men of the city to the Samaritan.. If you approve of the Salvation Army you will pay the bill," he said. Mayor Moy was then introduced and in extending a welcome to Miss Booth and her officers he said that the Salvation Army was doing the greatest work in the world—the uplifting of humanity and in so doing is exemplifying the work of the Master. "I would like to see the Salvation Army put out of business, but in the one way that that can be accomplished—have the making of derelicts through sin made impossible by removing the cause."

Commander Miss Booth spoke for nearly an hour giving outlines of the work which she said was being carried on in fifty-six couuntries throughout the world. Hundreds of thousands of men and women have consecrated their lives to the work of the army, many hundreds of them having been lifted out of the slough of despond by the salvationists. "The things accomplished in God's name," she said, "are nothing short of marvelous. For forty-five years since the Army was founded by my father the work of helping the sin-sick back into respectability and restoring them in many cases to their wives and families has continued. Oh yes, it is a wonderful work and worthy of support from all humans. 39,000 children saved in a year! Think of it.. 12,000 men reformed to stay reformed. 18,000 women and girls rescued from lives of degradation. Is it not all worth while? It is the saving power of the Gospel of Jesus Christ which bridges the gulf between God and man."

Commander Booth interspersed several good stories which served to illustrate the points she made. Col. W. A. McIntyre gave out the financial statement, showing that there was needed about $1,000 to finish the subscriptions and Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire immediately got busy to raise it. Between persuasion and cajolery he soon had the pledges of fifty and twenty-five dollars each

MISS BLAZIER DIES AT WAY CROSS, GA.

Miss Minnie Blazier, aged about twenty-six years, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Blazier, of Elmwood place, died on Saturday near Way Cross, Ga., where she had been visiting relatives for more than a year. No particulars concerning her illness have been received by the parents here, but it is the belief that her end was due to a fever prevalent in that part of the south.

Miss Blazier resided on Elmwood place with her parents prior to going south and frequent letters received from her during her protracted stay indicated that she was getting along all right. A few days ago a letter was received that she had been ill, but was better. Saturday morning word came that she was very ill and a little later in the day the information that she was dead. The family is grief-stricken. It will be impossible to bring the remains here for burial and the family cannot reach Way Cross to be of any service or attend the funeral. Besides her parents, Miss Blazier leaves a sister and two brothers in this city.

HARTRIDGE PUPILS AID NEW WARD FUND

The pupils of the Hartridge School held their second annual fair in the auditorium Saturday afternoon for the benefit of the fund for a children's ward at Muhlenberg hospital. It was very successful in every way, eclipsing last year's record when $335 was realized. Saturday's proceeds reached the grand total of $360. The young people were immensely pleased at the outcome.

The fair was in progress from 3 until 6 o'clock and during that time there was a large attendance who patronized the various attractions. These were attractively arranged about the auditorium and tastefully decorated to conform with the articles for sale. The tables were presided over by the respective grades as follows:

Fourth and fifth academic, candy and flowers; third academic, refreshments, served on tables placed on the stage; first and second academic, useful articles; fifth, sixth and seventh elementaries, fancy articles; fourth elementary, hardware and kitchen articles; third elementary, fruit; second elementary, Japanese goods; first elementary, toys and novelties.

The boys were all on the lower floor, where ideas of their own were revealed in peanut stands, fish ponds, side shows and bowling games. Each one had something to look after individually and the competition for business was strong. This department contributed a large amount to the proceeds.

Practically everything was sold before the closing hour came. The proceeds will materially swell the fund, which will soon be large enough to begin operations.

INSTITUTE HEAD ON KENTUCKY'S FEUDS

Rev. J. A. Burns, president of Oneida Baptist Institute, Oneida, Ky., occupied the pulpit of the First Baptist church, yesterday morning, and gave an interesting talk on his work in the mountain regions of Kentucky. He gave a vivid description of the feud spirit which prevailed in some sections, telling of its true origin, meaning and some results and how through the work of Oneida Institute much of this has disappeared.

The institute was founded in 1899 by Mr. Burns and a dozen uneducated mountaineers, and since that time has grown continually. It has property valued at $70,000 in a village with three hundred people; has built up a church with a membership of 200; has furnished 70 per cent. of the teachers of the public schools in Clay county and adjoining counties; has given to hundreds of boys and girls all the education they possess and in this way extended the influence of education and an intelligent gospel to hundreds of mountain homes and thousands of mountain people. During the past year 524 students were enrolled. The plant was provided and equipped by the Baptists of Kentucky and other States and the running expenses have been obtained largely from the same source.

The afternoon session will begin at 2 o'clock with addresses by Miss Elda G. Patterson, of China and Miss Margaret Hodge, president of the Philadelphia board. A Young People's conference will be held at 3:30 o'clock, in charge of Miss Stevenson, of Roselle.

PALM SUNDAY SERVICES IN THE LOCAL CHURCES

Great congregations gathered at the morning services in the Episcopal and Roman Catholic churches, yesterday. Palm Sunday, which marks in history the entry of Christ into Jerusalem, is always celebrated with conspicuous solemnity and yesterday was no exception to the rule. It is doubtful if any larger congregation ever attended a service in Grace church, where the rector, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, conducted the service and preached the sermon.

At Holy Cross there was another large attendance as there was at Heavenly Rest and St. Stephen's. Palms were distributed at the conclusion of each service.

In St. Mary's Roman Catholic church the usual five masses were celebrated, beginning at 6:30 o'clock in the morning. At the 10:30 mass which was celebrated by Father Hogan the procession of the sanctuary boys took place and after the blessing of the palms they were distributed by the boys. Palms were also distributed at the 3 o'clock and 8 o'clock service. At the 3 o'clock service there was given the solemn benediction.

At St. Joseph's church in North Plainfield, Rev. William H. Miller celebrated mass at 8:30 and 10:30 o'clock in the morning at both of which services the Palms were blessed and distributed, in the evening vespers at 8 o'clock the solemn benediction was given. Father Miller conducted both services.

Tonight at the High School auditorium the Stevens Institute Glee Club from Hoboken will give one of their famous entertainments. Harrison and $154 for domestic missions. The school also supported a pupil, Miss Lucy Price, at Annville, Ky.

Cantata at Grace Tonight.

In Grace Episcopal church this evening the cantata "Olivet to Calvary," will be sung by the choir. The preparatory work for this musical service, so appropriate to the season, under the direction of S. Frederick Smith, would indicate that the singing of the cantata this evening will be an improvement over its rendering las year. Mr. Smith has taken squads of his young singers to New York on two occasions recently so that they might get a better understanding of the music.

Easter Sunrise Meeting.

SABBATH'S HELPS

Rev. John Y. Broek Says That Sunday Postoffices Are Unnecessary.

LAUDS POSTMASTER GENERAL.

Sunday Newspapers and Sunday Excursions Are a Great Bane to Sabbath Observance, He Says.

"The Sabbath Question," was the subject of an interesting discourse delivered by Rev. J. Y. Broek at Trinity Reformed church last night, in which he referred to the country-wide movement to close the postoffices on Sunday; as well as baneful influence of the Sunday newspaper and other things tend to detract a man's mind from religious worship. His text was taken from Matthew 12:12: "How much then is a man better than a sheep, wherefore it is lawful to do well on the Sabbath Day." In part Mr. Broek said:

"The disciples were critized by the censorious Pharisees for doing what they considered unnecessary work on the Sabbath day. The disciples had very little to say for themselves, but Jesus answered the cavil of the Pharisees that merciful acts are permitted.. That the Sabbath day is a necessity as a day of rest cannot be questioned. Certain work is required and permitted on the Sabbath day: Religious work, work of necessity and works of benevolence and mercy. Religious work is not only permitted but required as well. Any work proven to be absolutely necessary is permitted.

"How much unnecessary work is done on the Sabbath. Sunday saloons, ball games, Sunday industries, Sunday excursions and the Sunday newspaper are the great bane to Sabbath observance and are not necessary. In dealing with the problems we should exercise the spirit of Jesus. In maintaining such unnecessary work we are compelling many persons to work on the Sabbath, and if we have the spirit of Jesus we will feel that it is wrong to compel a man to hold his position to labor on Sunday.

"We should show mercy and consideration to our fellow-men. A great deal of unnecessary work arises from our ignorance of the meaning of Scripture. When Christ healed the withered man's hand he showed mercy and emphasized the necessity of showing mercy by an illustration. If a sheep fell into a pit on the Sabbath day, would they not lift it out. Man should show mercy to a brute beast on the Sabbath. Christ adds, how much better is a man than a sheep or how much more ought you to show mercy to a fellow-man on Sunday.

"Sunday postoffices are unnecessary. I understand that an order to close the postoffice of this city is to be issued by the postmaster general to be effective April 23. I believe that the postmaster general's noble stand should be upheld by every self-respecting Christian of this comunity. This action should be commended for three reasons. It gives the men in the postoffice a Sunday's rest; it shows mercy to them; it frees the busines man from a batch of business cares and permits him to come to his Monday's work in a happy frame of mind; it protects the Christian busines men from unfair advantage by non-Christian business men.

"I am told on good authority that many non-Christian business men receive letters on Sunday morning containing orders; that these orders are filled behind closed blinds and are on the way to their destination by the time the Christian merchant gets his mail by the Monday morning delivery. The effect of this in time will be to force the Christian merchant to do likewise or drive him to the wall."

Mr. Broek in conclusion quoted the following from a newspaper regarding conditions in the postoffice at Detroit:

"It happened that we were the first large city in the country to take this step," said Mr. Warren to The Evening Press, "and the new plan works so perfectly that I begin to think it may be adopted very largely in other cities. After a month's test we find that the people of Detroit are with us unanimously. I never saw a radical change adopted that proved instantly such a happy hit as this."

Originally the postoffice was kept open for Sunday deliveries from noon to 1 o'clock. Under that plan there was a regular procession of business men calling for their mail on their way home from church. Many have said that they did not give letters careful consideration, but merely opened and glanced at them and then had them to carry down to the office Monday morning. When the hour was changed to 9 o'clock Sunday morning there was

ORDER OF SERVICES FOR ST. STEPHEN'S

Services in St. Stephen's church during the week will be as follows: Tomorrow, Wednesday and Thursday Holy Communion at 10 o'clock each morning. On Good Friday litany and altar service at 10 o'clock in the morning; from 12 o'clock until 3, three hours devotion. At 8 o'clock in the evening there will be evensong and sermon. On Saturday there will be a children's service at 10 o'clock in the morning and at 4 o'clock in the afternoon evensong and public baptism.

Easter Sunday morning there will be two services—Holy Communion at 7:30 o'clock and Holy Communion and sermon at 11 o'clock. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon there will be a children's service at which the Easter carols will be sung.

GET AT THE CAUSE, NOT AT THE EFFECT

Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, who is much interested in the work being accomplished by the Salvation Army, delivered a sermon at his church last night on the subject, "Our Lord's Interest in the Common People,' which had a bearing on the services held in this city by the Salvation Army. Dr. Herring spoke in part as follows:

"We are all interested in the great work the Salvation Army is doing in the world, and this has been brought very powerfully to our attention today. It is a great agency for the saving of wrecked lives, and we rejoice in every effort which is being made to restore men after they have become bad; but we should also be tremendously interested in destroying the conditions that make them bad.

"It will be a fine thing when the Princess Irene is released from the treacherous sandbar off Fire Island, but a greater thing would be done if we could dredge out the bar and make future wrecks impossible. We are saying today that we should not only seek to help a man who has tuberculosis but to annihilate the conditions which produce that disease.

"Some of us are saying, let us not only try to save a man when he is a drunkard, but wipe out the saloon, which makes him a drunkard. The spirit of the 'Prince of Peace' is taking hold of us in our effort to abolish war and thus saving the lives of men. But the church has still a greater effort before it, and that is to preach the need of the kingdom of God upon earth. The great trouble with the world today and the prime cause of its restlessness is man's inhumanity to man. We do not have combines whose aim is to make the conditions of life easier for the many, but that the selfish few may become richer.

"The vested interests have so much power that even when there is abundant food and plenty of work for men, they can hold it back. It is because that nominally Christian men are partners and sometimes prime movers of such schemes that it becomes difficult to preach the Gospel to the people. The only thing worth fighting for on this earth is for that which will bless humanity. A recent and popular writer ends his book: 'Why I am a Socialist," with these words, that what is needed in the world today 'is merely the practical application of the doctrine of Jesus Christ.'"

Mrs. Blimm's Funeral.

Following a high mass of requiem at St. Mary's church this morning at which Rev. B. M. Bogan officiated, the remains of Mrs. Joseph C. Blimm were interred in St. Mary's cemetery. A great number of floral pieces were sent by friends and relatives. Mrs. Blimm died on Friday last and was mourned by friends who had known her for many years. The pallbearers were John Traynor, Joseph Harrigan, Samuel Robinson, George Clark, Henry Brentnall and George Neal.

Plan Good Friday Service.

In view of the fact that there will be no Union Good Friday service here this year, Rev. Royal A. Stout, pastor of the Netherwood Reformed church, has decided to hold such a service at his church. Rev. J. F. Searle, president of the New Brunswick Theological Seminary, will deliver the sermon and Rev. Mr. Stout and Rev. Dr. Robert Craig will assist. There will be music by a quartet.

"MAYOR" ANDERSON CONDUCTED A RAID

"Mayor" W. delaR. Anderson, of the Township of North Plainfield, personally conducted a raid yesterday on a gambling joint in Hand's brick-yard, capturing three of the crap prayers out of the 100 engaged in the game. He was assisted in the work by Chief or Police E. T. Canning and Officers Albert Perrett, Jr., and Charles Meyers, the latter of Scotch Plains.

The three captives were led to the town hall, where Judge Hughes immediately convened court. The men were fined $2 each and released after their pedigrees were taken..

It is the opinion of Mayor Anderson that the gamblers who find Plainfield too warm for them had decided that the brick-yard district was an admirable place in which to indulge in their risky sport, but the tip was too certain to be neglected and the raid made. Warrants will be issued for a number of those who made their escapes through the many exits of the old building. It was a nervy thing for four men to do and the Mayor said this morning he thought the raid would put a stop to gambling in his bailiwick.

HIGH SCHOOL'S GIRLS SEEN IN TWO PLAYS

Two cleverly acted plays were given by the members of the Girls' Athletic Association of the Plainfield High School on Saturday evening—"Six Cups of Chocolate" and "The Lamentable Tragedy of Julius Caesar." The auditorium was nearly filled and as the plays were given for the benefit of the association the club treasury must have gained a goodly sum.

In the first named play the cast was made up of Misses Anna Smith, Ruth Douglas, Esther H. Phillips, Elizabeth Hardwicke, Carolyn Mehl, Anne R. Johnston and Alice Van Horne. Every part was well taken and the actresses were heartily applauded. The music for the plays was arranged by Miss Helen E. Pearce.

The second play convulsed the big audience. Every one of the twenty-one young women getting the most out of her lines and the principals doing really excellent comedy work. Those who took part were: Pauline M. Gates, Dorothy Smith, Margaret M. Russell, Alice Peacock, Elsa R. Schwed, Jessie Stewart, Madoline Durar, Madolyn Moy, Carolyn G. Slauson, Neva Waldorf, Marion Wean, Celia Cottrell, Frederika Quentin, with the following citizens: Mabel Loizeaux, Katharine Webster, Gertrude Butler, Hazel Moore, Margaret Hutchinson, Marion Wean, Carolyn Slauson and Jeanette Neighbor.

FEAST OF PASSOVER BEGINS ON WEDNESDAY

On Wednesday evening at sundown Hebrews all over the world will begin celebrating the Feast of the Passover. The feasts lasts eight days and is commemorative of the escape of the Jews from Egyptian bondage. It begins in the Jewish calendar month, Nissan and 14th day, the year being 5,671.

On the evenings of the first two days the father of each family sits at the head of the table and after the history of the escape across the river Jordan, the Song of Solomon (Shir Has-Ashirim) is sung by the family. Abstention from all leavened bread is one of the acts of self-denial practiced at this time.

First—To raise money and provide for the payment and retirement of bonds to the amount of $250,000 issued by The Plainfield Water Supply Company and secured by mortgage dated May 1, 1891, which bonds mature on the first day of May, 1911.

Second—To raise money and provide for the payment and retirement of bonds to the amount of $135,000, issued by Union Water Company and secured by mortgage dated August 1, 1892, which bonds mature on the first day of August, 1912.

Third—To raise money (1) for the purpose of acquiring lands, water-rights and sources of water supply; (2) to pay for the construction of dams, reservoirs and appurtenances; (3) for the purpose of developing, extending and enlarging sources of water supply; (4) to pay the cost of filter plants, and other plants, property, machinery and implements for the purification and preservation of water; (5) to pay for buildings, boilers, pumps, engines and machinery of all kinds for pumping water for domestic and public use; (6) to pay for mains, pipes, hydrants and all appurtenances necessary or proper for transporting water from any source or sources of supply to the place or places where the same is needed for public or private use, and for distributing the same; (7) to provide and pay for extensions, improvements, reconstruction, equipment, lettermen and enlargement of all water-works and plants now owned and that may hereafter be acquired or constructed by the water company; (8) to pay for all real and personal property, rights, privileges and franchises that may be necessary or proper for the extension, enlargement and operation of the property, plant or plants, now owned and hereafter acquired by the water company, and all appurtenances thereto; (9) to acquire the property, plants, works and franchises of any other water company or companies, individuals or corporations; and (10) to pay for all labor and material required, and debts or obligations contracted and loans effected for any and all of the purposes and objects above stated.

After paying the bonds due May 1st next and August 1, 1912, bonds to the amount of $2,615,000 will be available for enlarging the plant of the company and obtaining an additional supply of water. The territory supplied by the company is growing rapidly and it is believed that large expenditures of money must be made during the next few years in order that the supply may keep ahead of the demand. The authorized issue of bonds, after paying bonds now outstanding, will be sufficient to provide for an expenditure of at least $125,000 on an average for the next twenty years. The Plainfield Water Supply Company and Union Water Company were consolidated about four years ago.

Heating Problems Solved

HERE is the furnace that heats the house from first floor to the attic—makes no dust—little ash, and less bother. A BOYNTON "square pot" furnace will give summer temperature in zero weather, on a surprisingly small amount of coal. It's the square fire pot that does it. The never smothers out because the fire pot is full of ash and cinder. A turn of the BOYNTON ash cutting grate clears the fire completely. The BOYNTON has a capacious square cornered ash pit, that you can shovel out clean. BOYNTON boilers—for house, school, or church heating—have this same economical fire pot. Here Are Easter Hats

For a multitude of women—and, think of it! They are going to be sold right now—the week before Easter—at prices far below their worth.

True—and a most astonishing move on our part, but it came about thru a New York importer and manufacturer of high-class millinery who had accumulated too much trimmed stock because of the cool weather, and who solicited our aid, and offered concessions if we would relieve him of a considerable quantity of the hats that were already trimmed. We took several hundred of them, and today we started this sale, just in time to bring you beautiful Easter hats at remarkably low prices.

There are hats of all sizes and kinds in this collection—small, medium and large shapes, trimmed in becoming manner with pretty flowers, dashing feathers and wings, and lovely ribbons, novelties, etc. These hats were designed to retail at from $8 to $50, but this is how we will sell them:

$8 Effects at only $3.95.

$10 to $12 Effects at $5.95.

BASEBALL.

The second team of the New York Yankees defeated the Jersey City Skeeters at Jersey City Friday afternoon in an interesting game by a score of 10 to 9. Warhop, Revelle and Brockett were on the firing line for the New Yorkers, while Manager Ryan, of the Skeeters, used Bartly, Kissinger and Jones on the mound.

Schmidt, who is playing the initial hassock for the Baltimore Orioles, has been batting at a great clip in the practise games this season. In the game against the Giants Friday at Baltimore he poled out three safe drives out of four times up.

Charles Webb Murphy, president of the Chicago Cubs, announced at Chicago Friday night that the Phillies would be the opponents of the Cubs on the day the National League pennant is raised in the Windy City. The date was not announced, but it will probably be on the first trip of the Phillies to Chicago.

The New York Giants defeated the Orioles Friday afternoon at Baltimore by a score of 9 to 4. The National Leaguers put the game on ice in the eighth inning by sending seven runs over the pan.

Pitcher Krause, of the Athletics, who is playing with the second division team, is hitting the ball at a .300 clip on the training trip, besides twirling a high class brand of ball. He made three hits against the Richmond team Friday, including a circuit drive, which was his second of the week. While he was on the mound the southpaw allowed but three hits.

Earl Moore, of the Phillies, has been selected by Manager Dooin to pitch the opening game of the season against the Giants at New York on Wednesday. Moore has always proved to be a stumbling block to the Giants.

Frank Hudson Weiman, the three-year-old son of F. S. Weiman, of Newark, will present Manager Joe McGinnity, of the Newarks, with a gilded horseshoe as an omen of good luck on the day of the Eastern League opening, April 20. The presentation will take place as the line of march is ready to start. Master Weiman, whose father is an ardent Newark rooter, will be attired in a regulation Indian costume.

The Athletics won the fourth game of the interleague series from the Philadelphia Nationals, Friday afternoon, by a score of 8 to 4. The world champions put up a classy exhibition of ball. The series now stands 3 to 1 in favor of the American Leaguers.

The Detroit Tigers had no trouble in defeating the Reds at Cincinnati Friday afternoon by a score of 12 to 5. The athletes of Ban Johnson's organization rapped out sixteen safe bingles. Ralph Stroud, the Dover boy, pitched part of the game for the American Leaguers, and gave a good account of himself.

GOLF.

In an endeavor to ascertain the form of competition most desired by the New York Athletic Club golfers for their first tournament, to be held over the Fox Hills links, probably on May 17, 18 and 19, A. H. Pogson, chairman of the committee, is sending a postal card to all members of the winged foot organization. The queries are as follows:

"Do you play golf? Do you suggest a one-day medal play tournament or a three-day match play tournament (the latter probably with cups for each completed sixteen)? Please give briefly any suggestions"

Colonel Robert M. Thompson, president of the New York Athletic Club, has offered a cup for the golf championship of the organization; also a trophy for those more than fifty years old.

When the members of the Eastern Professional Golfers' Association gather in New York for their first spring meeting two important matters will come up for discussion. One has to do with the place for holding the next championship tournament and the other is with regard to playing conditions. Concerning the second condition it is worthy of mention that Alec Smith, present national and metropolitan open title-holder, stayed out of the Eastern last year because of the innovation of a combination of medal and match play. Most of the nearby "pros," however, seem to favor the idea of again fighting it out at match play. They also appear to be of one mind that it would be better to hold the tournament in this section rather than go over Boston way.

World's Bowling Record.

Toronto, Ont., April 10.—The world's tournament record for a five-man bowling team was broken here Friday night at the Canadian Bowling Association's meeting, when the B. B. C. team, of Toronto, rolled a total of 3,034. The last game was 1,061, an average of 210 for each member of the team.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church will meet tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, when an interesting program will be offered.

The postponed meeting of the Epworth League of the First M. E. church will be held in Vincent chapel Friday night at 8 o'clock, when the officers will submit reports.

The annual parish meeting of the First Baptist church will be held Wednesday night, when reports will be presented and two trustees will be elected. This will be the ninety-third annual meeting.

Mrs. J. A. Chambliss, Miss Laura J. Runyon and Mrs. George F. White have been chosen as representatives of the First Baptist church on the board of managers for the Baptist Home for the Aged at Newark.

The Junior Epworth League of the First M. E. church will meet in Vincent chapel Friday afternoon, when Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor, will give an appropriate talk to the children relative to Good Friday.

Presence of mind in seizing a steam pipe when his clothes caught in machinery at the plant of Evans & Levering, wool scourers, 217 Atlantic avenue, Camden, late Friday afternoon, saved Stanley Kolaski, seventeen years old, of 1059 Diamond street, from being whirled to death. He held to the pipe until his clothes were badly torn and at the Homeopathic Hospital it was found that he had escaped with a lacerated scalp and body bruises.

Relatives in Italy are fighting over the estate of Domenico Chiarrello, who was killed at the plant of the Independent Brick Company in Trenton. The man died penniless, but a settlement was made between the administrator of the estate and the brick company, and it is this money that has caused the trouble. In Mercer Orphans' Court Friday action was delayed for three months to get affidavits from the widow and other relatives in Italy. An application for an accounting was made by the Italian Government for the relatives.

Thomas Davis Judson, son of, Mr. and Mrs. John Judson, of John street is convalescing from the grip.

NEW PASTOR AT GRACE M.E. CHURCH

Rev. C. C. Cain, formerly of Oxford Furnace, who was appointed pastor of Grace M. E. church to succeed Rev. O. J. Shoop, preached his first sermon before the congregation yesterday morning. Owing to the weather conditions the attendance was kept down but he was welcomed by a large audience.

Mr. Cain selected his text from Matthew 17:17, "and Christ said, 'Bring Him Hither to Me.'" His sermon was an excellent discourse on sin and redemption and the Savior's powed to aid those who seek release. He is an able speaker and made a very favorable impression.

Mr. Cain again occupied the pulpit in the evening and addressed another large congregation.

The former pastor of the church, Rev. O. J. Shoop, attended a service in New York yesterday and will assume charge at the Mount Pleasant M. E. church, Pittsburg, next Sunday. He will remove his family and household effects from the borough Wednesday. Mr. Cain will take possession of the parsonage Friday.

FEW OF THE RIDERS WERE IN AT FINISH

The weekly chase of the Watchung Hunt Club, Saturday afternoon, took a number of riders over a territory covering about ten miles and was much enjoyed. The riders met at South Plainfield. The scent was found on the Garrison farm and the chase was a lively one, circling around to Metuchen and finishing at New Market.

The going was over a stiff country, made heavy by the recent rains, and only the veterans were able to finish. A couple of grooms riding green hunters came to grief over a stiff four railer, but were not seriously injured. Henry C. Rose, of New York, up on "Molly," an imported Irish hunter, performed exceptionally well.

Those who finished and their mounts:

Rufus C. Finch, M. F. H., "All Alone;" C. E. S. Bellows, "McGregor;" J. J. O'Donahue, "Lion Heart;" W. H. Wildey, "Chaperone;" Harry Finch, "Manifesto;" Henry C. Rose, "Molly;" Marshall Clapp, "Prince Henry;" Stanley Bellows, "Mechanic;" Henry Watkins, huntsman, "White Heather."

WATCH THE DAILY PRESS BULLETIN FOR THE SCORES.

Both the National and American League baseball seasons will open on Wednesday and as usual The Daily Press has made arrangements for posting the scores on the bulletin in front of the office each night after the games.

Prompt services will be given and those wishing to get the results of the contests should watch The Daily Press bulletin each night. The nearby games on the opening day will be Philadelphia in New York, in the National League and New York in Philadelphia in the American League.

Bible Class Team Defeated.

The baseball team recently organized from among the members of William N. Runyon's Bible class at the Park Avenue Baptist church was defeated at Crescent Oval, Saturday afternoon by a score of 12 to 5, by the Ramblers, of North Plainfield. It was the first game for both teams, and the playing was not remarkably brilliant. At the conclusion of the contest there was an argument as to the ownership of the ball and it was finally awarded to the Bible class team.

In the Borough Court.

The following cases were disposed of in the borough court, this morning: Theodore Wilson, disorderly conduct at his home on Regent street, fined $3; George Ferguson, disorderly conduct, fined $3; Sheridan Jones, drunk and disorderly, fined $2. Jones' fine was made light as he has been on his good behavior for some time.

TURN VEREIN'S TEAM WANTS SOME GAMES

The Gesang and Turn Verein baseball team has reorganized for the coming season and has elected N. Luthman as manager. Last year the team was one of the strongest in this section, meeting and defeating the West Ends, Netherwoods, Franklin F. C., of Perth Amboy, Y. M. C. A., of Garwood, Arions, of Somerville, and finishing the season with thirty-two victories out of thirty-nine games. This year's team will be the same as that of last year with a few exceptions. E. Luthman will cover first base, while Hansen, Hann and N. Luthman will cover second, short and third respectively. Ayres will cover left field and the following will try for right and centre: A. Thorn, S. Montross, A. Cowling, C. Allen and C. Hammeal. Manager Luthman and E. Montross will do the twirling. Former State Comptroller Henry J. West, of Gloucester City, who has been on a pleasure trip through the Western States, has returned and was given an old-fashioned welcome home at the rooms of the Gloucester Republican Club Friday night.

On Tuesday at noon the West Jersey Proprietors will meet, as did their forefathers since the landing of Penn, along the river at the foot of Market street, Gloucester City, to renew their allegiance to England in the ancient way and to elect officers to serve the ensuing year.

STUART FREEMAN HELD GIANTS DOWN

Stuart Freeman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Freeman, of South avenue, who will probably be one of the principal pitchers on the Varsity baseball team at Yale, this season, made a fine showing for his team against the Giants at the Polo Grounds, Saturday afternoon. McGraw's men got six hits off Freeman's delivery, but several errors assisted them materially to score their runs.

Freeman won his "Y" last year and is slated to do most of the twirling for his team this year. His two brothers, Howard and Edgar Freeman, are also members of the baseball squad, but have not been picked for the 'Varsity. It is quite natural that the Freeman boys should have baseball talent for their father was the first man to pitch a curved ball in this city and at that time it was one of the nine-day wonders. As members of the Plainfield High School baseball team, both Stuart and Howard Freeman did exceptionally good work.

ARMY CLEARS DEBT

coming in and before he finished the collections amounted to $578, leaving less than $500 to be obtained. This was accomplished at the three church offerings in the evening and it is believed that the total will reach $7,100.

At the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church Commander Booth was greeted by another large audience. Her subject was "Omnipotence Ungloved," the text being Isaiah 59:1. She gave an eloquent address depicting the weakness of the bare human hand as compared with the hand of God. For over an hour she held the great congregation spell-bound.

Colonel William Peart addressed an immense audience in the Park Avenue Baptist church in the evening. Many who wanted to hear him were turned away after the doors to the Sunday-school room had been opened and the place filled with people. The speaker's text was taken from 1 Timothy, 1:15. Through the persuasiveness of Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, the pastor, the collection was large.

At the First M. E. church, Colonel Jenkins, one of the visiting officers of the Army, spoke to several hundred people from Matthew 11:28. He was given the closest attention, and gave his hearers an excellent interpretation of the text.

The mortgage extinction campaign was fathered by a committee of citizens of which Charles W. McCutchen was chairman and comprised the following: H. H. Pond, treasurer, and State Senator E. R. Ackerman, Geo. L. Babcock, G. A. Chapman, R. H. Depew, Alexander Gilbert, Arthur M. Harris, George E. Hall, Alexander Millar, Percy H. Stewart, William Palmer Smith, and Mrs. Frederick G. Mead and Mrs. Percy H. Stewart. There were forty vice presidents, including the above, who endorsed the movement.

"Every department of this postoffice will be closed Sundays except the general delivery, which will be open from 9 to 10 a. m. for transients only."

"Everybody is delighted with the new plan," said Mr. Warren. "Men write and speak personally, telling how they used to get a batch of business cares in the Sunday mail, and because they had the time, with less to do, they worried more on Sunday than any other day and came to their Monday work in anything but a happy frame of mind. Now they forget business all day Sunday, take it out in rest and are fresh for work Monday.

RUSSIA'S JESTER.

Balakireff Is the Joe Miller of the Muscovites.

HIS WIT TICKLES THE BEAR.

He Was the Court Fool That Many a Time Braved the Anger of Peter the Great—His Miracle of the Sword and a Wondrous Deed of Daring.

Every nation has its typical jester, around whom crystallize all the floating stories of a people. Thus England has its Joe Miller, Germany its Till Eulenspiegel, Italy its Punchinello, the orient its Nasreddin el Khoja and Russia its Balakireff. Like Joe Miller, the last was a real character, though not all the jokes credited to him were his own. Some were inventions of a later age; others were borrowed from the past. He shares the credit for many of the latter with Joe Miller and Eulenspiegel.

History records that Balakireff was the favorite jester of Peter the Great. Tradition represents him as the constant company of that czar, frequently exercising his wit at royal expense. One day, for example, a cousin of his had fallen under the czar's displeasure and was sentenced to death. Balakireff undertook to obtain a reprieve. The czar guessed his errand even before he opened his mouth.

"No!" he cried. "'Tis no use your coming here. I swear that I will not grant what you are going to ask!"

Balakireff dropped at once to his knees. "Peter Alexeivitch," he cried, "I pray you, put to death that scamp of a cousin of mine!"

Peter, thus caught in his own trap, had no choice but to laugh and send a pardon to the culprit.

On another occasion Balakireff asked that he might be enrolled among his master's domestic guards. Peter consented for the sake of the joke, but warned his jester that death was the penalty if any officer of the guards absented himself from his post or mislaid his sword. Then to test the volunteer he sent him up a flagon of wine to "moisten his commission." Balakireff, as was expected, drank to the intoxicating point. While he was sleeping off his debauch the czar himself crept into the room and carried off his sword from the scabbard. Balakireff, though badly scared, on awaking made shift to replace the missing weapon with his own wooden imitation of the guardsmen's sword. He was called to parade next morning, when Peter feigned hot indignation at the untidiness of one of the guards.

"Captain Balakireff," he cried at last, "draw your sword and cut off the head of that sloven!"

Balakireff cast his eyes up to heaven. "Oh, merciful God," he prayed, "grant that my sword may turn into wood before I use it on one of my own fellow soldiers!"

And, lo, when he unsheathed it the blade stood revealed as a wooden one. Peter laughed heartily at the knave's presence of mind and restored him to favor.

A more serious offense resulted in the banishment of the jester. "Never dare to appear again on Russian soil!" stormed the emperor. Judge then of Peter's surprise when, a week later, he beheld his old favorite coolly driving a cart past the palace.

"How dare you disobey me?" shouted the enraged monarch. "Did I not forbid you ever to show yourself on Russian soil?"

"Nay," replied Balakireff, "I have not disobeyed you. This is not Russian soil."

"How say you—not Russian soil?"

"Truly not. This cartload of earth on which I am sitting is Swedish soil. I dug it up in Finland only the other day."

Again the czar laughed uproariously and readmitted his buffoon to favor. Some historians add that when he heard the excuse he said, "If Finland be Swedish soil now it shall be Russian before long," a threat he was not slow to fulfill.

This story, however, was an old one long before the time of Balakireff. It forms the twenty-seventh adventure of Till Eulenspiegel, who is reputed to have died in 1350. Having offended the Duke of Lunenberg, Till was "forbidden the land." He purchased a shilling's worth of earth to fill his cart with, and, being duly challenged by the duke, he answered:

"My gracious lord, I am not in your land, but in mine own, wherein I do sit. I bought it of a boor for a shilling. And rightfully could he sell it, for from his forefathers he inherited it. So is this truly my land."

At the close of one of Czar Peter's campaigns Balakireff overheard some Russian officers boasting of exploits they had performed.

"Nay," he cried, "I can tell a better story than any of you." And, being pressed for the story, he continued:

"Never have I liked this modern way of fighting all in a body together. Surely it would be more manly for each to stand by himself. Therefore went I out alone in search of adventures. One day while reconnoitering near the enemy's outposts I espied a Swedish soldier lying on the ground. Before he could rise and give the alarm I rushed upon him and with one blow from my sword cut off his right foot."

"You fool!" cried one of his auditors. "Why did you not cut off his head?"

"So would I have done," retorted Balakireff, "except that somebody else had already done it."—Washington Star.

CONVENTIONS IN MUSIC.

Rules Which Song Composers Seem to Feel They Must Follow.

Why is it that all our musicians in writing a nautical song invariably use a portion of the best known hornpipe as the introduction, "vamp," or counter-melody? Why do the open fifths in the bass always appear in rustic songs? Because it can't be helped, it seems. Our popular Irish songs always have a bar or two of a well known old Irish melody or a drone bass, otherwise they wouldn't be Irish. The exhausted old Turkey and his partner, the straw, come to the rescue of every "rube" song or dance that is perpetrated, and our national airs must run all through the accompaniment of patriotic songs to give them "flavor."

Because all of these things are "set" they are conventions. Why must every song end on the tonic note, with the preceding tone either the second or seventh of the scale, unless we except the detestable third or the hollow fifth? Because our audiences expect it.

Should one of your composers in a moment of bravery or recklessness produce a score in which he disregarded these many conventions his first night hearers would go away remarking that the music was crazy. They do not realize that they expect to hear the same old thing, served up a trifle differently, of course, but still the same.—From "Where Have I Heard That Tune Before?" in Metropolitan Magazine.

TELESCOPE LENSES.

The Small Glass Magnifies the Picture Made by the Large One.

People sometimes wonder why a telescope has two glasses, one at the big end and one at the little end, and they want to know the difference. The glass at the big end is to gather light. It is simply a big eye. If it is a hundred times bigger than the eye in your head it will gather a hundred times more light. It gathers the rays of light coming from a star and bends them all into a common meeting point called a focus, which is a picture of the star. You can look at this picture of the star with your naked eye if you like. But you can see it better and examine it more closely if you look at it with a small magnifying glass. And this is the glass at the small end of the telescope. It magnifies the picture made by the big glass at the other end of the instrument. All telescopes are built on this principle. Sir William Herschel was the first to arrange matters a little differently. He took away the glass from the big end and admitted the rays coming straight into the tube in parallel lines. Then at the bottom of the big tube he placed a bright concave mirror made of burnished metal. When the entering rays fell upon this mirror they were again bent to a point called a focus, which was the picture of the star. To look at this picture he had to place the little magnifying glass at the side of the tube because the mirror had stopped up its lower end. —Louisville Courier-Journal.

Something Blind.

In one of the crowded streets of New York a beggar was in the habit of taking his stand every day and appealing to the charity of the passers-by. By means of a short string he held a dog, around the neck of which a card was fastened with the words, "I Am Blind." A very kind old gentleman, who had been in the habit of dropping a penny into the beggar's hat, passed rapidly one morning without doing so. Instantly the beggar rushed after him and asked for the penny to be given, as usual. The gentleman, turning in surprise, said:

"Why, I thought you were blind?"

"Oh, no, sir!" was the cool reply. "It is the dog that is blind, as the card says."

Why a Horse Rolls.

Horses are fond of rolling on the ground, and no animal more thoroughly shakes itself than they do. After a roll they give themselves a shake or two to remove anything adhering to the coat. The habit is of much service to horses living in open plains. On being turned loose at the end of a journey an Arab horse rolls in the sand, which acts as blotting paper, absorbing exudations from the body. A shake removes the sand, and the coat soon dries. Cavalrymen in hot climates sometimes put sand on their horses as the simplest and quickest way of drying them.—Selborne Magazine.

Untainted.

Tempted by an offer of considerably more than the property had cost him, Mr. Kreezus, who counted his wealth in millions, had parted with his suburban villa.

"You didn't need the money," said his disgusted business partner, who had just heard of the transaction, "yet for a little filthy lucre you sold that beautiful home."

"I didn't!" exclaimed the equally indignant Mr. Kreezus. "I sold it for clean cash!"—Youth's Companion.

Bell Tones.

The peculiar magic in the tones of a bell is due to its striking not a single note, but a chord, and to obtain the perfect octave entails an immense amount of calculation as well as skill. The bell caster, therefore, has to be not a mere mechanic, but a highly trained specialist.

Regular Turn.

"What? You're engaged to Mr. Brown? Then you won't marry Mr. Jones, after all!"

"No, not after all, but perhaps after Mr. Brown."—Milwaukee News.

NOT A GAME OF CHANCE.

The Jury Decided That Seven-up Was Purely Scientific.

One of Mark Twain's old time stories concerned the game of seven up, or old sledge. Some Kentucky boys were arrested for playing this game under the usual charge of playing a game of chance. When they were brought before the judge their lawyer claimed that this game was not a game of chance, but was a game of science. The court, puzzled, asked for a suggestion, and the lawyer declared that if a jury of six gamblers well acquainted with the game in a scientific way and six deacons be impaneled with a pack of cards their decision ought to be determinative. So the story goes:

"There was no disputing the fairness of the proposition. Four deacons and the two dominies were sworn in as the 'chance' jurymen, and six inveterate old seven-up professors were chosen to represent the 'science' side of the issue. They retired to the jury room.

"In about two hours Deacon Peters sent into court to borrow $3 from a friend. In about two hours more Dominie Miggles sent into court to borrow a 'stake' from a friend. During the next three or four hours the dominie and the other deacons sent into court for small loans.

"The rest of the story can be told briefly. About daylight the jury came in, and Deacon Job, the foreman, read the following verdict:

"'We, the jury in the case of the commonwealth of Kentucky versus John Wheeler et al., have carefully considered the points of the case and tested the merits of the several theories advanced and do hereby unanimously decide that the game commonly known as old sledge, or seven up, is eminently a game of science and not of chance. In demonstration whereof it is hereby and herein stated, iterated, reiterated, set forth and made manifest that during the entire night the 'chance' men never won a game or turned a jack, although both feats were common and frequent to the opposition, and furthermore in support of this our verdict we call attention to the significant fact that the 'chance' men are all broke and the 'science' men have got the money. It is the deliberate opinion of this jury that the 'chance' theory concerning seven-up is a pernicious doctrine and calculated to inflict untold suffering and pecuniary loss upon any community that takes stock in it.'"

SLEEPING SICKNESS.

The Grip This Dreadful Disease Takes Upon Its Victims.

The course of the dreadful disease, sleeping sickness, is an extremely slow one. The first stage is said to last a year or more, and the cause of the disease may be in the blood long before any symptoms whatever present themselves. The patient has occasional fever; indeed, a disease hitherto called Gambia fever has recently been recognized as the first stage of sleeping sickness. It is said that the swelling of the lymphatic glands of the neck is a characteristic early symptom. This was known in 1803 to Dr. Winterbottom, who states that slave traders, recognizing the symptom of a fatal disease, would not buy slaves who had this glandular enlargement. The patient feels well and strong and is able to go about his usual occupations.

The second stage is indicated by a distinct change in the appearance of the patient. His expression grows heavy and dull; he becomes apathetic, lies around a great deal and cannot exert himself. With the progress of the disease these symptoms become more marked; walking and speech become difficult and finally impossible. During the last week the sufferer lies in a state of complete coma, from which the illness derives its name. Often during the second stage of the disease the brain becomes affected, and some of the patients try to run away into the forests or swamps, where they die of exposure or starvation. To prevent this the relatives of a sufferer frequently chain him down until the time comes when he can no longer move.—McClure's Magazine.

Some Famous Men of Old.

The "nine worthies" were Joshua, David, Judas Maccabeus, Hector of Troy, Alexander the Great, Julius Caesar, King Arthur of Britain, Charlemagne of France and Godfrey of Bouillon. The list varies somewhat, but this is the most popular one. The "seven wise men of Greece" were Solon, Thales, Pittacus, Bias, Cleobolus, Myson and Chelon of Sparta. The supposition is, of course, that those were not the only wise men in Greece but the wisest.—New York American.

Waiting For Him.

"Yes, mum," said Poetic Pete as he twined an autmun leaf through his buttonhole. "I am a great lover of the romantic. I stopped at dis gate because I saw de sign 'Idlewood.'"

"You did?" approved the housewife. "Well, there is a lot of idle wood down at the wood pile. Just take this ax and split up half a cord."—Chicago News.

A Greater Attraction.

Herr Harden told of a meeting at Gastein between William I and Francis Joseph. The Austrian sovereign commented impatiently on the too pressing attentions of the crowd. "It won't last long," returned his ally soothingly. "Bismarck will be bored, pretty, and then no one will look at us." Loud in Spectator.

We may forgive those who love us. We cannot forgive those whom we love.—La Rochefoucauld.

FORGOT HIS ORGAN.

So Filkins Had a Little Talk With the Customs Inspector.

Filkins had just returned from a six months' tour of the continent, and his trunks and boxes were numerous. With considerable anxious care he had prepared his declaration, but when he saw the eagle eyed inspector plunge into his work a wave of fear spread over him. Could he by any possibility have forgotten anything? And if so and it was brought to light would he have to suffer the pain and humiliation of arrest? Rapidly he ran over in his mind the dutiable objects that he remembered having heard that others had brought in—clothing, objects of art, books, bric-a-brac, jewels, musical instruments—ah, his heart stood still—musical instruments—pianos, violins, flutes, organs—

With beating heart he approached the inspector.

"Is there any duty on organs?" he asked in a trembling voice.

"There is," said the inspector, fixing a cold, steely eye upon him.

"Then," said Filkins, "I desire to withdraw my declaration for a moment."

"What for?" demanded the inspector.

"I wish to amend it," said Filkins. "I've had my nose repaired and made over on the other side, and I'd hate to have that organ seized because I'd overlooked it."—Harper's Weekly.

A STARTLING BILL.

Five Thousand Reis For Two Meals In a Brazilian Hotel.

Hotels are few and ill conducted in the Brazilian coast towns, although an occasional good one is met with. Americans who patronize a Brazilian hotel or restaurant for the first time are generally treated to a surprise when the bill is presented. Two young sailors had dinner one day in Pernambuco, and, to their horror, the bill was 5,000 reis.

They nearly fainted and would have fled without attempting to settle; but, there being no chance of escape, they clubbed together all the money they had, about $12, and humbly offered it to the proprietor. Instead of having them thrown into jail, he laughed and explained that their bill in American coin was $2.50.

He furthermore explained that the basis of Brazilian currency is an imaginary coin called a reis, 1,000 of which make a milreis. Everything is counted in reis, and the figures have a very imposing sound—200 reis for a ride on a street car, 100 reis for having your boots blacked, a million reis for a house, and so on. It is a silly system, but the Brazilians seem to think it perfection.—Exchange.

Stopped the Stealing.

The Rev. Joseph Erskine of Edinburgh at one time in his life lost handkerchief after handkerchief. He found on investigation that it was on Sunday these losses occurred, and accordingly Mrs. Erskine sewed his handkerchief in the tail pocket of his coat.

"Noo," said she—"noo let us see what will happen."

Mr. Erskine, with the sewed in handkerchief, passed down the aisle of the church that morning, as usual, to ascend to the pulpit, but as he sailed by the amen corner he felt a gentle tug behind, a delicate nibble among his coattails. Thereupon he turned on the disappointed old woman in the corner and said, with a triumphant smile:

"No' the day, honest wuman; no' the day."

Window Leaves.

Six species of plants that possess window leaves have been discovered in South Africa. They are all stemless succulents, and the egg shaped leaves are imbedded in the ground, only the apices remaining visible. The visible part of the leaves is flat or convex on the surface and colorless, so that the light can penetrate it and reach the interior of the leaf below, which is green on the inside. With the exception of the blunt apex no part of the leaf is permeable to the light, being surrounded by the soil in which it is buried.

Broke 62,458 Bottles.

On the morning of April 18, 1906, the cellar of Paul Masson, a wine merchant of San Jose, Cal., contained a stock of 125,000 bottles, all neatly arranged. Then came the earthquake, and when the proprietor was able to enter his cellar again he found that 62,458 bottles, by actual count, were broken and the remainder thrown about in the wildest confusion. It is curious, with such a large number of bottles, that the quake should have come within a few dozen of demolishing an exact half of the stock.—Wide World Magazine.

A Better Trade.

"I understand young Briefless is about to marry the daughter of old Bonds, the millionaire?"

"Yes, so I am told."

"Will he give up the law business?"

"Yes. He will give up the law business and go into the son-in-law business."

Ingratitude is monstrous, and for the multitude to be ungrateful were to make a monster of the multitude.—Shakespeare.

THE DIVA'S RUBY

BY

F. MARION CRAWFORD

AUTHOR OF "SARACINESCA," "ARETHUSA" ETC. ETC.

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY F. MARION CRAWFORD

One thing more which concerns this tale happened on that same day. Two well-dressed men drove up to the door of a quiet and very respectable hotel in the West end; and they asked for their bill, and packed their belongings, which were sufficient though not numerous; and when they had paid what they owed and given the usual tips, they told the porter to call two hansoms, and each had his things put on one of them; and they nodded to each other and parted; and one hansom drove to Euston and the other to Charing Cross; and whether they ever met again, I do not know, and it does not matter; but in order to clear Baraka's character at once and to avoid a useless and perfectly transparent mystery, it is as well to say directly that it was the young man who drove to Euston, on his way to Liverpool and New York, who had Logotheti's ruby sewn up in his waistcoat pocket; and that the ruby really belonged to Margaret, since Logotheti had already given it to her, before he had brought it to Mr. Pinney to be cut and set. But the knowledge of what is here imparted to the reader, who has already guessed this much of the truth, would not help Baraka out of Brixton jail, where the poor girl found herself in very bad company indeed; even worse, perhaps, than that in which Spiro was obliged to spend his time.

CHAPTER VIII.

Margaret received her friend's letter and the account of Baraka's trial by the same post on the morning after she and Mr. Van Torp had been to hear "Parsifal" together, and she opened the two envelopes before reading her other letters, though after assuring herself that there was nothing from Logotheti.

She read the newspaper cutting first, supposing that it contained something flattering about herself, for she had been a little short of public admiration for nearly a fortnight. Baraka's case was reported with the rather brutal simplicity which characterizes such accounts in the English papers, and Logotheti's name appeared in Mr. Pinney's evidence. There had been the usual "laughter," duly noted by the stenographer, when the poor girl's smart man's clothes were produced before the magistrate by the policeman who had arrested her. The magistrate had made a few stern remarks when ordering the delinquents to prison, and had called

She Saw That She Was Quite White, and That Her Eyes Were Bloodshot.

Baraka "hardened" because she did not burst into tears. That was all, and there were barely five-and-twenty lines of small print.

But the prima donna bit her handsome lip and her eyes sparkled with anger, as she put the cutting back into the first envelope, and took the folded letter out of the other. The girl had not only stolen a ruby, but it was Margaret's ruby, her very own, the one Logotheti had given her for her engagement, and which she had insisted upon having set as a ring, though it would cover more than half the space between her knuckle and the joint of her third finger. Further, it had been stolen by the very girl from whom Logotheti had pretended that he had bought it, a fact which cast the high light of absurdity on his unlikely story. It was natural enough that she should have seen it, and should have known that he was taking it to Pinney's, and that she should have been able to prepare a little screw of paper with a bit of glass inside, to substitute for it. The improbabilities of such an explanation did not occur to Margaret, who saw only the glaring fact that the handsome Tartar girl had accompanied Logotheti between London and Paris, disguised as a man, and had ultimately robbed him, as he richly deserved. She had turned upon Van Torp, too, and had probably tried to sell him the very stone she had stolen from Logotheti, and the one she had made him take as a gift was nothing but a bit of glass, as he said it might be, for all he knew.

She devoured Lady Maud's letter in a few moments, and then read it twice again, which took so long that Mrs. Rushmore sent Justine to tell Potts to ask if Miss Donne did not mean to go out that morning, though the weather was so fine.

Great singers generally develop a capacity for flying into rages, even if they have not been born with hot tempers. It is very bad for the voice, but it seems to be a part of the life. Margaret was very angry, and Potts became as meek and mild as a little lamb when she saw the storm signals in her mistress' face. She delivered her message in a pathetic and oppressed tone, like a child reciting the collect for the day at a Sunday school.

The prima donna, imposing as a young lioness, walked slowly backwards and forwards between her window and the foot of the iron bedstead. There was an angry light in her eyes and instead of flushing, as her cheeks did for any ordinary fit of temper, they were as white as wax. Potts, who was a small woman, seemed to shrink and become visibly smaller as she stood waiting for an answer. Suddenly the lioness stood still and surveyed the poor little jackal that served her.

"Ask Mrs. Rushmore if she can wait half an hour," she said. "I'm very angry, Potts, and it's not your fault, so keep out of the way."

Margaret's wrath did not subside quickly, and as it could not spend itself on any immediate object, it made her feel as if she were in a raging fever. Her temples throbbed, her hands trembled and were as hot as fire, her lips were drawn and parched, and when she caught sight of herself in the looking-glass she saw that she was quite white and that her eyes were bloodshot.

But she was really a sensible English girl, although she was so very angry.

"This is ridiculous!" she said aloud, with emphasis. "I won't be so silly!" And she sat down to try and think quietly.

It was not so easy. A Tartar girl indeed! More probably a handsome Greek.

It was no wonder that they had succeeded in deceiving her for a while, the two orientals together! They had actually made Rufus Van Torp believe their story, which must have been a very different matter from lying to a credulous young woman who had let herself fall in love! But for her friend Lady Maud she would still be their victim. Her heart went out to the woman who had saved her from her fate, and with the thought came the impulse to send a message of gratitude; and the first fury of her anger subsided with the impulse to do so. By and by it would cool and harden to a lasting resentment that would not soften again.

Her hand still shook so that she could hardly hold the pen steady while she wrote the telegram.

"Unspeakably grateful. If can join me here will gladly wait for you. Must see you at once. Do come."

She felt better as she rose from the table, and when she looked at herself in the mirror she saw that her face had changed again and that her natural color was returning. She rang for Potts, remembering that the half-hour must be almost up.

"Potts," Margaret said, "I've been in a rage, but I'm only angry now. Do I look like a human being again?"

"Yes, ma'am," answered the maid, inspecting her gravely. "You are still a bit pale, ma'am, and your eye is a trifle wild, I may say. A motor veil, perhaps, if you are thinking of going out, ma'am."

"I haven't got such a thing, have I? I never motor now."

Potts smiled the smile of the very superior maid, and moved towards a perfectly new leather hat-box that stood in the corner.

"I always put in two for sea, ma'am," she said. "You wore one when we crossed the channel the last time, if you remember."

"Potts, you're a treasure!"

"Yes, ma'am," Potts answered vaguely in her meek voice, as she dived into one of the curious secret pockets of the hat-box. "That is, ma'am," she said, correcting herself, "I mean, it's very kind of you to say so."

Without further consulting Margaret, who had seated herself before the dressing-table, Potts proceeded to fasten a broad-brimmed black straw hat on the thick brown hair; she then spread an immense white veil over it, drew it under her mistress' chin and knotted it in a way that would have amazed a seaman.

When Margaret was putting on her gloves, Mrs. Rushmore herself came to the door, knocked and opened discreetly before there was any answer.

"My dear child," she asked, "what in the world is the matter? Nothing serious, I trust?"

"Oh, nothing," Margaret answered, going forward to meet her, and finding her natural voice. "I'm sorry if I've kept you waiting."

"It's so unlike you, my dear," Mrs. Rushmore said with emphasis, "and Potts looked quite grave when she brought me your message half an hour ago."

"You would have been more surprised if she had burst out laughing," Margaret said viciously.

"My dear," Mrs. Rushmore answered, "I'm astonished at you! I know something has happened. I know it. You are not yourself this morning."

This was a statement so evidently absurd that it could not be answered except by a flat contradiction, so Margaret said nothing, and went on working her hand into a perfectly new glove.

"I see that you have not even opened your letters," Mrs. Rushmore continued severely. "Except that," she added, noticing the loose sheets of Lady Maud's letter on the toilet-table.

Margaret gathered them up hastily, folded them into a crumpled package and thrust them into the empty envelope. For once, she had forgotten her caution, but she retrieved herself by pushing the thick letter into her long glove, much to Potts' distress, for it made an ugly lump. She made it worse by forcing in the second envelope, which contained the newspaper cutting.

"I'm ready now," she said.

Mrs. Rushmore turned and led the way with stately steps; she was always imposing, but when she was offended she was monumental. The two went out in silence, and walkly slowly down the straight, dull street side by side. Mrs. Rushmore spoke first, after they had gone some distance.

"I know," she said, "that something has happened. It was in that letter. You cannot deny it, Margaret. It was in the letter you folded in that hurried manner."

"The news was," answered the prima donna, still vicious, "that Logotheti has been arrested in Paris for stealing a very valuable ruby from the counter in Pinney's." Margaret explained. "The stone had just been taken there by Mons. Logotheti to be cut. The girl must have followed him without his knowing it, and watched her chance, though how old Pinney can have left such a thing lying on the counter where any one could take it is simply incomprehensible. That's what you heard in my voice when I said that men are credulous."

Mr. Van Torp thought he had heard even more in her accent when she had pronounced Logotheti's name. Besides, she generally called him "Logo," as all his friends did. The American said nothing for a moment, but he glanced repeatedly at the white veil, through which he saw her handsome features without their expression.

"Well," he said at last, almost to himself, for he hardly expected her to understand the language of his surprise, "that beats the band!"

"It really is rather odd, you know," responded Margaret, who understood perfectly. "If you think I've adorned the truth I'll give you the police court report. I have it in my glove. Lady Maud sent it to me with a letter." She added, after an instant's hesitation, "I'm not sure that I shall not give you that to read, too, for there's something about you in it, and she is your best friend, isn't she?"

"Out and out. I dare say you'd smile if I told you that I asked her to help me to get you to change your mind."

BORO HIGH BEATEN

Montclair High Finds North Plainfield Weak at the Bat.

SACRIFICE FLY IS COSTLY.

Timely Hitting By Montclair Clinches the Contest—The Score at End of Ninth 5 to 2.

Montclair High School's baseball team opened its season with a victory Saturday at Montclair, by defeating North Plainfield High School 5 to 3. The home team early in the game established a substantial lead of four runs. The visitors were rather weak at the bat.

It was not until the latter half of the third inning that any scoring was done. The timely hitting done by the Montclair nine at this period clinched the game. Hits by Reddall, and Ruffridge, coupled with an error, filled the bags. Captain Meyer came across with a timely single, scoring Cross from third. A two-base hit by Raymond netted two more runs, while Meyer romped home with the final tally on a sacrifice fly to left by Ayres. This little rally gave Montclair four runs.

In the next session one run was scored by the visitors. With men on second and third base. Cross let an easy ball pass, allowing Stine to score from third. Montclair in the fifth inning pushed home their fifth tally. After two were gone, Ayres drove the ball safely. Rittenhouse followed with another hit, sending Ayres to third. Ayres scored on an error at third base.

The final tally of the game came in the sixth inning when the Plainfields were at bat. Again an error at a critical moment gave the visitors a run. After there was one out and a man on third base Rittenrouse made a high throw to first base on an easy grounder. The score:

CITY HIGH WALLOPS THE ROSELLE HIGH

Plainfield High School boys had their eyes on the ball Saturday afternoon at Roselle, walloping out twelve safe hits and beating Roselle High by a score of 11 to 7 in the first scheduled game of the season. The game began in snappy fashion and for three innings no scoring was done.

In the fourth session the locals opened up on Strickland, the Roselle twirler, and before the inning ended had four tallies to their credit on hits by Davenport, Nash and Terry, aided by a base on balls and a couple of errors.

Manager Runyon saw the game from the side lines, encouraging his players and keeping tabs on the team's work. He will get in the game next Saturday.

GOV'T OF SCHOOLS

Superintendent Maxson States His Objections to Frelinghuysen Measure.

BILL WOULD END 'HOME RULE.'

Centralizes Power in State Commissioners of Schools Who Need Not Be Residents of New Jersey.

Presented by State Senator Frelinghuysen, of Somerset county, a proposed amendment to the State school law, claimed to be raidcal in its provisions, has been referred by the Senate to the committee on education. Abolishing the office of State superintendent, now held by C. J. Baxter, formerly of North Plainfield, the bill provides among other things that:

"The office of State Superintendent of Public Instruction is hereby abolished.

"A Commissioner of Education shall be appointed by the Governor for a term of five years, commencing July first, one thousand nine hundred and eleven and until his successor shall be appointed, at an annual salary of ten thousand dollars per annum, payable in equal monthly installments. Such commissioner shall be selected without regard to whether his place of residence is within or without the State of New Jersey."

There are many other radical changes proposed in the measure. When asked for his opinion on the bill today, Superintendent of City Schools H. M. Maxson said:

"The bill is objectionable on four points:

"First. It encroaches on the principle of home rule, taking from the local Board of Education much of their control of the schools and centering it in one man in Trenton.

Second. It gives too much power to one man, making him an autocrat with absolute power over the whole school system of the state, to determine the course of study, to decide all controversies, to establish rules and regulations, to appoint and remove county superintendents, to select the principals and teachers and other employees of normal schools and all other schools now under the State Board of Education, and many other duties not specified in the bill. (Section 6 is in the nature of a joker. We don't know how much it includes.)

Third. Putting so much power of appointment of superintendents, teachers, and employees in the hands of one man, appointed by the Governor, creates the opportunity of building up a most powerful political machine in the state school system which is now singularly free from politics.

Fourth. It provides that no pupil can be graduated from any grammar school in the state or admitted to any high school except as he passes an examination specified by this central authority in Trenton. The system of promoting solely on examination was outgrown by most schools twenty years ago, and it would be a misfortune to reinstate it in New Jersey and compel every school system to adopt it.

"The whole school system of the state is aroused and is urging its Senators to stand against the bill. Any one interested in preserving our state system as it is should write immediately to Senator E. R. Ackerman, at Trenton, urging him to use his influence against it."

SHILOH BAPTIST CHURCH COMPLETES 1st ANNIVERSARY.

The first anniversary of the pastorate of Rev. Dr. E. W. Roberts at the Shiloh Baptist church was concluded Sunday evening and was a great success. Dr. Roberts closed his first year successfully, financially and spirtually, and the new year is started with bright prospects. Sunday afternoon five persons were baptized and the hand of fellowship was given to ten others, while there are three more waiting for baptism.

Mrs. Roberts, wife of the pastor, was presented with a large bouquet of flowers by Deacon W. H. Burton; also the pastor was presented with flowers by A. S. Venable, trustee, and he also received a large purse of money from the church as an expression of appreciation for what he has done.

Brodhead, of this city, will be the candidate for the place on the Democratic ticket. Democrats declare that they are well pleased with his record in the Assembly.

PUNISHED FOR SELLING CIGARETTES TO BOYS

"Five dollars fine, or twenty days in the county jail," said Judge William G. DeMeza this morning in sentencing John Bacina, a storekeeper of West Third street, for selling tobacco and cigarettes to minors.

Complaints have been received from parents and school teachers of smoking by the boys of that part of town but it was hard to get evidence. This morning Harold Seals, of West Fourth street; Paul Berkman, of West Front street, and another boy told Judge DeMeza how they had bought tobacco and cigars, etc., for their respective fathers. As Bacina had been warned just as other dealers in town had been warned the court imposed the fine.

This is the first penalty imposed since the police got busy in stopping cigarette smoking among boys.

COURT REPRIMANDS NEGLECTFUL FATHER

Patrick Doyle, of West Third street, received a severe reprimand from Judge DeMeza this morning for allowing his eleven-year-old son Patrick to go to the parochial school in rags and tatters and dirty beyond description. Mr. Doyle will have to clean up what the authorities claim to be a filthy home and properly clothe the boy or serve a jail sentence at Elizabeth.

Testimony was given in court by the school authorities which showed a record of peculiarly distressing conditions surrounding the little fellow interested in the case; hence the Judge's severe attitude. The sisters of the parochial school had been compelled, for the safety of the other pupils in the class the boy attended, to send the boy out of school because of his filthy condition.

Doyle promised the court to have his house cleaned up before next Monday. In the meantime the health authorities will keep a close watch on him to see that the promise is fulfilled.

QUARTERLY REPORT OF THE CITY JUDGE

City Judge William G. DeMeza presented his quarterly report to the Common Council last night, showing that considerable business has been transacted in the city court since January 1. There were a total of 270 arrests, twenty-three prisoners were committed to the county jail; forty-five were fined; sentence was suspended on 166; bonds for non-support were furnished by one; leven cases were dismissed; four cases were not tried; fourteen were turned over to the probation officer and six were turned over to other departments.

There was a total of $322 vollected in fines. Of this $12.50 was paid to Chief Kiely, one?half of the fine in the Madden case; $10 to Sergeant John J. Flynn, one-half the fine in the Scruggs-Byman gambling case; $10 to Sergeant John J. Flynn, one-half the fine in the Clifford, illegal liquor selling case; $25 to Dr. W. H. Murray, of the Board of Health, one-half the fine in the case of Edward C. King, violation of plumbing ordinance, which goes to the city treasurer and $10 to Patrolman Frank Sweeny, one-half the fine in the case of Mary Yano, illegal liquor selling case. The amount turned over to the city treasurer after the percentage of fines were deducted was $254.

BORNMAN INDICTED FOR TWO OFFENSES.

John B. Bornman, trustee of the school funds of Warren township, was arraigned this morning before Judge Charles W. Parker, in Somerville and released under $3,000 bail after pleading not guilty. His trial was set for Monday, April 24.

Two charges, embezzlement and malfeasance in office, have been made against Bornman. Fred Dealaman, P. W. Mundy and Henry P. Williams, of Warren township, signed the bail bond.

From Police Blotter.

Frank Smalley, employed by a local coal dealer, accused of burning rubbish in the street near his home in the West End, was allowed to go after having pleaded guilty to the offense. He was ignorant of the ordinance against the practice.

BOGUS FOODSTUFF

Miss Lakey Tells Local Equal Suffragists How Foods are "Doctored."

MUCH "RYE" WHISKEY POISON.

Wiley's Work Injured by Board of Chemistry for Which She says Congress is Responsible.

The Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield at its annual meeing yesterday elected these officers for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Champlain L. Riley; first vice-president, Dr. Clara Krans; second vice-president, Mrs. Charles Ryder; third vice-president, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson; treasurer, Mrs. Samuel Huntington; recording secretary, Miss Zoe Bateman; corresponding secretary, Miss Mary E. Wells.

A resolution was introduced and caried in which a protest to the Common Council will be made against the use of fireworks on Independence Day. The rest of the session was devoted to hearing a lecture on "Pure Food," given by Miss Alice Lakey, of Cranford, secretary of the Pure Food Commission.

Miss Lakey declared that the pure food law had been betrayed by Congress by the establishment of the Board of Chemistry which has permitted the use of benzoate of soda, glucose and other drugs in the preparation of foodstuffs and she urged the community to see to it that the representatives in Congress are petitioned to plan legislation looking to the amendment of the present law.

Another thing which Miss Lakey drew attention of the women to was the illicit labeling of whiskey. "So many concoctions are on the market labeled "Rye" and other synonymous names which are nothing less than rank poison, although the pure whiskey itself is sometimes called. This she claimed also ought to have the immediate attention of the Government.

Speaking of Doctor Wiley, the Government food expert, Miss Lakey declared that his good work had been much weakened by the appointment of the chemistry board and that every person interested at all in pure food should refuse to buy foods labeled showing contents of package to contain any drug deleterious to the human system.

A vote of thanks was extended to the speaker at the conclusion of her address.

PLAN TO ORGANIZE A COLORED Y.M.C.A

Evidence of the fact that a Colored Men's Christian Association may become a fact was given today, when it was announced by G. H. Ganaway, president of the Lyceum, an organization of colored young men, declared that it was the intention of the Lyceum to make efforts to establish such an organization.

On Sunday afternoon, April 23, at 4:30 o'clock in Reform Hall, there will be held a song recital under the leadership of J. H. Bolling, with a choir of 36 voices. The choir will be assisted by the colored boys' orchestra led by Master Arthur Venerable, with Master Harold Grotis, as cornet soloist. The chorus singing promises to be above the ordinary and a number of solos will be sung.

The officers of the organization are G. H. P. Ganaway, president; Miss Stella V. Hill, secretary; W. G. Wright, treasurer, and Rev. F. G. Tildon, chaplain.

CRAP SHOOTER FINED $20 BY JUSTICE HUGHES.

Roach Sandford, of the borough, was arrested yesterday on a warrant issued by Justice Hughes, of Watchung, and was arraigned before him last night charged with being the man who "cut" the crap game on Mountain avenue Sunday. The three young men caught in the raid testified against him. Sandford admitted his guilt but said that it was the custom for the first man on hand to do the cutting and it fell to him Sunday.

Justice Hughes fined the defendant $20 and also gave him a sharp lecture, stating that heavier punishment would be administered in the future as it is the determination of the township authorities to break up crap shooting in its precincts.

NO. PLAINFIELD TWP. COMMITTEE MEETING

A large amount of miscellaneous business was transacted by the North Plainfield Township Improvement Society at its regular monthly meeting last night. President Anderson was in the chair and a large attendance of members was noted.

Mr. Anderson announced that the session marked the close of the society's first fiscal year. It had been his intention, he said, to make a detailed statement of all the finances, but in view of the fact that the accomplishments of the organization were so plainly evident he deemed it unnecessary. He appointed George Hughes a committee of one to select a nominating committee of three to report at the next meeting for the election of officers.

A communication was read from the women members of the society in which it was stated they had formed an auxiliary organization of their own. Meetings are to be held in the afternoon to discuss ways and means relative to township affairs. Mrs. C. C. Wheeler has been elected president and two committees, a visiting and entertainment, were appointed.

Dr. Richard Moldenke addressed the gathering to explain the plans of the "holding" committee, which took title to the society's property, formerly Texier's Mills, and its relation to the organization. Afterward he announced that bonds for the same were ready. A total of $200 worth was immediately subscribed for and more were promised. A communication was received from the Watchung Chemical Engine Company, challenging the society to a baseball game. It was accepted and a strong nine will be put in the field to try for the valley championship.

A committee was appointed to arrange for an amateur theatrical performance to be given in the near future for the joint benefit of the engine company and the society. The committee comprises the following: Mrs. C. C. Wheeler, chairman; Mrs. M. H. Cleaves, Mrs. M. P. E. Groszmann, Mrs. Cahoone and Miss Nora Coons.

John Mobus reported for the police committee and stated that good work was being done, the crap game raid of Sunday substantiating his remarks. In conclusion refreshments were served and dancing was enjoyed until a late hour.

Government Gets One Tract for $11,767.50 and Another for $18,232.50.

AT WATCHUNG AVE. AND 2D St.

Judge Vreeland Will Send Commissioners' Report to Judge Rellstab at Trenton for Approval.

William A. Woodruff, J. Fred McDonald and Frank H. Smith, commissioners appointed by Judge John Rellstab, of the United States District Court, in the matter of the petition of the Government to fix the compensation to be paid Charles E. Vail and others, trustees for the Religious Society of Friends for land on Watchung avenue, required for the proposed Federal building, met this morning in the office of Codington & Swackhamer and completed their report to be presented to Judge Rellstab. This is the last step in the proceedings on the part of the Government to acquire land on Watchung avenue for the new postoffice building.

The last parcel of land condemned by the commissioners comprised 62.76 feet on Watchung avenue, east of the Force land, and it cuts off several feet of Peterson's greenhouse. The commissioners fixed the compensation to be paid the Friends at $11,767.50, or 187.50 a foot. The Force tract, which was recently condemned through the same process, was acquired for $18,232.50, making the total cost of the 160 feet of land $30,000.

When the commissioners met this morning Judge Vreeland, of Morristown, was present as the representative of the Government to pass upon the report. The report will now be sent to Judge Rellstab for approval, and it is expected that a settlement will soon be effected with the interested property-owners.

MAYOR TO HAVE NO SAY ON CITY'S BILLS

For the purpose of preventing the "holding-up" of bills by Mayor G. W. V. Moy, the Common Council at its adjourned meeting, last night, adopted a resolution offered by Councilman Mygatt, which will enable that body to pay bills notwithstanding any objections of the Mayor. It will be remembered that Mr. Moy was recently quoted to the effect that his approval and singature were required on all bills to insure payment. At present Mr. Moy is holding out several bills which he declines to approve for various reasons previously announced.

Acting on the advice of Judge Gilbert Collins, of Jersey City, it is said, Mr. Mygatt presented the following resolution, which was adopted, all the members present, except Mr. Holt, voting in the affirmative:

"Resolved, That all bills against the city presented to the city clerk on or before the Thursday preceding a regular meeting of the Common Council shall, when found by him to be correct, be duly audited and presented to the Common Council at its next meeting."

After reading the above resolution, City Clerk J. T. MacMurray simply called attention to the fact that under the provisions of it the bills would not go to the Mayor first, whereas M. Mygatt informed Mr. MacMurray that the Council was not seeking instructions from the clerk and directing him to read the resolution as drafted, which he said explained itself.

Mr. MacMurray added that that was evidently the purpose of the resolution. The little "brush" between Mr. Mygatt and the clerk furnished a little excitement for the moment.

When Mayor Moy's attention was directed to the resolution, today, he said that no resolution could be passed which would be contrary to the provisions of the city charter, in other words, that act of the Council in this particular case was ultra vires, beyond the power of the Council.

Mr. Holt explained that he understood that the resolution was presented on the advice of Judge Collins, but he would like to hear the opinion read, otherwise he would vote against its adoption, which he did. No opinion was read on the subject.

GOES TO NORWAY TO BE APRIL BRIDE

The culmination of a romance which began when they were playmates in the village of Langnas, Norway, will occur when Miss Olga Lockert, who leaves here on Thursday, arrives in" the land of the midnight sun." When the steamship The United States docks in Europe, she will be joined by Peter F. Lockert, one of the substantial business men of Langnas. A few days later the sweethearts of childhood days will be made man and wife.

Miss Lockert came to this country twelve years ago. Since coming to Plainfield she has been successful in business and has made a host of friends, who will much regret her departure. The couple will live at Langnas after a honeymoon trip through Europe.

GROCER'S BOY HAS A NARROW ESCAPE

While riding through Park avenue toward West Fourth street yesterday afternoon, Samuel Mann, the eighteen-year-old son of B. Mann, a West Fourth street grocer, was knocked from his bicycle by a wagon of the Commercial Mills, driven by Henry Devine, and thrown directly under the feet of a passing horse driven by Walter Apgar. One wheel of Mr. Apgar's wagon passed over the boy and but for his quick action in pulling his horse onto its haunches the result of the accident might have been more serious.

Mr. Apgar held his horse while employes of the Martin garage lifted the wounded boy into the wagon. He was taken home and Dr. A. F. Van Horne summoned. The young fellow was found to be suffering from a bruised leg and a slight contusion on the head.

Mr. Apgar said last night that the action of the driver of the other wagon after the accident was most peculiar. He drove away without offering assistance in any way, so it was said.

UNDESIRABLE COUPLE BANISHED FROM TOWN

Arrested on a charge of being a professional beggar, Ralph Warrington alias Penrose and his alleged wife, Rose Snyder-Warrington, were banished from this city today by Judge DeMeza. The couple came here from Allentown, Pa., about ten days ago bringing with them a fourteen year-old lad whom the woman claimed as one of her four sons by a former husband. The boy has secured a temporary home and will later be sent to some institution in Pennsylvania.

According to the Charity organization Society which made an investigation of the couple, Warrington has a wife living in Allentown, while the woman who is with him acknowledges having three other husbands but she was married by a Mennonite minister, all her religious scruples about bigamy were removed. There are other features to the case which would hardly look well in print. The boy, whose name is Bernard Snyder, tells the police that his step-father, who is blind, was in the habit of begging from ten to twenty dollars a day and never got less than five dollars. The couple lived in good style and had considerable furniture of a good quality which they disposed of to a second-hand dealer. They resided at 430 East Third street until last night.

FALLS FROM BUILDING; IS TAKEN TO HOSPITAL.

While at work this morning on the Queen City Hotel, formerly the Iroquois, at the corner of Park avenue and Second street, George A. Buel, a mason, living at 327 Prescott place, fell a distance of fifteen feet to the ground sustaining contusions of the chest and back. At Muhlenberg hospital it was said this afternoon that his condition was not considered serious although he was suffering considerable pain.

The Liquor Record.

Harry Engle and John Hennessy, of the East end, charged with being helplessly drunk yesterday were arraigned before City Judge DeMeza this morning repentant. Hennessy promised to take the pledge for a year and Engle received a lecture Sentence was suspended in both cases.

APPOINTS LOVELL

Mayor Sends to Council for Confirmation Corporation Counsel Choice.

NELSON FRENCH FOR OVERSEER

Both Appointments Referred to Committees—City Father's Endorsement of Selections is Considered Doubtful.

Mayor G. W. V. Moy's appointments of Arthur Lovell for corporation counsel and Nelson W. French for overseer-of-the-poor were transmitted to the adjourned meeting of the Common Council last night for confirmation. The former appointment was referred to the finance committee and the latter to the alms committee. After a half-hour recess the Council reconvened, but no report was made on either appointment, in fact, not a word of explanation was made in open meeting concerning these appointments. It was the prevailing opinion, however, that neither appointment would be confirmed.

The question at once arose in the minds of some as to whether Mr. Lovell is qualified for the office. When Mayor Moy was questioned about the matter, he said that Mr. Lovell is qualified in every particular. Mr. French resides on West Fourth street and is a brother of C. Frank French, of Washington avenue.

The Mayor appointed W. H. Kitchen as poundkeeper, Fred Kiederling as dog-catcher and Mr. Pound's place on Everitt place as the pound, and all of these were approved by resolutions of the Council without any objections. Both Mr. Kitchen and Mr. Kiederling served in these respective positions last year.

Charles Wicht tendered his resignation as a patrolman, and it was accepted on motion of Chairman C. C. Randolph, of the police committee.

Mr. Mygatt reported back the petition of Elston M. French in a disputed tax matter, explaining that it had been returned by Mayor Moy without any specific objections and he offered a resolution providing that the matter be passed upon notwithstanding the Mayor's actions. It is understood that the Mayor declined to pass upon the matter because he did not favor certain provisions and he says his action puts it directly up to the Council to shoulder the responsibility. The Mayor asserts that he is in a position to veto the resolution.

After presenting a map and profile for the proposed action of establishing the grade on Columbia avenue, between Leland avenue and Frederick street, an ordinance being passed on two readings and ordered advertised and calling for a public hearing on May 1, Mr. Gloak offered an ordinance providing for the macadamizing of certain streets. This action was taken following the reading of an opinion from Judge Collins in which he said that the procedure would be legal.

The ordinance calls for an issue of $34,000 worth of street bonds, of $1,000 denomination each, bearing interest at 5 per cent. and to run for three years. The work is to be completed by October 31, 1911, and it is to be awarded to the lowest bidder. A public hearing will be granted on the ordinance on May 1. The streets to be macadamized are West Sixth and East Sixth streets, Webster place, Berekman street, Central street, Columbia avenue, Leland avenue, Essex street Irving place, Central avenue and East Seventh street.

A petition was received from residents of Spooner avenue and Randolph road asking for lights, and P. J. McDonough and others petitioned for a light on Randolph road and Rose street and another on Randolph road. Mr. McDonough's petition was granted on motion of Councilman Clay, chairman of the light committee.

On motion of Mr. Holt Council adjourned to meet again on Monday evening, April 24, at 8 o'clock.

William H. Spencer.

William H. Spencer, aged seventy years, died yesterday at his home in Mount Horeb after an illness of about a month. He was born at Mount Horeb and had always resided there. His wife died about ten years ago. Surviving him are three daughters and two sons. The funeral will be held at his late home tomorrow afternoon and burial will be in the Mount Horeb cemetery.

At the meeting of the Consistory of the Netherwood Reformed church last evening, a resolution was passed engaging Horace Martin as choirmaster for the coming year. Mr. Martin will secure a choir of boy singers who will wear vestments. Reports for the classis which meets next week, were prepared.

BASEBALL.

According to reports from the South the New York Giants will not be allowed to play exhibition games with any club in the Southern League. Rowdyism is said to be the cause.

"King" Brady expects to pitch winning ball for Jack Ryan this year. He believes that he has regained his old time form once more and promises to turn many an Eastern League hitter back from the plate once the pennant battle starts.

Tim Regan, who holds the title of "King of Rooters" in Springfield, jumped to Newark from his home Saturday to look over Manager Zeller's Ponies. Regan said that there was nothing to it but Springfield in the Connecticut League race this season.

Pitcher Jack Frill has curves enough to last fifteen years in the Eastern League, according to his own modest statement. After using his benders for that length of time, Jack said that he would turn his attention to the spit ball for about ten years and then be ready to advance to the big show.

"Iron Man" Joe McGinnity and his former centre fielder, Jake Gettman, of clean-up fame, who will wear the livery of the Skeeters the coming season, met in the lobby of the Continental Hotel, Newark, Sunday night. After shaking hands the pair had a short talk. McGinnity commented upon the fact that Gettman appeared to be in the pink of condition.

Ira Plank, of the Springfield club, is a brother of Eddie Plank, of the Athletics. Both are twirlers and the youngster hopes to make as good a record in the big show some day as his brother has. Ira has not seen his brother work in a game in six years. The last time the young fellow saw Eddie perform was in 1905, when he defeated the New York Americans and cinched the championship for the Mackmen. Ira said that Eddie would quit the game for good when his days of usefulness with the Athletics were over.

GOLF.

According to the schedule drafted by the Deal Golf and Country Club, nothing more pretentious than members' competitions will be attempted during the coming season. A start will be made May 20, and from that time until the end of September the contests will follow in rapid succession.

More than ordinary attention has been paid with a view to making the holiday events attractive, and there will also be a composite score cup open for competition throughout the entire season. On Memorial Day there will be a thirty-six hole medal play competition, selected eighteen holes to count. Three-quarters of the regular handicap will be allowed contestants in that event.

A flag contest is on the program for the Fourth of July. Each player will receive a flag bearing his name, which he must place at the point where his handicap, plus par of the course, has been exhausted. The par is 74. A thirty-six hole handicap is likewise on the schedule for the same day. On Labor Day the final rounds for the president's and vice-president's cups will be determined along with handicaps in classes A and B.

Although always a difficult course to score on because of its unusual length, the Deal circuit will be even more trying this season, for the reason that traps have been added at a number of points where there has been too much freedom. The eighth hole is now well guarded.

ELKS' LEAGUE.

Newark and New Brunswick Bowlers Make Clean Sweeps.

Two Elks' League bowling matches were rolled last night, the Newark team on its own alleys, taking three games from the Plainfields, while the New Brunswicks increased their lead by taking three games in a row from the Queensboro five on Greenewald's alleys in New Brunswick. The feature of the Newark match was the new high score mark of 267, made by George Blum. In New Brunswick the home team featured with a tally of 1018. The scores of both matches:

STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Dr. Edward P. Hart is ill at his home 98 Highland avenue, Jersey City. A cold contracted several nights ago quickly developed into pneumonia.

For the first time a negro has been elected as a delegate to the Central Labor Union, Trenton. He is R. L. Hogan, a delegate from the Team Drivers' Union.

Arthur Price, who was bitten by one of the mad hogs at Sewell, last November, was buried Sunday, his death resulting from the bite. Undertaker Shreve, of Glassboro, states that the dead man's blood was black and a rank poison. The dead farmer was thirty-one years of age and leaves a widow and two children.

His "reins" catching on the fender of a trolley car while he was playing horse Sunday with a companion, Edward Lee, a ten-year-old boy, of Liberty street, Trenton, was dragged about 200 feet before the motorman stopped the car. The boy received numerous bruises and lacerations only.

With stab wounds of the right arm, Henry Noverzenberger, twenty-two years old of Woodbury, was admitted to Cooper Hospital, in Camden, Sunday. He told the physician that while he was riding a horse along the Woodbury turnpike he became involved in a quarrel with a colored man over the right of way, when he was suddenly stabbed with a razor. His assailant escaped.

Unconscious from inhaling illuminating gas, Daniel Burns, thirty-three years old, of 412 Viola street, Camden, was taken to Cooper Hospital Sunday, and was reported out of danger last night. During a quarrel his wife called Policeman Orans, and after Burns was reprimanded by the policeman said: "I'll never give you any more trouble." An hour later Mrs. Burns found her husband unconscious on a bed. The gas was turned on and paper stuffed in the door cracks.

The body of Daniel Moore, an old and eccentric fisherman of Paulsboro, was found outside the door of his little cabin, near the river, late Sunday night, and rumors that he had been the victim of foul play spread with rapidity. The two men who had found the body said they had carried it inside the little cabin, where Moore had lived alone for years. Coroner Stout, who made a close investigation yesterday, decided that the old man had died of exposure, having probably laid out in the storm for hours. Word was sent to a son of the old fisherman, who lives in Binghampton, N. Y.

EASTER MOVEABLE FEAST IN CALENDER

Last year Easter fell on March 27. This year it comes on April 16. In 1905 it came on April 23 and in 1913 Easter will come March 23. What is the reason for this irregularity in the date of this feast of the Christian year? Easter is celebrated on the first Sunday after the first full moon after the Spring equinox, March 21. The months and their days are arranged in the calendar according to the solar year, and the full moon never comes on the same day of the month in two successive years. In 1910 the first full moon after March 21, came on March 25 and the second day after was Sunday, so Easter was March 27.

In 1911 the first full moon after Mar. 21 comes on Apr. 13, and Easter is celebrated on Apr. 16. The earliest date on which Easter can fall is March 22, and the latest April 25. For the reason of this arrangement we must go back to Jerusalem. Easter is the perpetuation of the Jewish Passover. Christ, the Paschal Lamb, was slain on the day when the Jews sacrificed a real lamb. The Roman Christians began by celebrating the feast of the resurrection on the 15th of Nisan of the Jewish calendar. But the Jewish calendar did not fit the Julian calendar which was in use in Rome; an attempt to make it fit resulted in a constant change in dates in the Julian calendar, and the simple plan of the date after the Spring equinox was the result of an attempt to escape the confusion.

STEVENS' MUSICAL CLUB ENTERTAINED

The big audience which gathered in the High School auditorium last evening received the Stevens Institute Musical clubs with an enthusiasm seldom seen and with reason. The boys gave an entertainment of the highest order and made hits in every department. Especially pleasing was the work of the quarter. They were compelled to respond to four encores and would have had to come out again only they wanted to give the other fellows a show.

The concert was given under the auspices of the High School Musical Club with a committee composed of Sidney Karr, Alfred Clark and Samuel Silbert.

Patrons and patronesses of the affair were: Judge William N. Runyon, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Gates, Judge and Mrs. William N Newcorn, Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Van Arsdale, Assistant Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., and Mrs. Hetfield, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Gavett, Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Weber.

MRS. ROSEBERRY DIES AFTER SHORT ILLNESS.

Mrs. Mary Ida Roseberry, widow of Peter Roseberry, died at her home on West Fourth street and Madison avenue at an early hour this morning. She had been ill for two months with an organic trouble and complications.

Mrs. Roseberry was fifty-three years old and was a native of Pottsville, Pa. She came to this city with her family from Phillipsburg. Mr. Roseberry died twelve years ago.

Mrs. Roseberry was a member of Hope chapel and a regular attendant until her health failed. She is survived by two daughters, the Misses' Edith and Helen Roseberry, and two sons, Claude and Melville Roseberry, all living here. There are also four brothers and three sisters in Pottsville. She was possessed of many estimable traits that endeared her to all and her many friends will regret to learn of her death.

The funeral will be held at her late home Friday at 12:30 and burial will be in the family plot at Phillipsburg.

Every lover of sacred music is invited to attend the special Lenten musical at the First Baptist church, Thursday evening, when the choir will sing Maunder's cantata, "Olivet to Calvary" and other selections. Mrs. Davies-Jones, harpist and Udo Gossweiler, 'cellist, will assist.

Y.W.C.A. BIBLE CLASS GATHERED FOR SUPPER

The Bible class of the Y. W. C. A., held its final supper for the season at the association rooms last night, the affair being in charge of Miss Margaret Leal, while Mrs. Frederic G. Mead presided. Miss Isabel Ashwell also assisted in the arrangements.

Following an excellent supper there was an informal program, which opened with a few remarks by Mrs. C. W. Tenant, on the advisability of continuing the Bible class suppers next season, in view of the success this season. All agreed it would be wise to continue the uppers. Miss Chadbourne, a Bible teacher also spoke briefly concerning the work, and Miss Elsie Goddard told an interesting "Frog Story."

A feature was the Southern dialect stories told by Mrs. G. H. Campbell, which received rounds of applause. Mrs. Charles Windham sang a solo and there was an interesting letter read from Miss Amy Tapping, the secretary, who is out of town. Miss Harlan, who is interested in the Northfield Conference for Young Women, also made a short address, telling of that work. Mrs. James R. Joy called the attention of the young women to the fact that the 300th anniversary of the translation of the King's James version of the Bible is being celebrated at this time. The program was concluded with another solo by Miss Goddard and greetings and good wishes for the future by Mrs. Percy H. Stewart.

FORMER PLAINFIELDER HONORED BY ARTIST

Eva Tanguay, who is considered vaudeville's foremost artist, has engaged Chris. Sorenson, Jr., formerly of this city, as her musical director for an indefinite period. He will also be special trombonist in several of her most difficult numbers, this instrument playing an important part in her act. Miss Tanguay is appearing in Chicago this week and is booked solid for a year's tour of all the principal cities of the country.

Mr. Sorenson's selection by the great artist is considered no small honor in the theatrical world. A large part of her act makes proper accompaniment an absolute necessity and she carries only expert musicians, she noticed the former Plainfielder work while he was playing in the orchestra at the Bronx theatre, New York. The trombone is his special instrument, the intricacies of which he was taught by Arthur Pryor, the great bandmaster, with whom he travelled for several years both as trombone soloist and manager.

FIXES MINOR'S HOURS OF WORK

Among a dozen bills approved by Governor Wilson Friday night was Senate 144, introduced by Mr. Osborne by request. The bill is designed to prevent the employment of any child under fourteen years of age in a mercantile establishment or the employment of any minor under sixteen for more than fifty-eight hours in a week, or between the hours of 7 o'clock in the evening and 7 o'clock in the morning. An exception to the latter provision is made as to one day each week, when a minor under sixteen may be allowed to work until 9 o'clock in the evening. An additional hour each night is also allowed during the Christmas shopping period, from December 15 to 25, inclusive. A penalty of $50 is fixed for each violation of the law.

Other bills signed by the Governor were as follows:

Senate 132, Mr. Osborne, authorizes municipalities to use for water supply and sewer purposes highways within their territory under the control of any county board of commission.

Senate 153, Mr. Osborne, requires the segregation of male and female prisoners in county jails and that female guards shall be placed in charge of female inmates.

House 49, Mr. McCran, reduces to seven the membership of boards' of chosen freeholders in counties having a population of between 100,000 and 300,000 inhabitants.

House 85, Mr. Taylor, appropriates $25,000 for an armory at Asbury Park.

House 134, Mr. Mather, imposes a penalty of $20 for the use of a silencer while hunting game or wild fowl.

House 206, Mr. Egan (by request) extends the free pass list of railroads to include parole agents of the penal institutions of the State.

House 349, Mr. Burke, provides for the erection of greenhouses for floriculture at the State Agricultural Experiment Station at New Brunswick.

House 365, Mr. Mathews, amends the State road act by limiting the contracts to be awarded in one year on the basis of ratables.

House 368, Mr. Hendrickson, makes it unlawful to take lobsters less than nine inches in length or while spawning.

House 392, Mr. Matthews, provides for the gratuitious licensing of exempt firemen to peddle and sell merchandise.

House 398, Mr. Richmond, authorizes any official empowered to issue a marriage license to designate a deputy to act during his absence.

COMMISSIONERS FOR KENSINGTON AVE. WORK

The Common Council at its adjourned meeting last night received a lengthy opinion, upon request, from Judge Gilbert Collins, of Jersey City, relative to the proposed extension of Kensington avenue, and according to it, the city has the right to proceed to appoint commissioners to assess benefits and damages and make the improvement.

Judge Collins states that according to the information furnished him the ordinance was passed in 1908, and remonstrances or objections by the required number of property owners abutting on the street were not filed within the prescribed twenty days, thereby losing their rights in the matter. In an interview last Saturday, a Councilman asserted that Judge Collins' opinion was exactly opposite to what it proves to be.

Mr. Gloak offered a resolution providing that inasmuch as the city cannot agree with the property-owners in the opening and extension of the street, Elliot T. Barrows, J. Fred MacDonald and W. A. Garrigues be appointed commissioners to assess benefits and damages, and fixing Monday evening, May 22, at 8 o'clock, as the time when the commissioners will treat with the affected property-owners. This resolution was adopted, all the members present except Mr. Holt voting in the affirmative. There was no further comments regarding the proposed improvement.

BRYAN'S HAND IN THE SENATE.

Washington, April 11.—United States Senator Thomas S. Martin, of Virginia, was elected chairman of the Democratic caucus of the Senate Friday. The chairmanship carries with it the minority leadership of that body. Mr. Martin got twenty-one votes, as against sixteen cast for Benjamin F. Shively, of Indiana. Three Senators were absent, Shively, of Indiana; Tillman, of South Carolina, and Terrill, of Georgia.

Senators Martine, of New Jersey, and O'Gorman, of New York, voted for Shively.

TALKS ON THE WORK AT "NORTHFIELD TEA"

Miss Marguerite Mead, assisted by several other young women who are interested in the Northfield League, gave what was called a "Northfield Tea," at Mrs. Mead's home, "Sunnyside," yesterday afternoon, and it was a great success being attended by nearly eighty-five young women and others. The tea was given chiefly to interest Plainfield young women in the Northfield Summer conference which is held each year for ten days beginning July 5. Last year a large number of young women from this city attended and more are expected this summer.

During the afternoon, Miss Bertha Harlan, secretary of the Northfield League, gave a delightful talk, explaining in detail just what the conference it. Miss Alice Jacobs, a Wellsley College graduate, who is also interested in the conference, told of it from the viewpoint of the young woman who attends and of the many attractions at Northfield. At the close of the informal talks there was a short time given for asking questions. A feature was a vocal solo by Miss Elizabeth Goddard. Miss Edith Smalley presided and introduced the speakers of the afternoon.

FOUR HUNDRED ENJOY LEON RICE'S RECITAL

More than 400 people listened to a song recital given by Leon Rice, of New York, in Y. M. C. A. Hall, last night, and without a doubt on the return engagement which will be on April 24 there will be a capacity audience.

The singer unfortunately was not in the best of voice owing to a recent attack of grip, in fact, he was confined to his bed when the time to leave New York and come here arrived, but notwithstanding this drawback his singing compelled admiration. Besides the program previously published, Mr. Rice was compelled to respond to repeated encores among them, "Don't Mind the Sorrows," "If I Were You," "The Elf Man" and "Sing Me to Sleep," the latter by special request. As no charge was made for admission a custom of Mr. Rice's, the silver offering was taken with substantial success.

Mr. Rice was accompanied on the piano by his wife, Mrs. Jennie Caesar Rice, with admirable facility and expression.

HERE AND THERE.

A skittish horse and what the people nearby called an incompetent driver were responsible for an accident which happened yesterday afternoon on East Second street and which cost Philip Jahn, a contractor of Scotch Plains, considerable money. All the skylights which Mr. Jahn had constructed for the Queen City hotel, formerly the Iroquois, were smashed and his horse severely injured. According to an eyewitness the driver of the wagon in which the skylights were loaded was driving into the yard beside the rear of the hotel which is undergoing alterations. At the curb stood an automobile and various piles of material. The horse became frightened and shied overturning the wagon emptying the vehicle of its load which fell to the street with a crash. The horse was unharnessed and was being led between the automobile and another rig driven by John Cose, who has the slating contract for the hotel roof and as it was passing toward the yard the second time it shied and its off hind leg was caught between the whiffletree and crossbar on Mr. Cose's wagon. The leg became wedged and the consequent frantic efforts to release itself caused an injury. Fortunately for all concerned Mr. Cose's horse is a gentle animal and seemed not to mind the fracas that was going on in its immediate rear, standing perfectly still. William Smith managed to release the caught animal's leg and it was led away limping.

WESTFIELD.

It looks now as if the long deferred Clark Township School would be a fact this summer. The acts of the Board of Education have been approved by the attorney-general and all matters concerning the last school meeting pronounced legal. The custodians of the State school funds have agreed to take the issue of district school bonds, $10,000, at par. They bear four and one-half per cent. interest.

In order to have supervision over all of the milk that is sold in Westfield the Board of Health will require all dealers to take out a permit. This will include the places where ice cream is sold. The ordinance requiring these licenses will be brought up before the next meeting of the board. The license fee proposed is $5 per year.

WRESTLING BOUTS

THE ART IN ANCIENT EGYPT.

Records Show That the Early Athletes Were Masters of Over Four Hundred Different Holds—Many of the Old Grips Are Used In the Modern Game.

The strenuous wrestling game is as old as the hills. In the days when men lived in caves, clothed themselves with fig leaves in summer and girded their loins and limbs with skins of fur in winter wrestling was part of their mode of fighting. That the change in the mode of life during the long circle of years to the present day has not injured the art, that it exists practically as it was in the dim, uncertain ages of the past, softened and mellowed perhaps in some of the rude essentials, is made manifest by the records which have stood all these years, mocking the attempts of Father Time to efface them.

In the temple tombs of Beni Hasan, located near the banks of the Nile, hewn in stone, wrestlers are depicted in various positions, exemplifying all the holds and falls that the modern exponents of wrestling now use in their bouts. In tombs Nos. 16 and 17 the figures of the wrestlers represent nearly 450 positions. It would seem from this that the Egyptians were masters of the art of wrestling and that the present day athlete scarcely deviates from the methods employed by men in this sport when the earth was young and Egypt was the head, legs and torso of civilization.

It was from the Egyptians that the Greeks obtained their knowledge of wrestling. The figures in the Beni Hasan tombs prove this. The Greeks were the greatest fighters of those days, and it was but natural that they adopted sports as a means to develop their physical condition; hence it was that at their games held at Olympia and elsewhere at stated intervals wrestling was part of the program. At these games the champions of the friendly nations met in rivalry. There was great glory attached to a victory. The successful competitor was treated like a hero. His return to his native land and his entry into his home city were made an occasion for a triumphant procession. He was the hero of the day, of the hour.

The Olympic games—their revival dates from 776 B. C.—were held every four years at Olympia, in Ellis. They were started as a religious festival in honor of Jupiter, but the games, like the play, soon became the thing, and the people lost sight of the solemnity and sanctity of the meetings and assembled there just to see the sport.

It was in the eighteenth Olympiad, 107 B. C., that the first record of wrestling was established. Eurabatos, a Spartan, was the victor. He carried off the prize, a crown of wild olive made from a tree which stood within the inclosure at Olympia.

It will be seen from this that wrestling is one of the oldest sports, pastimes, means of attack or defense, call it what you will, known in the history of man. From the dawn of literature there are records of wrestling bouts. To Homer we owe that glittering, glowing description of the encounter between Ajax and Ulysses. He immortalized Ajax, who was the incarnation of strength, the physical power in man, and Ulysses, the crafty, the champion of every art and wile. Homer before he was stricken blind witnessed many great wrestling bouts in the Greek cities. In his "Iliad" he graphically describes the wrestling bout between Ulysses and Ajax.

Nor is that all. In the convulsions of strife which followed among the fighting warriors, down through many chaotic changes out of which empires rose and fell along the path of time, in periods dull, creaking, rude and gross down to the present decade, wrestling was known, understood and played its part. That Shakespeare in his day realized its popularity and made use of it is evident in that scene between Orlando and the duke's wrestler in "As You Like It." Although the play was supposed to take place in France, the wrestling in this scene is a reproduction of that practiced in England at that time.

In the long time that wrestling has held sway there have been many styles—catch-as-catch-can, Greco-Roman, collar and elbow, recumbent and upright. Terminology of wrestling terms is meager. The names in many instances were purely local—as, for instance, Cumberland and Westmoreland, which in this country is called back wrestling. Collar and elbow wrestling originated in the counties of Cornwall and Devon, England, and still is practiced there.

The catch-as-catch-can and Greco-Roman styles are now the only ones used in championship matches. The former is all that its name implies. A wrestler may catch his adversary on any part of the body, neck, head or limbs. In the latter style the hold is restricted to that part of the body above the waist line.

THE DIVA'S RUBY

BY

F. MARION CRAWFORD

AUTHOR OF "SARACINESCA," "ARETHUSA" ETC., ETC.

ILLUSTRATIONS BY A. WEIL

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY F. MARION CRAWFORD

"No," Margaret answered, turning slowly to look at him. "She tells me so in this letter."

"Does she really?" Van Torp had guessed as much, and had wished to undermine the surprise he supposed that Margaret had in store for him. "That's just like her straightforward way of doing things. She told me frankly that she wouldn't lift a finger to influence you. However, it can't be helped, I suppose."

The conclusion of the speech seemed to be out of the logical sequence.

"She has done more than lift a finger now," Margaret said.

"Has she offended you?" Van Torp ventured to ask, for he did not understand the constant subtone of anger he heard in her voice. "I know she would not mean to do that."

"No. You don't understand. I've telegraphed to ask her to join us here."

Van Torp was really surprised now, and his face showed it.

"I wish we were somewhere alone," Margaret continued. "I mean, out of the way of Mrs. Rushmore. She knows nothing about all this, but she saw me cramming the letters into my glove, and I cannot possibly let her see me giving them to you."

"Oh, well, let me think," said the millionaire. "I guess I want to buy some photographs of Bayreuth and the 'Parsifal' characters in that shop, there on the right. Suppose you wait outside the door, so that Mrs. Rushmore can see you if she turns around. She'll understand that I'm inside. If you drop your parasol towards her you can get the letters out, can't you? Then as I come out you can just pass them to me behind the parasol, and we'll go on. How's that? It won't take one second, anyhow. You can make believe your glove's uncomfortable, and you're fitting it, if anybody you know comes out of the shop. Will that do? Here we are. Shall I go in?"

"I Took a Sort of Interest in That Tartar Girl."

"Yes. Don't be long! I'll cough when I'm ready."

The operation succeeded, and the more easily as Mrs. Rushmore went quietly on without turning her head, being absorbed and charmed by Kralinsky's conversation.

"You may as well read the newspaper cutting now," Margaret said when they had begun to walk again. "That cannot attract attention, even if she does look round, and it explains a good many things. It's in the thinner envelope, of course."

Van Torp fumbled in the pocket of his jacket, and brought out the slip of newspaper without the envelope, a precaution which Margaret noticed and approved.

She watched him intently while he read the printed report, but his face did not change in the least. At that short distance she could see every shade of his expression through the white veiling, though he could not see hers at all. He finished reading, folded the slip carefully, and put in into his pocket-book instead of returning it to the envelope.

"It does look queer," he said slowly. "Now let me ask you one thing, but don't answer me unless you like. It's not mere inquisitiveness on my part." As Margaret said nothing, though he waited a moment for her answer, he went on. "That ruby, now—I suppose it's to be cut for you, isn't it?"

"Yes. He gave it to me in Versailles, and I kept it some days. Then he asked me to let him have it to take to London when I came here."

"Just so. Thank you. One more question, if I may. That stone I gave you, I swear I don't know that it's not glass—anyhow, that stone, does it look at all like the one that was stolen?"

"Oh, no! It's quite another shape and size. Why do you ask? I don't quite see."

"What I mean is, if these people are around selling rubies, there may be two very much alike, that's all."

"Well, if there were? What of it?"

"Suppose—I'm only supposing, mind, that the girl really had another stone about her a good deal like the one that was stolen, and that somebody else was the thief. Queer things like that have happened before."

"Yes. But old Pinney is one of the first experts in the world, and he swore to the ruby."

"That's so," said Van Torp thoughtfully. "I forgot that."

"And if she had the other stone, she had stolen it from Mons. Logotheti, I have not the least doubt."

"I daresay," replied the millionaire. "I'm not her attorney. I'm not trying to defend her. I was only thinking."

"She was at his house in Paris," Margaret said, quite unable to keep her own counsel now. "It was when I was at Versailles."

"You don't say so! Are you sure of that?"

"He admitted it when I was talking to him through the telephone, and I heard her speaking to him in a language I did not understand."

"Did you really? Well, well!" Mr. Van Torp was beginning to be puzzled again. "Nice voice, hasn't she?"

"Yes. He tried to make me think he wasn't sure whether the creature was a boy or a girl."

"Maybe he wasn't sure himself," suggested the American, but the tone in which she had spoken the word "creature" had not escaped him.

He was really trying to put the case in a fair light, and was not at all maneuvering to ascertain her state of mind. That was clear enough now. How far she might go he could not tell, but what she had just said, coupled with the way in which she spoke of the man to whom she was engaged as "Mons. Logotheti," made it quite evident that she was profoundly incensed against him, and Van Torp became more than ever anxious not to do anything underhand.

"Look here," he said, "I'm going to tell you something. I took a sort of interest in that Tartar girl the only time I saw her. I don't know why. I dare say I was taken in by her—just ordinary 'taken in,' like a tenderfoot. I gave her that fellow's address in New York." He nodded towards Kralinsky. "When I found he was here, I wired Logotheti to tell her, since she's after him. I suppose I thought Logotheti would go right away and find her, and get more mixed up with her than ever. It was mean of me, wasn't it? That's why I've told you. You see, I didn't know anything about all this, and that makes it meaner still, doesn't it?"

Possibly if he had told her these facts 48 hours earlier she might have been annoyed, but at present they seemed to be rather in his favor. At all events he was frank, she thought. He declared war on his rival, and meant to fight according to the law of nations. Lady Maud would not be his friend if he were playing any double game, but she had stuck to him throughout his trouble in the spring, he had emerged victorious and reinstated in public opinion, and she had been right. Lady Maud knew him better than any one else, and she was a good woman, if there ever was one.

Yet he had accused himself of having acted "meanly." Margaret did not like the word, and threw up her head as a horse does when a beginner holds on by the curb.

"You need not make yourself out worse than you are," she answered.

"I want to start fair," said the millionaire, "and I'd rather your impression should improve than get worse. The only real trouble with Lucifer was he started too high up."

This singular statement was made with perfect gravity, and without the slightest humorous intention, but Margaret laughed for the first time that day, in spite of the storm that was still raging in the near distance of her thoughts.

"Why do you laugh?" asked Van Torp. "It's quite true. I don't want to start too high up in your estimation and then be turned down as unfit for the position at the end of the first week. Put me where I belong and I won't disappoint you. Say I was doing something that wasn't exactly low-down, considering the object, but that mightn't pass muster at an honor parade, anyhow. And then say that I've admitted the fact, if you like, and that the better I know you the less I want to do anything mean. It won't be hard for you to look at it in that light, will it? And it'll give me the position of starting from the line. Is that right?"

"Yes," Margaret answered, smiling. "Slang 'right' and English 'right!' You ask for a fair field and no favor, and you shall have it."

"I'll go straight," Van Torp answered.

"I suppose Lady Maud will come, won't she?" he asked suddenly, after a short silence.

"I hope so," Margaret said. "If not, she will meet me in Paris, for she offers to do that in her letter."

Sergeant Nathaniel Hort, who has served in his position for three years, was promoted to the office left vacant by the promotion of A. I. Littell. Sergeant Watson, U. S. An Easter Dance will be given by the Company next Monday night, which will be in honor of the women who assisted them during their last fair.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

It is a pleasure to announce the early appearance in this city of that very popular comedian John E. Henshaw, who comes to the Plainfield theatre, Saturday April 15, matinee and night, with a new and cheerful comedy entitled "Best People on Earth." Mr. Henshaw has the past several seasons been starred in the biggest musical comedies but this year he marks a departure and like George M. Cohan, Francis Wilson and other noted comic opera stars, has taken up a far more legitimate and higher form of entertainment, and so far more than made good. His company is unusually good, and the scenic equipment employed is new and elaborate. Mr. Henshaw's frequent appearance in all star casts of classic plays proves that "he belongs."

"The Great John Ganton," with all the original scenery, which ran 100 nights at the Lyric Theatre, New York. "His Last Dollar," with the race track scene, and cast of characters that will equal the original in the personnel of the company, will be presented by the Myrkle-Harder Company, positively the best popular priced attraction traveling today, and a high grade stock company at the Plainfield theatre Easter week. "Merely Mary Ann," "Capt. of Missouri;" a big scenic production of "Lena Rivers" and "Texas," a musical western play, will also be produced.

Mr. and Mrs. William McLeod, of West Fifth street, are entertaining relatives from Middletown, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Langhorne and daughter, of Ravine road, Netherwood, are planning a trip to Europe, during the summer months.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Muir, and family, of Essex street, removed yesterday to 302 Grant avenue, corner of Third street.

How to Be Sure of a Good Motor Car Bargain

Getting a good bargain when you buy an automobile is not just a question of price. It is a question of features—of what is in the car—the design, materials and workmanship.

If it is possible to get more for your money in one car than in another, you want to know it. Ability to pick out a car that will give you the most for your money, depends upon knowing the important points on which to judge and then comparing cars on the basis of these points. It is a question of having the right standards.
